From: Sherry Healy <sherry@healyloans.com>
Sent: Wednesday, December 23, 2009 12:44 AM
To: ATR-Agricultural Workshops <agriculturalworkshops@usdoj.gov>
Subject: Corporate Control of food Supply

See Food, Inc., and King Corn (on Netflix)

and you'll never look at corporate food the same again.

Though "corporate food" is a redundant term these days.

Can you believe that it is a felony to photograph food production in Colorado?

Can you believer that it is illegal to use your free speech rights to critique corporate manufactured foods?

Can you believe that if your neighbor's farm has Monsanto terminal seeds and those seeds blow on to your farm that you will be sued for patent infringement?

Can you believe the 90% of all soy beans are made of Monsanto's one-time use patented "Round Up" ready seeds and that they are so wanting to completely control the production of ALL soy beans that ala McCarthy era blacklisting and strong arm tactics that they are suing the few seed preservationists that are left standing?

SO many egregious things happening, but the news is all about Tiger Woods!

It's almost like the corporations are writing rules that make it impossible for peons to fight their monopolies.