

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff,

v.

WHITEHEAD BROTHERS COMPANY,
et al.,
Defendants.

1:20-mc-515

(Original Civil Action No. 17-GG)

THE UNITED STATES' MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO TERMINATE A LEGACY ANTITRUST JUDGMENT

Plaintiff, United States of America (“United States”), respectfully submits this memorandum of law in support of its motion to terminate the legacy antitrust judgment in the above-captioned case pursuant to Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The judgment was entered by this Court in 1942 and is 78 years old. The United States has concluded that because of its age and changed circumstances since its entry, the judgment no longer serves to protect competition. The United States gave the public notice and the opportunity to comment on its intent to seek termination of this judgment; it received no comments opposing termination.¹ For this and other reasons explained below, the United States requests that the judgment be terminated.

I. BACKGROUND

From 1890, when the antitrust laws were first enacted, until the late 1970s, the United States frequently sought entry of antitrust judgments whose terms never expired.² Such perpetual judgments were the norm until 1979, when the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice (“Antitrust Division”) adopted the practice of including a ten-year term limit in nearly all of its antitrust judgments. Perpetual judgments entered before the policy change, however, remain in effect indefinitely unless a court terminates them. Although a defendant may move a court to terminate a perpetual judgment, few defendants have done so. There are many possible reasons for this, including defendants may not have been willing to bear the costs and time resources to seek termination, defendants may have lost track of decades-old judgments, individual defendants may have passed away, or company defendants may have gone out of business. As a result, hundreds of these legacy judgments remain open on the dockets of courts around the country.

The Antitrust Division’s Judgment Termination Initiative seeks to review all of its outstanding perpetual antitrust judgments and, when appropriate, seek termination of legacy judgments. The Antitrust Division described the initiative in a statement published in the Federal Register.³ In addition, the Antitrust Division established a website to keep the public informed of its efforts to terminate perpetual judgments that no longer serve to protect competition.⁴ The United States believes that outstanding perpetual antitrust judgments presumptively should be terminated; nevertheless, the Antitrust Division is examining each judgment to ensure that it is suitable for termination. The Antitrust Division is giving the public notice of—and the opportunity to comment on—its intention to seek termination of perpetual judgments.

In brief, the process the United States is following to determine whether to move to terminate a perpetual antitrust judgment is as follows:

- The Antitrust Division reviews each perpetual judgment to determine whether it no longer serves to protect competition such that termination would be appropriate.
- If the Antitrust Division determines a judgment is suitable for termination, it posts the case name and the judgment on its public Judgment Termination Initiative website, <https://www.justice.gov/atr/JudgmentTermination>.
- The public is given the opportunity to comment on each proposed termination within thirty days of the date the case name and judgment are posted to the public website.
- Following review of any public comments received, the Antitrust Division determines whether the judgment still warrants termination; if so, the United States moves to terminate it.

The United States followed this process for the above-captioned judgment.⁵

The remainder of this motion is organized as follows: Section II describes the Court's jurisdiction to terminate the judgment and the applicable legal standards for terminating the judgment. Section III demonstrates that perpetual judgments rarely serve to protect competition and that those that are more than ten years old presumptively should be terminated. Section III

⁵ The United States followed this process to move almost 80 district courts to terminate legacy antitrust judgments. To date, all districts considering these matters, including the Southern District of New York, have terminated legacy judgments upon motion, and no court has denied a motion to terminate. See infra.

also discusses specific circumstances justifying termination. Exhibit A attaches a copy of the judgment that the United States seeks to terminate with this motion. A proposed order terminating the judgment also accompanies this motion.

