ALBUQUERQUE MAN SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS FOR DISTRIBUTING CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

ALBUQUERQUE – This morning a federal judge sentenced Adam Goodsell, 29, of Albuquerque, to a ten-year term of imprisonment to be followed by a lifetime of supervised release for distributing child pornography, announced U.S. Attorney Kenneth J. Gonzales. Goodsell also will be required to register as a sex offender after he completes his prison sentence.

Goodsell was indicted on December 15, 2010, and charged with (1) advertising child pornography, (2) distribution of child pornography, and (3) possession of child pornography. He was arrested on December 17, 2010, and has been in federal custody since that time.

Goodsell was charged as a result of an investigation by the New Mexico Attorney General's Office (N MAGO), the FBI and the Winnipeg Canadian Police. The investigation was initiated after a detective of the Winnipeg Canadian Police, who was acting in an undercover capacity, obtained access to Goodsell's account on a file-sharing program, and found 21 folders with 82,171 files of child pornography that were available for distribution to others. Goodsell distributed one of those child pornography images to the undercover detective on August 12, 2010.

On October 6, 2011, Goodsell entered a guilty plea to Count 2 of the indictment, charging him with distribution of child pornography under a plea agreement with the U.S. Attorney's Office. In his plea agreement, Goodsell acknowledged that, on August 20, 2010, the N MAGO and FBI executed a search warrant at his residence and seized his computers and computer-related media. He also admitted that, while the search warrant was being executed, he participated in a recorded interview during which he admitted having more than 1000 child pornography files "from babies on up" on his computers. Goodsell also admitted distributing child pornography.

According to the plea agreement, a forensic examination of Goodsell's computers and computer-related media uncovered thousands of image files and video files of child pornography. Goodsell acknowledged that the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children determined that the child pornography images found on his computers and computer-related media included 486 images of 34 children who have been identified as child pornography victims and have been rescued, and 22 videos of 15 children who have been identified as child pornography victims and have been rescued.

As required by the plea agreement, Counts 1 and 3 of the indictment were dismissed after Goodsell was sentenced.

The case was investigated by the NMAGO, the Albuquerque Division of the FBI and the Winnipeg Canadian Police with assistance from the District Attorney's Office for the Second Judicial District, and was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Charlyn E. Rees.

The case was brought as part of Project Safe Childhood, a nationwide initiative launched in May 2006 by the Department of Justice (DOJ) to combat the growing epidemic of child sexual exploitation and abuse. Led by United States Attorneys' Offices and DOJ's Criminal Division's Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section, Project Safe Childhood marshals federal, state and local resources to better locate, apprehend and prosecute individuals who exploit children via the Internet, as well as to identify and rescue victims. For more information about Project Safe Childhood, please visit www.projectsafechildhood.gov.

The case also was brought as part of the New Mexico Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force's (ICAC Task Force) mission to locate, track, and capture Internet child sexual predators and Internet child pornographers in New Mexico. There are 61 federal, state and local law enforcement agencies associated with the ICAC Task Force, which is funded by a grant administered by the NMAGO. Anyone with information relating to suspected child predators and suspected child abuse is encouraged to contact federal or local law enforcement.
