NEWS RELEASE SUMMARY - November 7, 2011

United States Attorney Laura E. Duffy announced that Nicholas James Ferguson was sentenced today in federal court in San Diego by United States District Court Judge John A. Houston to serve 130 months in federal prison, followed by ten years of supervised release, based upon his conviction for receipt of child pornography, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2252(a)(2). Ferguson tendered his guilty plea on March 17, 2011.

According to the court records, Ferguson admitted that between March 22, 2010 and October 14, 2010, he knowingly received visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct. During the sentencing hearing, Judge Houston noted that Ferguson was previously convicted of a sex offense involving a nine-year-old. At the time of his arrest, Ferguson was a registered sex offender.

“This sentence sends a message that recidivist child sex offenders, including those who continue to sexually exploit children through child pornography, will not be tolerated in this community,” stated United States Attorney Duffy.