II. APPLICABLE LEGAL STANDARDS FOR TERMINATING THE JUDGMENT

This Court has jurisdiction and authority to terminate the judgment. The judgment provides that the Court retains jurisdiction. In addition, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure grant the Court authority to terminate the judgment. According to Rule 60(b)(5) and 60(b)(6), “[o]n motion and just terms, the court may relieve a party . . . from a final judgment . . . (5) [when] applying it prospectively is no longer equitable; or (6) for any other reason that justifies relief.”⁶ Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5)–(6); accord Frew ex rel. Frew v. Hawkins, 540 U.S. 431, 441 (2004) (explaining that Rule 60(b)(5) “encompasses the traditional power of a court of equity to modify its decree in light of changed circumstances” and that “district courts should apply a ‘flexible standard’ to the modification of consent decrees when a significant change in facts or law warrants their amendment”) (citation omitted); see also United States v. Eastman Kodak Co., 63 F.3d 95, 101 (2d Cir. 1995) (“[T]he power of a court to modify or terminate a consent decree is, at bottom, guided by equitable considerations.”).

⁶ Although the Tunney Act governs the procedures for judicial approval of consent decrees filed by the Antitrust Division, by its terms, it is not applicable to consent decree termination proceedings. Nevertheless, the Second Circuit has held that the Tunney Act can provide “useful guidance” to the court with respect to decree terminations. See United States v. American Cyanamid Co., 719 F.2d 558, 565 n.7 (2d Cir. 1983). The Tunney Act does not require a court to conduct an evidentiary hearing, 15 U.S.C. § 16(e)(2). As described in this memorandum, in light of the 78 years that have passed since this Court entered this final judgment and the changed circumstances since its entry, the United States does not believe that it is necessary for this Court to make an extensive inquiry into the facts of this final judgment in order to terminate it under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5) or (b)(6).

Where, as here, the United States seeks to terminate an antitrust judgment, the court, exercising judicial supervision, should approve a decree termination when the United States has provided a reasonable explanation to support the conclusion that termination is consistent with the public interest. See United States v. International Business Machines Corp., 163 F.3d 737, 740 (2d Cir. 1998); United States v. Loew's, Inc., 783 F. Supp. 211, 213 (S.D.N.Y. 1992); United States v. Columbia Artists Mgmt., Inc., 662 F. Supp. 865, 869–70 (S.D.N.Y. 1987). See also United States v. Western Elec. Co., 900 F.2d 283, 307 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (a court should approve a termination “so long as the resulting array of rights and obligations is within the zone of settlements consonant with the public interest today”); United States v. Western Elec. Co., 993 F.2d 1572, 1576-77 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (under “deferential” public interest test, a court should accept a consensual termination of decree restrictions that the United States “reasonably regarded as advancing the public interest;” it is “not up to the court to reject an agreed-on change simply because the proposal diverge[s] from its view of the public interest;” rather, a court “may reject an uncontested termination only if it has exceptional confidence that adverse antitrust consequences will result.”).

The purposes behind the antitrust laws inform the meaning of the term “public interest.” Id. This Court’s “public interest determination must be based on the same analysis that [it] would use to evaluate the underlying violation” — whether the present marketplace “is such” that the antitrust violation alleged in the complaint would be unlikely to recur following the decree’s termination. IBM, 163 F.3d at 740.; see also United States v. American Cyanamid Co., 719 F.2d 558 (2d Cir. 1983). That evaluation necessarily is “forward-looking and probabilistic . . . focused on the likelihood of a potential future violation, rather than the mere possibility of a violation.” IBM, 163 F.3d at 742 (emphasis added). “[T]he Department of Justice has broad discretion in controlling government antitrust litigation”; thus, “[a]bsent a showing of corrupt failure of the government to discharge its duty, the Court, in making its public interest finding, should . . . carefully consider the explanations of the government. . . .” Loew’s, 783 F. Supp. at 214 (citation omitted); see also United States v. Paramount, Inc., et. al, 19 Misc. 544 (AT), 2020 WL 4573069 at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 7,2020) (same principle). “This Court may not substitute its opinion or views” for the government’s when “the government consents to the termination of a decree.” Loew’s, 783 F. Supp. at 214 (citation omitted).

