THE HART-SCOTT-RODINO ACT AND RULES

15. The HSR Act provides that, if the Act's commerce and size-of-person tests are met, no person shall acquire, directly or indirectly, any assets of any other person, unless both persons first file notification and report forms with the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice, and observe a waiting period, if "as a result of such acquisition, the acquiring person would hold . . . an aggregate total amount of . . . assets of the acquired person in excess of $15,000,000." 15 U.S.C. § 18a(a). The premerger notification rules, 16 C.F.R. Parts 800 et seq., define "hold" to mean "beneficial ownership, whether direct, or indirect through fiduciaries, agents, controlled entities or other means." Rule 801.1(c), 16 C.F.R. § 801.1(c).

16. Rule 801.13(b), 16 C.F.R. § 801.13(b), provides that all of the assets acquired from the acquired person "shall be assets held as a result of the acquisition" even if the assets are acquired in separate acquisitions as long as they occur within the 180-day period described in subparagraph (b)(2) of Rule 801.13.

17. Rule 801.90, 16 C.F.R. § 801.90, provides that "[a]ny transaction(s) or other device(s) entered into or employed for the purpose of avoiding the obligation to comply with the requirements of the [HSR] act shall be disregarded, and the obligation to comply shall be determined by applying the [HSR] act and these rules to the substance of the transaction."

DESCRIPTION OF THE TRANSACTION

18. On or shortly after July 31, 1987, defendant Honickman employed LIA, Melville, and Berriman as devices for the purpose of avoiding his obligation to comply with the requirements of the HSR Act in acquiring assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up that were valued at more than $15 million.

19. On or shortly after July 31, 1987, Brooklyn Seven-Up was sold to four entities: R.C. Acquisition Company, LIA, Melville, and Berriman.

20. R.C. Acquisition Company ("RCAC") acquired Brooklyn Seven-Up's franchises for RC Cola and other Royal Crown products for the New York Metropolitan Area. This acquisition occurred on or shortly after July 31, 1987, and was valued at $200,000. Honickman did not control RCAC and, for purposes of the HSR Act, he did not hold the assets involved in this transaction.

21. LIA, Melville, and Berriman acquired all of the assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up that were not acquired by RCAC.

THE LIA DEVICE

22. On or shortly after July 31, 1987, LIA acquired certain assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up for approximately $8.8 million. These assets included soft drink franchises, vehicles, vending machines, and other equipment. At the time of its formation, LIA was capitalized with $150,000.

23. BBAC, which was controlled by defendant Honickman, was the managing partner of LIA. As managing partner, BBAC had broad discretion to manage the partnership and the partnership's assets. According to the partnership agreement, the managing partner had "complete authority and discretion in the management and operation of the business and affairs of the partnership." The managing partner could be changed only through unanimous vote of the partnership. Thus, for Honickman to have been relieved of his power to manage the partnership, it would have been necessary for him to agree to his own removal. After the acquisition of assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up, LIA was to be converted to a limited partnership with all partners other than BBAC becoming limited partners.

24. All or virtually all of the consideration for the $8.8 million purchase of the Brooklyn Seven-Up assets by LIA was provided or guaranteed by Canada Dry New York, which is controlled by Honickman. No other partner put at risk any money beyond its contribution to the partnership at the time of its formation.

25. As the sole voting shareholder of BBAC, which was the managing partner of LIA, defendant Honickman managed the assets of LIA. Defendant Honickman intended to integrate Brooklyn Seven-Up assets acquired by LIA into the operations of Pepsi New York and Canada Dry New York, companies that he controlled, and operate these assets for the benefit of his soft drink operations.

THE MELVILLE DEVICE

26. On or shortly after July 31, 1987, Melville acquired certain assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up for approximately $4 million. These assets included a soft drink production facility located in Melville, New York. At the time of its formation, the Melville partnership was capitalized with $50,000.

27. Canada Dry New York, which was controlled by Honickman, provided the $4 million with which Melville acquired assets from Brooklyn Seven-Up. No other partner put at risk any money beyond his or her contribution to the partnership at the time of its formation.

28. As security for its loan, Canada Dry New York took back a mortgage on the property that Melville acquired from Brooklyn Seven-Up. The property was leased to LIA. As such, it was to be operated by defendant Honickman, as the sole voting shareholder of, the managing partner of LIA. The lease payments by LIA (a partnership managed by defendant Honickman) to Melville (a partnership also managed by defendant Honickman) were used to pay back the mortgage held by Canada Dry New York (a corporation controlled by defendant Honickman).

29. As managing partner of Melville, defendant Honickman managed the assets of Melville. Defendant Honiekman intended to integrate Brooklyn Seven-Up assets acquired by Melville into the operations of Pepsi New York and Canada Dry New York, companies that he controlled, and operate these assets for the benefit of his soft drink operations.

