MS-13 LEADER SENTENCED TO LIFE IN PRISON

MS-13 Racketeering Activity Included Five

Murders in Maryland and One in Virginia

GREENBELT, Md. — Omar Vasquez, 29, was sentenced to life in prison after being convicted at trial by a federal jury of conspiracy to participate in a racketeering enterprise involving murder, robbery, obstruction of justice and witness tampering, U.S. Attorney for the District of Maryland Rod J. Rosenstein and Assistant Attorney General Alice S. Fisher of the Criminal Division announced today.

Vasquez and co-defendants Jose Hipolito Cruz Diaz, 28, of Lanham, Md. and Henry Zelaya, 22, were convicted on April 27, 2007 after a seven week trial. According to trial testimony, the defendants were MS-13 leaders who conspired from at least 2001 to April 2006 to operate an MS-13 enterprise in Prince George's and Montgomery Counties. They operated through a pattern of racketeering activity which included five murders in Maryland and one in Virginia and the use of deadly weapons including firearms, baseball bats, machetes, bottles or knives. Also, the commission of numerous murders, attempted murders and assaults, assaults on an MS-13 gang member from El Salvador, juvenile females and rival gang members, kidnapping, robbery, obstruction of justice and witness tampering.

U.S. Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein said, "Omar Vasquez will spend the rest of his life in prison because of his participation in MS-13's criminal activities. The RICO statute allows us to prosecute gang members in federal court for the activities of the criminal organization they chose to join." Special Agent in Charge Gregory K. Gant of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) stated, "The successful prosecution and sentencing of Omar Vasquez demonstrates how our RAGE Task Force will not cease in our relentless pursuit to put violent gang members behind bars. We hope that with each passing year of Mr. Vasquez's sentence, he ponders his decision in becoming a violent member of the MS-13 gang, and how this decision has now earned him a membership card to federal prison.

Witnesses testified that Vasquez was sent from El Salvador to operate all the cliques in Maryland, Washington, D.C. and Northern Virginia. On January 21, 2005, Vasquez in collaboration with Diaz, who was the leader of the Sailors Locos Salvatruchos Westside (SLSW) clique in Washington, D.C., and other MS-13 members drove to an apartment building in Fairfax, Virginia to look for rival gang members. Two MS-13 members shot at the crowd of youths sitting outside the building, murdering one juvenile male and injuring two other juveniles.

Trial testimony showed that Zelaya, leader of the MS-13 Teclas Locos Salvatruchos (TLS) clique, murdered Noel Gudiel, a rival gang member, on April 20, 2003 in Langley Park, Maryland. Zelaya and other MS-13 members sexually assaulted two juvenile females at a "skipping party" on May 12, 2003. Zelaya and MS-13 member Walter Noel Barahona assaulted a rival gang member on October 21, 2003. While in prison, Zelaya wrote letters to the TLS clique and other MS-13 gang members in which he advised how the gang should operate while he was incarcerated. He incited the gang members to continue engaging in violent acts and discussed how the gang should handle the leadership of his clique while he was incarcerated, including instructing an MS-13 member to make contact with other MS-13 members in El Salvador. He advised Barahona that a victim of a prior act of violence had not yet identified Barahona as a perpetrator of the crime.

Henry Zelaya was sentenced to life in prison on July 30, 2007. Jose Hipolito Cruz was sentenced to 35 years in prison on August 13, 2007. Walter Noel Barahona, 22, of Hyattsville, Maryland pleaded guilty in April, 2007 to the racketeering conspiracy arising from his participation in a stabbing and assaults. U.S. District Judge Deborah K. Chasanow sentenced Barahona to 14 years in prison.

“This sentence shows that our community has the commitment to incarcerate hardened criminals. I applaud the efforts of our federal partners and look forward to eliminating the negative influence of MS-13 on our youth and on our community,” said Glenn F. Ivey, Prince George’s County State’s Attorney.

To date, this office has charged 47 gang members with various federal offenses, with 31 defendants charged in this Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) conspiracy case. Fifteen MS-13 gang members have been convicted thus far in this RICO conspiracy case. Edgar Alberto Ayala, 29, of Suitland, Maryland and Oscar Ramos Velasquez, 22, of Baltimore, were convicted at trial by a federal jury in November 2006 of the racketeering conspiracy. Velasquez was sentenced on July 23, 2007 to 37 years in prison and Ayala was sentenced to 35 years in prison on June 1, 2007. Ten defendants have pleaded guilty.

U.S. Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein said, “Omar Vasquez will spend the rest of his life in prison because of his participation in MS-13’s criminal activities. The RICO statute allows us to prosecute gang members in federal court for the activities of the criminal organization they chose to join.” Special Agent in Charge Gregory K. U.S. Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein praised the RAGE Task Force, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives; the Prince George’s County Police Department; the Federal Bureau of Investigation; U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement; the Montgomery County Department of Police; the Howard County Police Department; the Maryland National Capital Park Police; the Maryland State Police; and the Fairfax County, Virginia Police Department. Mr. Rosenstein thanked the Prince George’s County State’s Attorney Glenn F. Ivey, Montgomery County State’s Attorney John McCarthy, and Fairfax County, Virginia, Commonwealth’s Attorney Robert F. Horan, Jr., for the assistance that they and their offices provided.

Mr. Rosenstein commended Assistant U.S. Attorneys James Trusty and Chan Park, and Trial Attorney David Jaffe, a prosecutor for the Justice Department’s Gang Squad, who prosecuted the case.
