

SLATT—ANTI-TERRORISM TRAINING

OVERVIEW

The SLATT Program is dedicated to providing critical training and resources to our nation's law enforcement, who face the challenges presented by the terrorist/violent criminal extremist threat. An essential component of the training provided through the SLATT Program stresses the increased threat that terrorists/violent criminal extremists pose to officer safety, based on their ideological beliefs. To help confront this threat, the SLATT

Program provides specialized multiagency anti-terrorism detection, investigation, and interdiction training and related services to state, local, and tribal law enforcement and prosecution authorities.

The State and Local Anti-Terrorism Training (SLATT) Program is funded by the United States Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Assistance. The Program provides law enforcement personnel with specialized training and resources to combat terrorism and extremist criminal activity.

In conjunction with law enforcement agencies across the country, the SLATT Program:

- Provides on-site, customized pre-incident training to an audience of over 10,000 participants each year;
- Addresses specific needs of the requesting agency by offering comprehensive curricula;
- Addresses a wide array of topics from both domestic and international perspectives; and
- Utilizes nationally recognized terrorism experts to develop and deliver training.

Additionally, SLATT provides online training and officer resources to vetted law enforcement personnel. This Web site offers a quick and easy alternative to on-site training and resources by providing instant access to information regarding current terrorist and criminal extremist issues.
