AP: Garland asks court to unseal warrant for Mar-a-Lago search, Eric Tucker And Michael Balsamo, August 11, 2022, 4:38 PM

The Justice Department is asking a federal court to unseal the warrant the FBI used to search the Mar-a-Lago estate of former President Donald Trump, Attorney General Merrick Garland said Thursday, acknowledging extraordinary public interest in the case about classified records. The request is striking because such documents traditionally remain sealed during a pending investigation. But the Justice Department appeared to recognize that its silence since the search had created a vacuum for bitter verbal attacks by Trump and his allies, and that the public was entitled to the FBI's side about what prompted Monday's action at the former president's home. NYT: Garland Calls Trump's Bluff as Justice Department Moves to Unseal Warrant,

Charlie Savage, August 11, 2022, 10:00 PM

Attorney General Merrick B. Garland on Thursday called former President Donald J. Trump's bluff. Ever since the F.B.I. executed a search warrant at Mr. Trump's Florida residence on Monday, Mr. Trump and his supporters have been portraying the search as baseless and politically motivated. [Continue Reading]

NYT: Here are the main takeaways from Garland's statement on the Mar-a-Lago search, Glenn Thrush, August 11, 2022, 7:00 PM

All week, former President Donald J. Trump's allies pressed Attorney General Merrick B. Garland to explain the basis for the search warrant federal agents had executed at Mr. Trump's Mar-a-Lago residence — and he refused to break the silence he wears like his unwrinkled, federal blue suit. On Thursday, Mr. Garland finally responded, summoning the news media to a seventh-floor briefing room at the headquarters of the Justice Department to offer a public rationale. The new information he provided was extremely limited, and largely dependent on whether Mr. Trump's lawyers choose to block the release of the warrant and other documents sealed by a federal judge. WaPo: [OPINION] Garland has a political duty to explain the circus perpetrated at Mar-a-Lago, George F. Will, August 11, 2022, 6:39 PM

After his 2016 Supreme Court nomination, Merrick Garland, according to the New York Times, assured senators that he did not have "a political bone" in his body. That seems to be true, unfortunately. His current job as attorney general inescapably involves making judgments that are inherently political. They involve exercising discretion about when to wield government power, and for what ends. [Continue Reading]

WaPo: [OPINION] Merrick Garland's surprise announcement calls the Trump-GOP bluff, Paul Waldman and Greg Sargent, August 11, 2022, 6:12 PM Since Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort was searched by FBI agents, Republicans have relentlessly attacked the bureau, the Justice Department and Attorney General Merrick Garland for conducting a supposed political vendetta. Unfortunately, too often the press has allowed their baseless accusations to pollute this story, so a bizarre inversion of reality has been given nearly equal weight with known facts. [Continue Reading]

WaPo: [OPINION] Garland is no gambler. My bet is he's acting on more than a hunch, Michael Gerson, August 11, 2022, 2:56 PM

The FBI's search of Mar-a-Lago has created a logical tension at the center of American political life. An attorney general known for prudence and the restoration of norms has acted in bold and unprecedented fashion. If the FBI has been used as an instrument of political harassment — as some Republican leaders allege, without evidence — then former judge Merrick Garland has become Mr. Hyde. Or, in the typically restrained Republican translation, a Nazi. [Continue Reading] See also: Esquire, HuffPo, New Republic

ABC: Garland puts pressure back on Trump as GOP targets Justice: The Note, Rick Klein, Averi Harper, and Alisa Wiersema, August 12, 2022, 6:06 AM For those inclined to think Attorney General Merrick Garland is playing chess to counter former President Donald Trump's checkers, consider how much easier it is to win at checkers. Consider as well the extraordinary challenge Garland threw back to Trump – and not just with the decision his legal team now faces Friday about whether to stand in the way of public release of the search warrant and list of items seized at Mar-a-Lago on Monday. Fox: [OPINION] FBI weaponized by Biden Justice Department in campaign against Trump, Michael R. Pompeo, August 12, 2022, 5:00 AM

On Monday night, Federal Bureau of Investigation officials raided former President Donald Trump's residence at Mar-a-Lago after following through on a search warrant. In so doing, a federal government agency undertook the most severe and egregious action against a former president in the history of our country. This raid goes far beyond an alleged need to recover documents and return them to the National Archives. [Continue Reading]

Fox: Trump lawyer slams Merrick Garland's press conference on the FBI raid on Mara-Lago: 'Pathetic presser', Unattributed, August 12, 2022, 12:31 AM

Attorney for former President Donald Trump Christina Bobb reacted to Attorney General Merrick Garland's press conference on the FBI's raid of Trump's Mar-a-Lago home on "The Ingraham Angle." CHRISTINA BOBB: This is what the Democrats do. They don't have any good reason for doing what they did. The pathetic presser that Merrick Garland held for three minutes was insufficient, so they had to create fear. Normally, they should come out with exactly what happened, and why, and explain themselves and if it was a good reason.

they would have solid ground. They are not on solid ground. [Continue Reading]

