THREE SAMSUNG EXECUTIVES AGREE TO PLEAD GUILTY, SERVE JAIL TIME FOR PARTICIPATING IN DRAM PRICE FIXING CONSPIRACY

Korean Executives Admit Their Roles in Global Cartel, Each Agree to Pay $250,000 Fine

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Three executives from Samsung Electronics Company Ltd., the world's largest manufacturer of a common computer component called dynamic random access memory (DRAM), have agreed to plead guilty and to serve jail time in the United States for participating in a global conspiracy to fix DRAM prices, the Department of Justice announced.

The Korean executives participated in the price-fixing conspiracy while they worked for Samsung, or its subsidiaries in the United States and Europe. The three pleading individuals and their agreed upon jail terms are as follows:

- Sun Woo Lee, Samsung's Senior Manager of DRAM Sales (8 months);
- Yeongho Kang, Associate Director, DRAM Marketing, for Samsung's subsidiary in the United States (7 months); and
- Young Woo Lee, Sales Director for Samsung's subsidiary in Germany (7 months).

Including today's charge, four companies and 12 individuals have been charged and fines totaling more than $731 million have resulted from the Department's DRAM investigation. It is the second largest amount of fines ever collected by the Department of Justice from a single price-fixing conspiracy.

"True deterrence occurs when guilty individuals serve jail terms, and not just when corporations pay criminal fines," said Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales. "These pleas should send a clear message that we will hold accountable all conspirators, whether domestic or foreign, that harm American consumers through their illegal conduct.”

Each executive also has agreed to pay a $250,000 fine and to cooperate in the Antitrust Division’s ongoing investigation of the DRAM industry. In agreeing to plead guilty, the executives have agreed not to contest the jurisdiction of the United States, so extradition will not be required. The pleas and sentences are subject to the approval of the U.S. District Court in San Francisco.

DRAM is the most commonly used semiconductor memory product, providing high-speed storage and retrieval of electronic information for a wide variety of computer, telecommunication and consumer electronic products. DRAM is used in personal computers, laptops, workstations, servers, printers, hard disk drives, personal digital assistants (PDAs), modems, mobile phones, telecommunication hubs and routers, digital cameras, video recorders and TVs, digital set top boxes, game consoles, and digital music players. There were approximately $7.7 billion in DRAM sales in the United States in 2004.

According to the one-count felony charge filed today in federal court in San Francisco, at various times during the period from April 1, 1999 to June 15, 2002, these three Samsung employees conspired with unnamed employees from other memory makers to fix the prices of DRAM sold to certain computer and server manufacturers in the United States, in violation of the Sherman Act. The conspiracy directly affected sales to U.S. computer makers Dell Inc., Hewlett-Packard Company, Compaq Computer Corporation, International Business Machines Corporation, Apple Computer Inc. and Gateway Inc.

The executives are charged with carrying out the price-fixing conspiracy by:

- Participating in meetings, conversations and communications with competitors to discuss the prices of DRAM to be sold to certain customers;
- Agreeing with their competitors to charge prices of DRAM at certain levels to be sold to certain customers;

- Issuing price quotations in accordance with the agreements reached; and
- Exchanging information on sales of DRAM to certain customers, for the purpose of monitoring and enforcing adherence to the agreed-upon prices.

“These are the first executives from Samsung to plead guilty to fixing prices in what is still an active investigation into antitrust violations in the DRAM industry,” said Thomas O. Barnett, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Department’s Antitrust Division. “We will continue our efforts to bring to justice other domestic and foreign-based executives who were involved with fixing DRAM prices.”

The Samsung executives are the third wave of individuals to agree to prison sentences in the DRAM investigation. On March 15, 2006, four Hynix Semiconductor Inc. executives--Dae Soo Kim, Chae Kyun Chung, Kun Chul Suh and Choon Yub Choi--pleaded guilty to the DRAM price-fixing conspiracy. The Hynix employees have been sentenced to serve jail terms ranging from five to eight months and to pay a $250,000 fine. In December 2004, four Infineon executives--T. Rudd Corwin, Peter Schaefer, Gunter Hefner and Heinrich Florian--pleaded guilty to the DRAM price-fixing conspiracy. The Infineon employees served jail terms ranging from four to six months and each paid a $250,000 fine.

Also, in December 2003, the Department charged Alfred Censullo, a Regional Sales Manager for Micron Technology, Inc., with obstruction of justice. Censullo pleaded guilty and admitted to having withheld and altered documents responsive to a grand jury subpoena served on Micron. Censullo was sentenced to serve six months of home detention.

Four companies have been charged with price-fixing in the DRAM investigation. Samsung, the world’s largest DRAM manufacturer, pleaded guilty to the price-fixing conspiracy and was sentenced to pay a $300 million criminal fine in November 2005. Hynix, the world’s second-largest DRAM manufacturer, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a $185 million criminal fine in May 2005. In January 2006, Japanese manufacturer Elpida Memory agreed to plead guilty and pay an $84 million fine. In October 2004, German manufacturer Infineon pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a $160 million criminal fine.

Today's charge is the result of an ongoing investigation being conducted by the Antitrust Division's San Francisco Office and the Federal Bureau of Investigation in San Francisco.
