In December 2009 and February 2010, law enforcement officers acting in an undercover capacity downloaded numerous child pornography images and videos via a peer-to-peer file sharing program operated by Wilson. Following those downloads, law enforcement obtained a warrant to search Wilson's apartment. When that warrant was executed on March 1, 2010, law enforcement discovered over 200,000 images and videos of child pornography on Wilson's computer and computer-related equipment.

Led by United States Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section (CEOS), Project Safe Childhood marshals federal, state and local resources to better locate, apprehend and prosecute individuals who exploit children via the Internet, as well as to identify and rescue victims. The specific sentence in each case to be imposed upon conviction will be determined by the judge after a consideration of federal sentencing statutes and the Federal Sentencing Guidelines.