Fox: [OPINION] Merrick Garland wouldn't recommend approval for AG search warrant for Unabomber's cabin: Former FBI official, Joshua Comins, August 11, 2022, 11:05 PM Former FBI deputy assistant director of counterterrorism Terry Turchie said Attorney General Merrick Garland wouldn't recommend approval for a search warrant for the Unabomber's cabin on Thursday's "Jesse Watters Primetime." "I've never said this publicly, but I'll just tell you right now because it just sickens me to watch and listen to Merrick Garland, because Merrick Garland was in charge of the prosecution at DOJ of the Unabomber," Turchie said. "And I have to tell you something: He would not recommend to the AG that our search warrant to get into Theodore Kaczynski's cabin be approved." [Continue Reading]

NBC: DOJ bets its future on how it handles the search of Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort, Ryan J. Reilly, August 11, 2022, 10:11 PM

In approving the unprecedented search of former President Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort, Justice Department leaders have bet the house on their handling of an investigation that will have sweeping implications for the future of both federal law enforcement and American democracy. Monday's hourslong search of Trump's Florida resort in connection with an investigation into classified documents that Trump is alleged to have kept on the property will reverberate in American politics for the foreseeable future. ABC: Congressional Republicans call Garland's remarks on Mar-a-Lago search insufficient, Tal Axelrod, August 11, 2022, 6:10 PM

Congressional Republicans were quick to pan Merrick Garland's Thursday remarks on the FBI search of Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago -- calling the attorney general's comments insufficient and insisting the Justice Department release more information behind the unprecedented raid even as Garland said he wants the search warrant unsealed. But GOP lawmakers said the Justice Department's motion to unseal parts of the warrant would not cut it, demanding that more information behind the search's genesis was needed given the gravity of the operation at a former president's home. [Continue Reading] See also: Fox

Politico: [OPINION] Why it took so long for Merrick Garland to go public, Myah Ward, August 11, 2022, 7:59 PM

Merrick Garland has broken his silence. In a five-minute afternoon presser, the attorney general revealed that he personally approved of the decision to execute the search warrant at Mar-a-Lago on Monday, and announced the Department of Justice's decision to unseal portions of the warrant. The move comes after three days of wall-to-wall media coverage and a massive outcry from Republicans who have demanded more information about the search and why it was necessary. [Continue Reading]

Newsday: [EDITORIAL] Garland's position makes plain sense, Editorial Board, August 11, 2022, 7:42 PM

U.S. Attorney General Merrick Garland's terse but strong statement on Thursday regarding the search of former President Donald Trump's estate in Florida brought a brief and timely glimpse of light to a muddled situation created by the former commander-in-chief himself. Yes, Garland approved the warrant for federal agents to search Mar-a-Lago. No, the former federal appeals court judge did not take this measure involving a former president lightly. And he made it clear that he won't abide by "unfounded attacks" on the FBI and Justice Department. [Continue Reading]

Politico: Merrick Garland calls Trump's bluff, Kyle Cheney and Meridith McGraw, August 11, 2022, 7:11 PM

Donald Trump and his allies spent days pounding the Justice Department for executing a search warrant at the former president's Mar-a-Lago estate, whipping supporters into a frenzy and exploiting DOJ's characteristic secrecy by telling their own versions of events. Some even developed a rallying cry as they attacked the department: Release the warrant! [Continue Reading]

Washington Times: Judicial group launches ads claiming Democrats endanger Supreme Court justices, Alex Swoyer, August 11, 2022, 10:00 AM

A conservative judicial group launched a $10 million ad campaign this week claiming that Democrats are endangering Supreme Court justices, and is targeting Attorney General Merrick Garland in its first ad. Judicial Crisis Network's first cable and digital ad will launch

Thursday in the Washington, D.C., market. It claims that Mr. Garland cowered to a "woke mob" by refusing to enforce federal laws against protesting in front of a justice's home as an attempt to obstruct justice. [Continue Reading]

Bloomberg: [OPINION] Bolton Plot Should Be a Warning on Iran Nuclear Talks, Bobby Ghosh, August 11, 2022, 8:27 PM

The Iranian regime has a long, dishonorable history of assassination plots against dissidents and detractors abroad, but commissioning a hit against a former US national security adviser represents a raising of the bar in brazenness. The revelation that a member of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps attempted to have John Bolton murdered — on American soil, at that — should serve as a sobering reminder for President Joe Biden of Tehran's depravity as he contemplates making a deal that will both enrich and embolden those behind the plot.

