Dear sir or madam:

I respectfully AGREE with the DOJ Review. It is long overdue. There ARE many more ways that people can access their musical entertainment. This is very true.

The one thing that remains constant in the past and now the future is the fact that there is 24 hours in a day and seven days in the week that the new age listener has available for him or her for listening to the maximum.

With so much listener multiple choices available to him today and growing each year, traditional over-the-air domestic radio stations listenership, by the reason stated above, can and is going nowhere but down with the dilution of time listening it once enjoyed historically.

This Justice Department Review MUST include this fact, if it is to be fair to ASCAP, BMI... and domestic AM and FM terrestrial radio stations.

All radio stations deserve the same review to complete the record here and cause, because their listenership "slice of pie" becomes less and less now and in the future, should pay LESS in music royalties perhaps in a sliding scale with the passage of time. ASCAP and BMI already reap huge fees from American radio stations and will surely want to keep the money they receive from them. Maybe even more so, in the time going forward. However, with LIMITED hours in a day and days in a week a listener will likely be able to enjoy his or her music... one song at a time in a single means of medium delivery, using ANY of the modern means of delivery for their enjoyment and consumption.

Please carefully consider these Comments in this proceeding.

Respectfully,

Ms. S D Henderson
