

Appalachian School of Law Hosts United States Attorney Timothy J. Heaphy

Appalachian School of Law in Grundy, Virginia, hosted United States Attorney Timothy J. Heaphy for a full morning of classroom lectures and practical career advice for Southwest Virginia's future litigators.

Mr. Heaphy taught Professor Stewart Harris's First Amendment class, taped a radio show for the professor's "Weekly Constitutional" program in which he discussed judicial nominations and other current topics in the law, before finishing off the morning by teaching Constitutional Law and why the Constitution is important to law enforcement.

After classes, ASL Dean McHough generously provided a lunch for faculty, students and Mr. Heaphy.

United States Attorney Timothy Heaphy (left) was a guest lecturer at the Appalachian School of Law. While on campus, the US Attorney taught Professor Stewart Harris's (right) First Amendment class and taught Constitutional Law and why the Constitution is import to law enforcement.