WSJ: Man Who Brandished Rifle at Cincinnati FBI Office Killed in Standoff, Ben Kesling and Sadie Gurman, August 11, 2022, 6:41 PM

A man armed with a rifle tried to break into the security screening area of the FBI's Cincinnati field office before fleeing the scene and being killed in a gunbattle with police, officials said. The man attempted to breach the screening area at the office Thursday morning, the Federal Bureau of Investigation said. His entry set off an alarm, and armed agents responded. He first fired a nail gun at law enforcement, then brandished an AR-15-style rifle before fleeing in a Ford Crown Victoria, according to law enforcement officials. He was reportedly wearing body armor. CNN: Detailed accusations of Secret Service impeding Jan 6 investigation were scrapped from report to Congress, Whitney Wild and Zachary Cohen, August 11, 2022, 7:00 PM

A memo detailing how federal investigators believed the Secret Service was impeding them from obtaining key information about the agency's response to January 6, 2021, was significantly altered to remove reference to nearly all those efforts before a final report was presented to lawmakers in June. The memo's original language contained detailed descriptions from the Department of Homeland Security Inspector General's office of the multiple ways the Secret Service stalled the watchdog's investigation into the agency's actions before and during the Capitol riot, including erasing text messages from that day.

AP: Trump calls for 'immediate' release of Mar-a-Lago warrant, Eric Tucker and Michael Balsamo, August 12, 2022, 12:20 AM

Former President Donald Trump called late Thursday for the "immediate" release of the federal warrant the FBI used to search his Florida estate, hours after the Justice Department had asked a court to unseal the warrant, with Attorney General Merrick Garland citing the "substantial public interest in this matter." In messages posted on his Truth Social platform, Trump wrote, "Not only will I not oppose the release of documents ... I am going a step further by ENCOURAGING the immediate release of those documents." He continued to assail the FBI search of Mar-a-Lago as "unAmerican, unwarranted and unnecessary."

WaPo: The status of key investigations involving Donald Trump, Matt Zapotosky, Matthew Brown, Shayna Jacobs, Devlin Barrett and Jacqueline Alemany, August 11, 2022, 5:00 PM

Donald Trump is facing historic legal and legislative scrutiny for a former president, under investigation by U.S. lawmakers, local district attorneys, a state attorney general and the Justice Department. Authorities are looking into Trump and his family business for a medley of possible wrongdoing, including his actions leading up to the Jan. 6, 2021, riot at the U.S. Capitol and how he valued his various assets for loan and tax purposes. The probes threaten Trump with criminal or financial penalties, or plain old public embarrassment, as he remains a dominant presence in his party and weighs a 2024 bid to return to the White House. Here's a list of the key investigations and where they stand. [Continue Reading]

A Las Vegas sports bettor was charged with 12 counts of wire fraud and one count of mail fraud for running what the U.S. Department of Justice called a Ponzi scheme that defrauded approximately 72 victims, including many in Northern Ohio, out of more than $8.5 million. Matthew J. Turnipseede, 49, allegedly promised investors in four of his companies double-digit returns, telling them that their money would generate profits through "sophisticated sports wagers" made with the help of an algorithm, the U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Ohio's office said in a release announcing the charges. AP: Monday hearing set for 2 ex-cops in George Floyd's killing, STEVE KARNOWSKI, August 11, 2022, 3:00 PM

A judge scheduled a hearing for Monday on the "status of plea negotiations" for the two remaining officers awaiting trial on state charges in the killing of George Floyd, with the hearing coming after the judge's window for accepting any deal appears to have closed. Hennepin County Judge Peter Cahill said in previous orders that he would not accept plea agreements unless they came within a 15-day window after former Officers Tou Thao and J. Alexander Kueng were sentenced in federal court on separate civil rights charges. Those sentences came down July 27. His orders did not specify business days or calendar days. [Continue Reading]

WSJ: Judge Declares Mistrial in Flint Water Crisis Civil Case, Tatal Ansari, August 11, 2022, 8:53 PM

A judge declared a mistrial Thursday after jurors were unable to reach a verdict in a case involving companies that had been hired to help Flint, Mich., fix its water system—but were alleged to have instead contributed to the city's lead-tainted water crisis. Multiple Flint residents had sued Veolia North America and Texas-based Lockwood, Andrews & Newnam Inc., an engineering consulting firm also known as LAN, accusing them of being partially responsible for the water crisis that began in 2014. The civil case, which involved just a few plaintiffs, was seen as a bellwether for possible further litigation, according to legal experts. Washington's drop-dead date for filing medical malpractice lawsuits likely bars a Navy spouse's suit against the federal government because it's substantive and doesn't conflict with federal law, the Ninth Circuit said Thursday. The Federal Tort Claims Act doesn't supplant Washington's statute of repose, which puts an outside limit of eight years, running from the date of the occurrence, on filing medical malpractice claims, the US Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit said. The limit applies even if a patient hasn't discovered an injury and its cause, the court said. [Continue Reading]

AP: Garland asks court to unseal warrant for Mar-a-Lago search, Eric Tucker And Michael Balsamo, August 11, 2022, 4:38 PM

The Justice Department is asking a federal court to unseal the warrant the FBI used to search the Mar-a-Lago estate of former President Donald Trump, Attorney General Merrick Garland said Thursday, acknowledging extraordinary public interest in the case about classified records. The request is striking because such documents traditionally remain sealed during a pending investigation. But the Justice Department appeared to recognize that its silence since the search had created a vacuum for bitter verbal attacks by Trump and his allies, and that the public was entitled to the FBI's side about what prompted Monday's action at the former president's home. NYT: Garland Calls Trump's Bluff as Justice Department Moves to Unseal Warrant, Charlie Savage,