In that regard, if the government reasonably explains why there is “no current need for” a decree, termination would serve “the public interest” Id. at 213–14 (quoting N. Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 4 (1958)). In Loew’s, for example, the Court reasoned that “in view of the changed environment in which the [40-year-old] Judgment now operates, there is no persuasive reason for maintaining the Judgment and subjecting Loews to restrictions that do not bind other” market participants. Id. at 215. Recently, the Paramount decision reiterated how changes in law and fact exhibit how termination is in the public interest: “Because changes in antitrust law and administration have diminished the importance of the Decrees’ restrictions, while still providing protections that will keep the probability of future violations low, the Court finds that termination of the Decrees is in the public interest.” United States v. Paramount, Inc., et. al, 19 Misc. 544 (AT), 2020 WL 4573069 at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 7, 2020).

Given its jurisdiction and its authority, the Court may terminate a judgment for any reason that justifies relief, including that the judgment is no longer in the public interest and no longer serves its original purpose of protecting competition. This result is consistent with other courts’ actions across the country when analyzing Judgment Termination Initiative motions.

Seventy-nine districts have terminated about 800 legacy judgments upon similar motion. The courts span all judicial districts and include other courts both within this District and within this Circuit. See, e.g., United States v. The Wool Institute, Inc., Case No. 1:20-mc-00029-LGS (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 29, 2020 (terminating one judgment)); United States v. Robert E. Miller, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:20-mc-00020-GHW (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 14, 2020) (terminating one judgment); United States v. A. Schrader's Son, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:19-mc-01438-PKC (E.D.N.Y. Jun. 24, 2019) (terminating 14 judgments); United States v. Alden Paper Co., et al., Case No. 1:19-mc-00015-DNH (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2019) (terminating five judgments); United States v. New Departure Manufacturing Co., et al., Case. No. 1:19-mc-00016-LJV (W.D.N.Y. Jun. 11, 2019) (terminating 12 judgments); United States v. County National Bank of Bennington, et al., Case No. 5:19-mc-00032-gwc (D. Vt. Mar. 21, 2019) (terminating one judgment).

In reviewing legacy judgments that have been the subject of the United States' motions to terminate, courts have found termination to be in the public interest for a variety of reasons, including the age of the judgment, defendant's corporate status, changed circumstances over time in markets, and lack of need due to the judgment duplicating prohibitions established under current antitrust laws. See, e.g., United States v. Paramount, Inc., et. al, 19 Misc. 544 (AT), 2020 WL 4573069 at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 7, 2020) ("Antitrust laws, and their faithful enforcement, weigh in favor of the Court's finding that there is a low likelihood of a potential future violation absent the Decrees."); United States v. Coal Dealers Association of California, et. al., Case No. 19-mc-80147-JST (N.D.CA. Jul. 19, 2019) (terminating 37 judgments because of their age, lack of need due to the judgments duplicating prohibitions under current antitrust laws, and changed circumstances. Specifically, the court noted, "Given that this motion seeks to terminate judgments entered between 120 and 32 years ago and that many of the affected entities no longer exist, the Court finds the government’s public comment initiative provided adequate notice under the circumstances” and that service was not necessary); United States v. Continental Grain Co., 1:70-CV-6733, 2019 WL 2323875 (E. D. Tex. May 30, 2019) (terminating judgment under FRCP 60(b)(5)); United States v. Kahn’s Bakery, Inc., et al., 3:75-cv-00106-RPM at *6 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 26, 2019) (terminating judgment because it “no longer serves to protect competition”); United States v. Virgin Islands Gift and Fashion Shop Ass’n, Inc., et al., 3:69-cv-00295-CVG-RM at *5 (D.V.I. Jun. 11, 2019) (terminating judgments, in part, because the prohibition on price fixing is duplicative of the antitrust laws and the representation by the United States that a corporate defendant no longer exists); United States v. Anheuser-Busch, et al., 1:60-cv-08906-KMM at *5 (S.D. Fla. Jul. 19, 2019) (terminating judgments, in part, because of the “changes in factual and legal landscape” since their entry). Exhibit B contains the orders specifically cited above. Termination of the final judgment in this case is warranted for similar reasons as in these cases.