THE BERRIMAN DEVICE

30. On or shortly after July 31, 1987, Berriman acquired certain assets from Brooklyn Seven-Up for approximately $5 million. These assets included a distribution facility located in Brooklyn, New York.

31. The entire $5 million purchase price for the Brooklyn Seven-Up assets acquired by Berriman was borrowed from Continental Bank. In deciding to make the loan, Continental evaluated the creditworthiness of Honickman and his companies; Continental did not evaluate the creditworthiness of Korman or Berriman.

32. As security for its loan, Continental took back a mortgage on the acquired property. The property was leased to LIA (a partnership managed by defendant Honickman). Berriman assigned the rights under the lease to Continental. The lease included a put option allowing the lessor to require that the lessee buy the property for an amount specified in the lease. The rights assigned to Continental by Berriman included the right to exercise the put option. As a result, Continental had the right to require LIA to purchase the property.

33. Canada Dry Delaware Valley, which was controlled by defendant Honickman, guaranteed LIA's obligation to pay the rent pursuant to the lease and guaranteed LIA's obligation to acquire the property if the bank were to exercise the put option. As sole shareholder of the managing partner of LIA, defendant Honickman managed the property.

34. Defendant Honickman intended to integrate assets acquired from Brooklyn Seven-Up by Berriman into the operations of Pepsi New York and Canada Dry New York, companies that he controlled, and to operate these assets for the benefit of his soft drink operations.

SUBSEQUENT DEVELOPMENTS

35. On or about December 13, 1988, in an attempt to avoid antitrust litigation with the Commission over the legality of his acquisition of assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up, defendant Honickman sold his interest in LIA to LTF Brooklyn, Inc. The LIA partnership was dissolved.

36. On November 2, 1989, the Federal Trade Commission issued an administrative complaint against defendant Honickman charging that his 1987 acquisition of assets of Brooklyn Seven-Up resulted in a substantial lessening of competition in violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18, and Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45. On July 25, 1991, the Federal Trade Commission accepted a consent agreement with defendant Honickman and entered a decision and order settling the charges contained in the Commission's administrative complaint issued against him.

VIOLATION ALLEGED

37. Defendant Honickman employed LIA, Melville and Berriman as devices for the purpose of avoiding his obligation to comply with the requirements of the HSR Act within the meaning of Rule 801.90, 16 C.F.R. § 801.90.

38. Applying the Act and Rules to the substance of the transaction, as is required by Rule 801.90, 16 C.F.R. § 801.90, defendant Honickman acquired and held an aggregate total amount of Brooklyn Seven-Up assets in excess of $15 million on or shortly after July 31, 1987, because:

(a) Honickman held approximately $8.8 million worth of Brooklyn Seven-Up assets as a result of the acquisition by LIA described above;

(b) Honickman held approximately $4 million worth of Brooklyn Seven-Up assets as a result of the acquisition by Melville described above; and

(c) Honickman held approximately $5 million worth of Brooklyn Seven-Up assets as a result of the acquisition by Berriman described above.

39. The HSR Act and Rules required defendant Honickman to file premerger notification forms and observe the Act's waiting period before acquiring Brooklyn Seven-Up assets worth in the aggregate in excess of $15 million.

40. Defendant Honickman did not comply with the notification and waiting period requirements of the Act before the acquisitions described above were made.

41. Defendant Honickman was in continuous violation of the HSR Act each day during the period beginning on or shortly after July 31, 1987, and ending on or about December 13, 1988.

42. Section 7A(g)(1) of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18a(g)(1), provides that any person who fails to comply with the HSR Act shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each day during which such person is in violation of the HSR Act.

PRAYER

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays:

1. That the Court adjudge and decree that defendant's acquisition of more than $15 million of Brooklyn Seven-Up assets on or shortly after July 31, 1987, was in violation of the HSR Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18a, and that defendant was in violation of the HSR Act each day during the period beginning on or shortly after July 31, 1987, and ending on or about December 13, 1988;

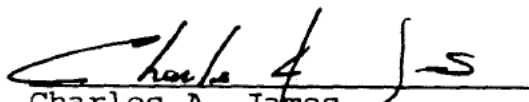

2. That defendant be ordered to pay to the United States Treasury an appropriate civil penalty provided by Section 7A(g) (1) of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 18a(g) (1);

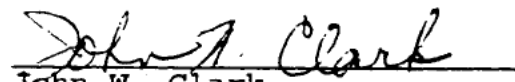

3. That plaintiff have such other and further relief as the Court shall deem just and proper; and

4. That the Court award plaintiff its costs of this suit.
