NEWS RELEASE

Today a grand jury Indictment<sup>1</sup> was unsealed charging Michael Moore with infringing copyrighted work related to broadcasts of hockey games, announced United States Attorney Zane David Memeger. The indictment alleges that Moore, during seven specific 6-month periods between May of 2006 and June of 2010, infringed the copyright of copyrighted works.

The indictment also alleges that WWW.HDHOCKEY.TV was a website which offered for sale DVDs containing recordings of copyrighted television broadcasts of hockey games, and other copyrighted works such as team and player profiles, from the National Hockey League and other professional hockey leagues. It also alleges that WWW.BROADSTREETBULLY.COM was a website offering for sale monthly subscriptions which enabled subscribers to download an unlimited number of video clips of copyrighted television broadcasts of hockey games, and other copyrighted works such as team and player profiles, from the NHL and other professional hockey leagues. The indictment alleges that neither site had the permission of the NHL or any other professional hockey league to reproduce or distribute these recordings.
