NEWARK – Fifteen members and associates of the Bloods street gang were charged federally – 12 were rounded up in early morning arrests today – on drug-trafficking and weapons charges. Some of the defendants were trafficking in semi-automatic assault rifles and high-powered handguns and, in one case, a fully automatic machine gun, U.S. Attorney Christopher J. Christie, Essex County Prosecutor Paula A. Dow, the heads of federal law enforcement agencies and the Newark Police and Sheriff’s Department announced.

The charges and arrests were the result of a year-long investigation using three cooperating witnesses to make more than 20 purchases of crack cocaine, heroin and firearms from members and associates of the Nine Tre Bloods set in Newark.

The investigation and arrests are the work of the Essex-Federal Gang Suppression Partnership, formed in early 2006 by Dow and Christie to combine federal, state and local law enforcement resources and federal statutes with their enhanced penalties to target street gangs in Essex County.

One of the federally charged defendants was arrested last evening; 12 were picked up this morning, and another two are still being sought. The Essex County Prosecutor’s Office will be prosecuting at least three others on state charges.

The federally charged defendants in custody were all expected to make initial appearances at 2 p.m. before U.S. Magistrate Judge Madeline Cox Arleo.

Over the course of the investigation, at least 14 firearms, including handguns, assault rifles (including the machine gun) and one shotgun, were sold to the cooperating witnesses, as well as approximately 560 grams of crack cocaine and a smaller amount of heroin.

In one instance, for example, defendant Omar Curry, a high-ranking member or “5-star general” of the Nine Tre Bloods, arranged the sale of an SKS Chinese-made semi-automatic assault rifle to a cooperating witness for $1,200, according to one criminal Complaint. Curry also sold several other firearms and directed numerous sales of crack and heroin, according to the Complaint. Because of the number of weapons he sold, Curry is also charged with trafficking in firearms.

In another transaction, on June 7, Eric Hayes allegedly sold a fully automatic AK-47 assault rifle with an ammunition magazine with 21 rounds to one of the cooperating witnesses. Hayes also sold a Mossberg 12-gauge shotgun and a semi-automatic assault rifle to the cooperating witness.

Another defendant, Harry Quiah allegedly sold three firearms including a defaced .45 caliber handgun, an SKS assault rifle and .40-caliber Glock handgun, along with 99 grams of crack to cooperating witnesses.

Many of the defendants, including Omar, Hayes and Quiah, have prior felony convictions in state or federal court and, as such, are charged federally with being felons in possession of firearms, as well as other charges. Convictions under that statute alone carry a maximum federal prison sentence of 10 years. See the addendum below for a list of the defendants and a summary of their alleged activities and the charges against them.

The felon in possession charges have the added benefit of taking dangerous defendants off the street immediately. Prior convicted felons caught in possession of weapons are almost always denied bail and held pending disposition of their cases.

The investigation centered primarily around activity in and around two public housing complexes in Newark, the Fairview Homes and Steven Crane Village. Curry and others charged today, including Hayes, lived in those apartments. Meetings and sales often took place in the suspects' apartments or were directed from the apartments.

“Gang members have turned Newark neighborhoods into killing zones,” said Christie. “Imagine the carnage that a Bloods gang member could inflict with a fully automatic machine gun. This is what we are all up against and what we want to stop. We intend to arrest, prosecute and put these and other gang members and associates in federal prison for as long as we possibly can.”

“We in law enforcement view these violent street gangs as domestic terrorists – domestic terrorists who wreak havoc in our neighborhoods by instilling fear in ordinary citizens,” said Dow. “Today, simply put, we ganged up on a gang. Our message to gang members is this: We’re watching you intently, we’ll arrest you unexpectedly, and most of all – we’ll prosecute you extensively.”

“This successful investigation is evidence that working as a cohesive unit targeting this group we have been able to draw first blood against the Bloods,” said William G. McMahon, Special Agent in Charge of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, New York Field Office, said. “This is just the first step in reclaiming our neighborhoods so that our children can enjoy their freedom without fear of injury. The 14 guns purchased during ATF undercover operations are guns now in the hands of cops and not criminals and they will never be used again to cause harm.”

“We have applied federal resources to the pressure point of drug violence in Newark, and it will help stem the flow of blood on our streets,” said Gerard P. McAleer, Special Agent in Charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration, New Jersey Division.

Christie wished to thank and credit member agencies of the Essex-Federal Gang Suppression Partnership, their Special Agents, officers and detectives: the Essex County Prosecutor's Office, under the direction of Prosecutor Paula A. Dow; the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, under the direction of Special Agent in Charge William G. McMahon; the Drug Enforcement Administration, under the direction of Special Agent in Charge Gerard P.