August 11, 2022, 10:00 PM

Attorney General Merrick B. Garland on Thursday called former President Donald J. Trump's bluff. NYT: Here are the main takeaways from Garland's statement on the Mar-a-Lago search, Glenn Thrush, August 11, 2022, 7:00 PM

All week, former President Donald J. Trump's allies pressed Attorney General Merrick B. Garland to explain the basis for the search warrant federal agents had executed at Mr. Trump's Mar-a-Lago residence—and he refused to break the silence he wears like his unwrinkled, federal blue suit. On Thursday, Mr. Garland finally responded, summoning the news media to a seventh-floor briefing room at the headquarters of the Justice Department to offer a public rationale. The new information he provided was extremely limited, and largely dependent on whether Mr. Trump's lawyers choose to block the release of the warrant and other documents sealed by a federal judge. After his 2016 Supreme Court nomination, Merrick Garland, according to the New York Times, assured senators that he did not have "a political bone" in his body. That seems to be true, unfortunately. His current job as attorney general inescapably involves making judgments that are inherently political. They involve exercising discretion about when to wield government power, and for what ends. Since Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort was searched by FBI agents, Republicans have relentlessly attacked the bureau, the Justice Department and Attorney General Merrick Garland for conducting a supposed political vendetta. Unfortunately, too often the press has allowed their baseless accusations to pollute this story, so a bizarre inversion of reality has been given nearly equal weight with known facts.

The FBI's search of Mar-a-Lago has created a logical tension at the center of American political life. An attorney general known for prudence and the restoration of norms has acted in bold and unprecedented fashion. If the FBI has been used as an instrument of political harassment as some Republican leaders allege, without evidence then former judge Merrick Garland has become Mr. Hyde. ABC: Congressional Republicans call Garland's remarks on Mar-a-Lago search insufficient, Tal Axelrod, August 11, 2022, 6:10 PM

Congressional Republicans were quick to pan Merrick Garland's Thursday remarks on the FBI search of Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago -- calling the attorney general's comments insufficient and insisting the Justice Department release more information behind the unprecedented raid even as Garland said he wants the search warrant unsealed. But GOP lawmakers said the Justice Department's motion to unseal parts of the warrant would not cut it, demanding that more information behind the search's genesis was needed given the gravity of the operation at a former president's home. Politico: [OPINION] Why it took so long for Merrick Garland to go public, Myah Ward, August 11, 2022, 7:59 PM

Merrick Garland has broken his silence. In a five-minute afternoon presser, the attorney general revealed that he personally approved of the decision to execute the search warrant at Mar-a-Lago on Monday, and announced the Department of Justice's decision to unseal portions of the warrant. The move comes after three days of wall-to-wall media coverage and a massive outcry from Republicans who have demanded more information about the search and why it was necessary. [Continue Reading]

Newsday: [EDITORIAL] Garland's position makes plain sense, Editorial Board, August 11, 2022, 7:42 PM

U.S. Attorney General Merrick Garland's terse but strong statement on Thursday regarding the search of former President Donald Trump's estate in Florida brought a brief and timely glimpse of light to a muddled situation created by the former commander-in-chief himself. Yes, Garland approved the warrant for federal agents to search Mar-a-Lago. No, the former federal appeals court judge did not take this measure involving a former president lightly. And he made it clear that he won't abide by "unfounded attacks" on the FBI and Justice Department. [Continue Reading]

Politico: Merrick Garland calls Trump's bluff, Kyle Cheney and Meridith McGraw, August 11, 2022, 7:11 PM

Donald Trump and his allies spent days pounding the Justice Department for executing a search warrant at the former president's Mar-a-Lago estate, whipping supporters into a frenzy and exploiting DOJ's characteristic secrecy by telling their own versions of events. Some even developed a rallying cry as they attacked the department: Release the warrant! [Continue Reading]

Washington Times: Judicial group launches ads claiming Democrats endanger Supreme Court justices, Alex Swoyer, August 11, 2022, 10:00 AM

A conservative judicial group launched a $10 million ad campaign this week claiming that Democrats are endangering Supreme Court justices, and is targeting Attorney General Merrick Garland in its first ad. Judicial Crisis Network's first cable and digital ad will launch Thursday in the Washington, D.C., market. It claims that Mr. Garland cowered to a "woke mob" by refusing to enforce federal laws against protesting in front of a justice's home as an attempt to obstruct justice. [Continue Reading]

Bloomberg: [OPINION] Bolton Plot Should Be a Warning on Iran Nuclear Talks, Bobby Ghosh, August 11, 2022, 8:27 PM

