Re: Justice Department Review of the ASCAP and BMI Consent Decrees

To the Chief of the Litigation III Section:

Each of us is a songwriter and a member of ASCAP, an association that we are proud to be a part of and that we greatly value.

We write today in response to the Justice Department's request for public comments on the issue of whether ASCAP and BMI's consent decrees should require the PROs to license on a 100% basis, as opposed to fractionally licensing jointly-owned songs, which has been the historical industry practice. It's critical that our voices are heard, because a shift to 100% licensing would negatively impact our creative freedom, our ability to choose which PRO licenses our music and, ultimately, our livelihood as songwriters.

Songwriters are the ultimate small business owners. Many of us have families that depend on the income we receive from ASCAP. We have carefully chosen ASCAP as our PRO for multiple reasons: the trusted relationships we've developed there; the opportunities ASCAP provides for our music to be heard; the various training and networking opportunities ASCAP provides; and ultimately, the way ASCAP values our music and fights for writers to get fees that reflect the fair value of our work.

Like most modern songwriters, we often choose to collaborate with other writers. Just recently, every song in the Top 10 on Billboard's Pop, Country, Christian, and R&B/Hip-Hop charts was the result of collaboration. If the practice of 100% licensing is mandated by the Justice Department, our co-written works could be licensed – and we could be paid – by a PRO that represents our co-writers' interest in our songs. The licensing fee the other PRO charges might be lower than the one ASCAP has negotiated or fought for in rate court, and despite our chosen affiliation, we would have to accept the lower fee. Because ASCAP values music differently than other PROs, we also wouldn't be able to keep the benefits of ASCAP's specific valuation system.

As a result, having our work licensed by a different organization than the one each of us has chosen could dramatically affect our income. It could delay and potentially lower our royalty payments, which would now have to flow through two PROs. Somehow we would each have to monitor what we are being paid by a PRO we have no relationship with, figure out whether they have missed any of our performances, understand how and when they will pay us, determine whether we are getting our fair shares of bonuses under the other PRO's distribution system, and so on. For these reasons, it might no longer be financially viable for any of us to collaborate with a writer outside of ASCAP.

It also might not be creatively viable either. Successful songwriting means being able to work with songwriters of our choosing, regardless of their PRO affiliation. If the 100% licensing model were imposed on the PROs, in order to keep our work entirely within ASCAP, our PRO of choice, we would have to collaborate only with fellow ASCAP writers. All of a sudden, our individual and careful choice of collaborator would not be driven by artistic chemistry or compatibility, but by rules imposed by the government. The 100% licensing model allows the government to interfere with the creative process and effectively dictate our collaborators and our licensing representatives.

As we understand it, music users from radio to digital music services to local television have all traditionally paid the PROs according to their respective shares of the music. Similarly, ASCAP has only ever paid us for our shares of co-written songs. What the Justice Department is contemplating is in stark contrast with how the PROs have been conducting business for decades and would wreak havoc in the songwriting world.

We urge you to carefully consider your decision and take seriously the impact it will have not only on all songwriters across our nation, but also on our creative contributions to American culture and music lovers around the world. Without the freedom to collaborate and choose representation, the profession of songwriting is in jeopardy, as is the music that touches all of our lives.

Sincerely,

Hassan	Abdullah

Chief, Litigation III Section
Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
450 5th Street NW, Suite 4000
Washington, DC 20001

Re: Justice Department Review of the ASCAP and BMI Consent Decrees

To the Chief of the Litigation III Section:

Each of us is a music publisher and a member of ASCAP, an association that we are proud to be a part of and that we greatly value.*

We write today in response to the Justice Department's request for public comments on the issue of whether ASCAP and BMI's consent decrees should require the PROs to license on a 100% basis, as opposed to fractionally licensing jointly-owned songs, which has been the historical industry practice. It's critical that our voices are heard, because a shift to 100% licensing would negatively impact our creative freedom, our ability to choose which PRO licenses our music and, ultimately, our livelihood as songwriters.

Songwriters are the ultimate small business owners. Many of us have families that depend on the income we receive from ASCAP. We have carefully chosen ASCAP as our PRO for multiple reasons: the trusted relationships we've developed there; the opportunities ASCAP provides for our music to be heard; the various training and networking opportunities ASCAP provides; and ultimately, the way ASCAP values our music and fights for writers to get fees that reflect the fair value of our work.

Like most modern songwriters, we often choose to collaborate with other writers. Just recently, every song in the Top 10 on Billboard's Pop, Country, Christian, and R&B/Hip-Hop charts was the result of collaboration. If the practice of 100% licensing is mandated by the Justice Department, our co-written works could be licensed – and we could be paid – by a PRO that represents our co-writers' interest in our songs. The licensing fee the other PRO charges might be lower than the one ASCAP has negotiated or fought for in rate court, and despite our chosen affiliation, we would have to accept the lower fee. Because ASCAP values music differently than other PROs, we also wouldn't be able to keep the benefits of ASCAP's specific valuation system.

As a result, having our work licensed by a different organization than the one each of us has chosen could dramatically affect our income. It could delay and potentially lower our royalty payments, which would now have to flow through two PROs. Somehow we would each have to monitor what we are being paid by a PRO we have no relationship with, figure out whether they have missed any of our performances, understand how and when they will pay us, determine whether we are getting our fair shares of bonuses under the other PRO's distribution system, and so on. For these reasons, it might no longer be financially viable for any of us to collaborate with a writer outside of ASCAP.

It also might not be creatively viable either. Successful songwriting means being able to work with songwriters of our choosing, regardless of their PRO affiliation. If the 100% licensing model were imposed on the PROs, in order to keep our work entirely within ASCAP, our PRO of choice, we would have to collaborate only with fellow ASCAP writers. All of a sudden, our individual and careful choice of collaborator would not be driven by artistic chemistry or compatibility, but by rules imposed by the government. The 100% licensing model allows the government to interfere with the creative process and effectively dictate our collaborators and our licensing representatives.

As we understand it, music users from radio to digital music services to local television have all traditionally paid the PROs according to their respective shares of the music. Similarly, ASCAP has only ever paid us for our shares of co-written songs. What the Justice Department is contemplating is in stark contrast with how the PROs have been conducting business for decades and would wreak havoc in the songwriting world.

We urge you to carefully consider your decision and take seriously the impact it will have not only on all songwriters across our nation, but also on our creative contributions to American culture and music lovers around the world. Without the freedom to collaborate and choose representation, the profession of songwriting is in jeopardy, as is the music that touches all of our lives.

Sincerely,

* Many of us are also songwriters.