III. ARGUMENT

This 78-year-old judgment no longer serves to protect competition, and it is in the public interest to terminate it. Under the provisions of the 1942 judgment in the above-captioned case, the defendants were enjoined from restricting or hindering the licensing of any person applying for a license and agreeing to pay the standard royalty for a patented product composed in part of bentonite; restricting the use of the patent in question (the “Hanley patent”); discriminating with respect to granting licenses; charging a standard royalty payment in excess of the royalty charged for the use of the Hanley patent; charging any licensee any fee, in connection with the license, other than the standard royalty payment; suing any producer of bentonite for contributory infringement; and auditing the books of any licensee.

It is appropriate to terminate this judgment because it no longer serves its original purpose of protecting competition. The United States believes that this perpetual judgment presumptively should be terminated because its age alone suggests it no longer protects competition. Other reasons, however, also weigh in favor termination, including that the Hanley patent has long expired, and the individual defendants likely are deceased or no longer active in relevant activities from the judgment. Under such circumstances, the Court may terminate the judgment pursuant to Rule 60(b)(5) or (b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

A. The Judgment Presumptively Should Be Terminated Because of Its Age

Permanent antitrust injunctions rarely serve to protect competition. The experience of the United States in enforcing the antitrust laws has shown that markets almost always evolve over time in response to competitive and technological changes. These changes may make the prohibitions of decades-old judgments either irrelevant to, or inconsistent with, competition. These considerations, among others, led the Antitrust Division in 1979 to establish its policy of generally including in each judgment a term automatically terminating the judgment after no more than ten years.⁷ This judgment—which is 78 years old—presumptively should be terminated for the reasons that led the Antitrust Division to adopt its 1979 policy of generally limiting judgments to a term of ten years.

B. The Judgment Is No Longer Needed to Protect Competition

In addition to age, other reasons weigh heavily in favor of terminating the judgment.

Based on its examination, the Antitrust Division has determined that the judgment should be terminated for the following reasons:

- All the patents relevant to this final judgment have long since expired. From 1861 until the United States enacted the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (“URRA”) which took effect on June 8, 1995, patent terms lasted 17 years from grant with no extensions. See Act of March 2, 1861, ch. 88, § 16, 12 Stat. 246, 249 (1861). The URRA changed the patent term from 17 years from the date of issue to the current 20 years from the earliest filing date. Pub. L. 103-465, 108 Stat. 4809, 4984. As already noted this final judgment was entered 78 years ago.
- The sole corporate defendant, Whitehead Brothers Company, now operates under the name Whibco, Inc. and is no longer involved in bentonite production, the product involved in this final judgment. Today, the company produces a wide variety of industrial sands and fine construction aggregates used in such things as grout, roofing shingles, and road and infrastructure construction. See Declaration of Barry L. Creech.
- Finally, in addition to the corporate defendant, there were two individuals named as defendants in this judgment. Given that the judgment is 78 years old, the individual defendants are likely deceased or no longer actively engaged in the relevant activities from the judgment.

Each of these reasons support the termination of this judgment.

C. There Has Been No Public Opposition to Termination

The United States has provided adequate notice to the public regarding its intent to seek termination of the judgment. On April 25, 2018, the Antitrust Division issued a press release announcing its efforts to review and terminate legacy antitrust judgments, and noting that it would begin its efforts by proposing to terminate judgments entered by the federal district courts in Washington, D.C., and Alexandria, Virginia.⁸ On June 7, 2019, the Antitrust Division listed the judgment in the above-captioned case on its public website, describing its intent to move to terminate the judgment.⁹ The notice identified the case, linked to the judgment, and invited public comment. In the above-captioned case, however, the Division received no comments concerning the judgment.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the United States believes termination of the judgment in the above-captioned case is appropriate, and respectfully requests that the Court enter an order terminating it.