The Iranian regime has a long, dishonorable history of assassination plots against dissidents and detractors abroad, but commissioning a hit against a former US national security adviser represents a raising of the bar in brazenness. The revelation that a member of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps attempted to have John Bolton murdered on American soil, at that should serve as a sobering reminder for President Joe Biden of Tehran's depravity as he contemplates making a deal that will both enrich and embolden those behind the plot. Bloomberg Law: Federal Medical Injury Lawsuit Jeopardized by Washington Law, Mary Anne Pazanowski, August 11, 2022, 2:57 PM

Washington's drop-dead date for filing medical malpractice lawsuits likely bars a Navy spouse's suit against the federal government because it's substantive and doesn't conflict with federal law, the Ninth Circuit said Thursday. The Federal Tort Claims Act doesn't supplant Washington's statute of repose, which puts an outside limit of eight years, running from the date of the occurrence, on filing medical malpractice claims, the US Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit said. The limit applies even if a patient hasn't discovered an injury and its cause, the court said. [Continue Reading]

"Dobbs is the product of originalism," Reva Siegel, professor of law at Yale University, said last month. Few legal scholars would disagree. But for Siegel, the more interesting question is what originalism means in practice—and how it led to the elimination of the constitutional right to obtain an abortion. Siegel explored those issues during the 18th Robert H. Jackson Lecture, an annual event featuring Supreme Court experts hosted by the Chautauqua Institution. This year's lecture occurred on July 11 and was recently posted online. [Continue Reading]

Law360: Biden's 10th Circ. Pick Seen As Humble Yet Savvy Prosecutor, Hannah Albariza, August 11, 2022, 9:41 PM

President Joe Biden has tapped for the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals a longtime federal prosecutor who's respected across party lines for his humility and compassion and, if confirmed, would be the first person of color from Kansas to serve as a judge in that court. [Continue Reading]

NATIVE AMERICAN AFFAIRS

AP: Archives to return Native American remains, burial objects, Kim Chandler, August 11, 2022, 8:00 PM

The remains of Native American people who once lived in Alabama were dug up a century ago often by amateur archaeologists and given to the state along with the jewelry, urns and other objects buried with them. The Alabama Department of Archives and History announced this week that it is beginning the process of returning the remains and funerary objects held in its collections to tribes as required by federal law. The department also announced it had removed the funerary objects from displays where the artifacts had sat for years, viewed by school groups and other visitors. [Continue Reading]

Washington Examiner: Biden tries to tread carefully after FBI searches Trump's home, Naomi Lim, August 11, 2022, 11:00 PM

President Joe Biden's relationship with the Justice Department has become more complicated after the FBI enforced a search warrant at former President Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago home and office in Florida. With presidential son Hunter Biden under scrutiny by federal law enforcement officials, the White House has from the start aimed to keep a healthy distance from the Justice Department, headed by Attorney General Merrick Garland. The situation grew thornier after the FBI's Aug. 9 search of Trump's Palm Beach estate. [Continue Reading]

AP: EXPLAINER: Does health care law protect emergency abortion?, Lindsay Whitehurst, August 3, 2022, 1:00 PM

The Biden administration has filed its first legal challenge to a state abortion ban since the end of Roe v. Wade, arguing Idaho's restrictive abortion law leaves doctors facing criminal penalties for providing abortion-related medical care to women in life-threatening medical situations. The Justice Department may have a strong argument in the Idaho case filed under federal health care law, but even if they win it wouldn't allow full access to abortion there, legal experts said. It could, though, give doctors more latitude to provide an abortion in an emergency or a situation that could become one. [Continue Reading]

WSJ: A Focus on Victims' Rights Leads to Investor Payouts in Credit Suisse Case, Dylan Tokar, August 4, 2022, 5:30 AM

When the U.S. Justice Department said earlier this year it would place an increased emphasis on compensating the victims of white-collar crime, lawyers for Credit Suisse Group AG had already taken steps to ensure their client was complying with the new policy. The Swiss bank in October signed a deal with U.S. and U.K. authorities to resolve investigations into a $2 billion fraud and money-laundering scheme centered on a tuna-fishing project in Mozambique. As part of that agreement, the bank agreed to pay restitution to a group of investment firms, pension funds and money managers that helped finance the project.

Guardian: [OPINION] Time is running out. The Department of Justice must indict and convict Trump, Laurence H Tribe and Dennis Aftergut, August 4, 2022, 6:22 AM

On Tuesday CNN reported that key January 6 texts have been erased by officials of Donald Trump's defense department in addition to homeland security and the Secret Service. Not even a clueless Hamlet could avoid smelling "something rotten in the state of Denmark". With the growing list of deletions, there is a whole new criminal conspiracy to investigate: one to destroy evidence of the grave federal crimes already under investigation. Nothing so focuses the prosecutorial mind or underscores the need to accelerate a criminal investigation as evidence that the investigation's target may have plotted to erase the proof of his wrongdoing that is needed to hold him accountable. Washington Times: Lawmakers spar over Justice Department priorities during hearing on threats against election workers, Kerry Picket, August 3, 2022, 4:00 PM Republicans and Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee sparred Wednesday over the Justice Department's priorities during a hearing on the Biden administration's efforts to protect election workers from harassment and threats in the wake of the 2020 presidential election. Republicans including Sen. Mike Lee of Utah said a Justice task force has little to show for its investigations spurred by voter anger over the election, while failing to devote similar resources to protecting conservative Supreme Court justices from demonstrators.

