FORMER NATIONAL GUARDSMAN FROM LUBBOCK, TEX., SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS FOR FEDERAL CHILD SEXUAL EXPLOITATION CONVICTION

ALBUQUERQUE – This morning, a federal judge sentenced Jeffrey Neal Jackson to a ten-year term of imprisonment to be followed by ten years of supervised release for his child sexual exploitation conviction. Jackson will be required to register as a sex offender after he completes his prison sentence.

Jackson, 44, was a military recruiter employed by the National Guard and stationed in Lubbock, Tex., when he was arrested on child sexual exploitation charges on Nov. 28, 2011. He has been in federal custody since that time. On April 11, 2012, Jackson pled guilty to Count 1 of a two-count indictment charging him with coercion and enticement of a minor. Under the terms of Jackson's plea agreement, Count 2 of the indictment, charging Jackson with travel with intent to engage in illicit sexual conduct, will be dismissed.

According to the indictment, between Oct. 3, 2011 and Oct. 24, 2011, Jackson used a computer and cellular phone to entice an individual whom he believed to be under 18 years of age to engage in sexual activity. Jackson then traveled from Texas to Curry County, N.M., for the purpose of engaging in sexual activity with a person whom he believed to be a 15-year-old girl.

In entering his guilty plea, Jackson admitted responding to an ad on "craigslist.com" that read: "young/cute if age doesn't matter hit me up" on October 3, 2011, and began a three-week online relationship with a person he believed to be a 15-year-old girl but who was in fact an undercover officer with the Curry County Sheriff's Office. Jackson further admitted discussing sexual matters, including the sexual relations he wanted to have with the child, during his online communication with the undercover officer. Jackson also requested photos of the child, including nude photos, and sent photos of himself, including one in his military uniform and one of his exposed genitalia, to the undercover agent.

Jackson admitted that he agreed to meet with the child at a house in Curry County, N.M., on Oct. 25, 2011, and that he traveled from Texas to New Mexico to do so. Jackson was arrested when he arrived at the house and learned that the person with whom he was communicating was an undercover agent. At the time of his arrest, Jackson had condoms in his hand which he recently had purchased because he anticipated having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

U.S. Attorney Kenneth J. Gonzales said that the case against Jackson was the result of an investigation by the Curry County Sheriff's Department with assistance from the United States Army, the FBI, and the New Mexico Regional Computer Forensic Lab. The case was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorneys Charlyn E. Rees and Raul Torrez.

The case was brought as part of Project Safe Childhood, a nationwide initiative launched in May 2006 by the Department of Justice to combat the growing epidemic of child sexual exploitation and abuse. Led by U.S. Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section, Project Safe Childhood marshals federal, state and local resources to better locate, apprehend and prosecute individuals who exploit children via the Internet, as well as to identify and rescue victims. The case also was brought as part of the New Mexico Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force whose mission it is to locate, track, and capture Internet child sexual predators and Internet child pornographers in New Mexico. There are 61 federal, state and local law enforcement agencies associated with the Task Force, which is funded by a grant administered by the New Mexico Attorney General's Office. Anyone with information relating to suspected child predators and suspected child abuse is encouraged to contact federal or local law enforcement.