WaPo: [OPINION] Trump faces new danger in DOJ's surprise subpoena of Pat Cipollone, Greg Sargent, August 3, 2022, 11:37 AM

Donald Trump may announce a 2024 presidential bid before the midterm elections because he reportedly believes this could help him elude Jan. 6-related prosecution. If he's a candidate, goes this thinking, any criminal investigation into him would appear hopelessly tainted. But if Trump thinks he's in fearsome control of events, of the calendar and of the public discourse around his legal vulnerabilities — an aura that's central to his appeal to supporters — a confluence of new developments should sorely test that confidence.

Politico: Trump faces uphill fight on executive privilege in DOJ probe, Kyle Cheney, Josh Gerstein and Betsy Woodruff Swan, August 3, 2022, 8:51 PM

Donald Trump's camp has yet to say whether he'll try to use executive privilege to disrupt the Justice Department's grand jury investigation into attempts to overturn the 2020 election. But if he does, it could be a very short fight. A series of court rulings prompted by Trump's effort to stymie the House Jan. 6 select committee investigating the Jan. 6, 2021, attack on the Capitol sharply rejected Trump's bid to wield the power as a former president. In fact, the Supreme Court agreed that Trump's effort to assert privilege would have failed even if he were the sitting president, effectively granting the committee access to Trump's White House papers. Reuters: White House frustrated as Washington mayor seeks troops to help handle migrants, Ted Hesson, August 3, 2022, 10:41 PM

Thousands of migrants bused to Washington in recent months by Republican governors of states on the U.S.-Mexico border have caused tensions between the White House and the Democratic mayor of the U.S. capital city, four U.S. officials told Reuters. Last week, Washington Mayor Muriel Bowser called on President Joe Biden, a fellow Democrat, to mobilize the National Guard to provide aid and shelter for migrants arriving after long trips from Texas and Arizona. White House officials and Washington-area volunteers helping migrants are voicing frustration, saying the aid is unnecessary and the request, which became public last week, plays into the hands of Biden's Republican critics. Time to Talk to Russia?

As the war in Ukra ne rages on, the West is providing Kyvwith more and more powerful weapons, and Russia is unleashing more and more death and destruction. If this continues, then further escalation of the conflict seems likely to follow. That's according to RAND's Samue Charapland Jeremy Shap rolof the European Councilion Foreign Relations, writing in the New York Times.

The United States and its a esishould continue providing a dito Ukraine, they say. But the West—in close consultation with Kyv—should also consider opening channes of communication with Russia and working toward a cease-free agreement. There may not be a mutually acceptable outcome of the warright now, but takes could be private they dentify the compromises needed to find one.

Charap and Shap ro ca the ongoing conflict "a classic spiral" niwhich both sides feel compelled to do more as soon as the other side begins to make some progress." The best way to prevent that dynamic from getting out of control may be to start talking—before the total attention at the control of the cont

China's Military Aid May Be Less Than You Think

The war in Ukraine has shown how important military aid is to broader U.S. security cooperation efforts. In the context of America's strategic competition with China, one might assume that Beijing also has a large military aid program as part of its approach to winning friends and influence. But a recent RAND report shows that the United States has dramatically outspent China in this area. The big idea

Russia's war in Ukraine escalates on the ground and in Congress

Russia's war in Ukraine is escalating this week in the bloody war of attrition on the ground, in Moscow's public pronouncements and in the halls of Congress. American determination to help Kyiv faces fatigue at home and abroad as voters confront more immediate worries like inflation.

President Biden is sending a team of heavy-hitters from across many departments to an all-Senators briefing Wednesday afternoon, underscoring concerns that the next emergency funding request to bolster Ukraine will face more resistance than the previous one.

 Officials going to the Senate on Wednesday include Deputy Director of National Intelligence Morgan Muir; Deputy Secretary of State Wendy Sherman; and Undersecretary of Defense Colin Kahl, according to a source with access to the list of briefers.

The Joint Chiefs are sending Lt. Gen. Douglas Sims, their director for operations. The U.S. Agency for International Development will be represented by its Deputy Administrator Isobel Coleman. Assistant Treasury Secretary for Terrorist Financing and Financial Crimes Elizabeth Rosenberg will attend. So will Alan F. Estevez, undersecretary of commerce for industry and security and Andrew Light, assistant secretary of energy for international affairs.

They're likely to get peppered with technical, military, political and diplomatic questions. What to make of Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky suspending top officials? What would it take for the United States to provide longer-range artillery to Ukraine? What more can the United States do to wean allies off Russian energy? And what is the administration's definition of victory?

ESCALATION

The briefing comes as the conflict has escalated on various fronts over the past few days.

Content from ExxonMobil

Producing for today. Investing in tomorrow.

Russian energy giant Gazprom served notice Monday it's cutting in half the quantity of natural gas flowing through its principal pipeline to Germany, my colleague Loveday Morris reported. Gazprom cited technical difficulties. But Germany officials said they saw none, and Moscow has not been shy about using its energy exports as leverage.

"Starting Wednesday, the daily gas flow through the Nord Stream 1 pipeline — the biggest between Russia and Western Europe — will be set at 33 million cubic meters, Gazprom said. That amounts to about 20 percent of capacity, down from 40 percent."

Ukrainian officials appear to be gearing up for a counteroffensive to retake the southern region of Kherson, even predicting they can liberate it in a couple of months, the Guardian reported.

The daily quoted Sergiy Khlan, an aide to the administrative head of the Kherson region, as saying, "We are switching from defensive to counteroffensive actions," and predicting, "We can say that the Kherson region will definitely be liberated by September."

RUSSIA SAYS THE QUIET PART OUT LOUD

Meanwhile, Russia made explicit what pretty much everyone knew from the earliest days of the war, when Moscow tried and failed to capture Kyiv and falsely claimed the government there was run by Nazis: It wants to shove Zelensky from power.

Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov, attending an Arab League Summit in Cairo, declared, "We are determined to help the people of eastern Ukraine to liberate themselves from the burden of this absolutely unacceptable regime."

But Lavrov made clear his remark did not just apply to the eastern areas. "We will certainly help the Ukrainian people to get rid of the regime, which is absolutely anti-people and anti-historical."

One bright spot in recent days, an agreement to pave the way for exporting Ukrainian grain stores effectively blockaded by Russia, dimmed after a Moscow missile attack on the port city of Odessa.

At the New York Times, Matthew Mpoke Bigg and Eric Nagourney reported: "The missile strike on Saturday, which damaged infrastructure at the port, called into question the viability of the plan to free some 20 million tons of grain trapped at ports on the Black Sea. But President Volodymyr Zelensky and other officials insisted on Monday that Ukraine would move forward with shipments, while denouncing Russia's strike on Odesa."

Ukraine clearly still needs help from the United States and its allies. But how sustainable is that?

My friend Raquel Krähenbühl, who covers the White House and Washington for Brazil's Globo, pressed Zelensky in a recent interview on the question of growing global fatigue with the war. (The translation of his remarks was provided by Globo.)

"I think now that's one of the problems," he said. "There are people who get tired. It's understandable. Every country has its internal issues."

"Regardless of how hard it is for you in the world, you have to know that somewhere there's a country named Ukraine that fights for freedom, and these values are yours," Zelensky continued. "We can make sure that tyranny will lose this war."

Gunmaker's Super Bowl stunt sheds light on marketing of 'America's rifle' "A rapidly growing manufacturer of AR-15-style rifles tried to run an ad during the Super Bowl in 2014, knowing that the NFL typically does not allow gun commercials during its marquee event. But Daniel Defense — the maker of the semiautomatic rifle used in the Uvalde school shooting — privately had in place a plan to generate publicity whether the ad aired or not, according to previously unreported court documents that shed light on the gunmaker's marketing strategies," Shawn Boburg and Jon Swaine report.

The stunt: "If it aired, Daniel Defense's top marketing executive planned to have people across the country complain about the company's own ad to left-leaning media organizations, stirring controversy and generating coverage."

ICYMI: QAnon candidates aren't thriving, but some of their ideas are

"The Republican Party flirted with QAnon in 2020, as several Q-linked candidates sought higher office and Q merchandise appeared at rallies for then-President Donald J. Trump across the country. Yet identifying with the movement emerged as a political liability. As they have during this election cycle, Democrats attacked Q-linked candidates as extremists, and all but two — Representatives Marjorie Taylor Greene of Georgia and Lauren Boebert of Colorado — lost their races," the New York Times's Stuart A. Thompson reports.

"But many QAnon themes have burrowed deeper into mainstream Republican politics this year, experts say, including the false belief that 'evil" deep-state operatives control the government and that Mr. Trump is waging a war against them. Savvy candidates have found ways to tap that excitement — all without explicitly mentioning the conspiracy theory."

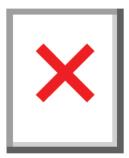

Because of Texas abortion law, her wanted pregnancy became a medical nightmare

"New, untested abortion bans have made doctors unsure about treating some pregnancy complications, which has led to life-threatening delays and trapped families in a limbo of grief and helplessness," NPR's Carrie Feibel reports.

"Elizabeth Weller never dreamed that her own hopes for a child would become ensnared in the web of Texas abortion law."

The Biden agenda

Biden administration weighs declaring monkeypox a health emergency

President Biden speaks on the phone from the White House's Truman Ba cony on Monday. (Adam Schutz/White House/AP)

"The Biden administration is weighing whether to declare the nation's monkeypox outbreak a public health emergency and also plans to name a White House coordinator to oversee the response as officials attempt to keep the virus from becoming entrenched in the United States," Dan Diamond reports.

Biden goes silent after SCOTUS gives him power to nix Trump immigration policy

"The White House and Department of Homeland Security have been mum on their plans following the Supreme Court's ruling. Immigration advocates asking about next steps have been met with a similar silence. In that void, a question has emerged: What, exactly, is the hold up?" Politico's Sabrina Rodriguez reports.

Biden moves to reinstate health protections for LGBTQ Americans

"The proposed rule issued by the Department of Health and Human Services seeks to clarify that discrimination on the basis of sex includes decisions regarding 'pregnancy termination,' "Dan Diamond and Rachel Roubein report. "Health-care organizations that receive federal funding would also be barred from discriminating against gender transitions and other services that have increasingly become the target of state legislative battles and litigation.

Officials also stressed that the new federal anti-discrimination language covers a patient's sexual orientation and gender identity."

U.S. officials grow more concerned about potential action by China on Taiwan

"The Biden administration has grown increasingly anxious this summer about China's statements and actions regarding Taiwan, with some officials fearing that Chinese leaders might try to move against the self-governing island over the next year and a half — perhaps by trying to cut off access to all or part of the Taiwan Strait, through which U.S. naval ships regularly pass," the NYT's Edward Wong, David E. Sanger and Amy Qin report.

Biden poised for big wins in Congress

"The first major prescription drug legislation in nearly 20 years. More than $50 billion to subsidize computer chip manufacturing and research. A bill that would enshrine protection for same-sex marriage," Yasmeen Abutaleb and Mike DeBonis report.

"After a turbulent stretch in which much of President Biden's legislative agenda seemed to be foundering, the president and his party may be on the cusp of significant wins in Congress that the White House hopes will provide at least a modest political boost."

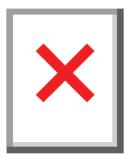

How inflation has changed, visualized

"At the start, inflation could be dodged by holding onto that old car or avoiding air travel. Now, record prices are concentrated on essentials such as groceries, housing and energy, raising the cost of just getting by for many," Alyssa Fowers explains.

The conservative take on why Congress should codify same-sex marriage

For the WSJ, former U.S. solicitor general Theodore B. Olson and former chairman of the Republican National Committee Kenneth B. Mehlman explain why they think Congress should pass the Respect for Marriage Act.

"The act would codify recognition of same-sex marriages in the U.S. at the federal, state and local levels. It's unlikely that a subsequent Supreme Court decision would overturn Obergefell, but it would be foolhardy to take for granted that lower courts or future justices couldn't adopt similar views as those expressed in Justice Thomas's concurrence or attempt to weaken the rights that accompany civil marriage."

Today in Washington

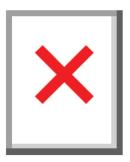

At 2 p.m., Biden will meet virtually with the chairman of the SK Group. Commerce Secretary Gina Raimondo will join.

Biden will virtually join the House Disabilities Caucus to mark the 32nd anniversary of the Americans With Disabilities Act at 5 p.m.

Reuters: U.S. announces $1.2 bln healthcare crackdown tied to telehealth, cardiovascular tests, Sarah N. Lynch, July 20, 2022, 2:41 PM

The U.S. Justice Department unveiled a $1.2 billion healthcare fraud crackdown on Wednesday, revealing criminal charges against 36 defendants for alleged fraudulent billing schemes tied to telemedicine, genetic and cardiovascular testing, and equipment. The criminal charges, which were unsealed across 13 federal districts between July 11 through July 20, target clinical laboratory owners, marketers, medical professionals and telemedicine executives. [Continue Reading] See also: CBS, Law360, UPI

Bloomberg: Treasury Official Sees Price Cap on Russian Oil by December, Daniel Flatley, July 20, 2022, 10:03 PM

A price cap on Russian oil should go into effect alongside the December implementation of the European Union's restrictions on insurance for the commodity, a Biden administration official said Wednesday night. [...] Deputy Attorney General Lisa Monaco, who joined Adeyemo on stage in Aspen, said the Justice Department is asking Congress for the authority to go after networks of Russian oligarchs and sanctions evaders using racketeering statutes the agency used to attack the mafia. She said the department's KleptoCapture task force had seized several yachts, including one on which a rare Faberge egg was discovered. [Continue Reading]

WSJ: Attorney General Merrick Garland Says Government Could Sue States Over Abortion Access, Sadie Gurman, July 20, 2022, 6:01 PM

Attorney General Merrick Garland threatened to sue states that have outlawed or restricted abortion since the Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade last month—and said the Justice Department would ask a judge to toss out a Texas lawsuit seeking to block federal rules requiring doctors to perform abortions in emergency situations "The Justice Department is going to use every tool we have to ensure reproductive freedom," Mr. Garland said on Wednesday, adding that its lawyers would be looking at options including initiating litigation or joining private lawsuits against state abortion restrictions. USA Today: Merrick Garland: Nothing to prevent investigating Trump or anyone else for Jan. 6 attack, Bart Jansen, July 20, 2022, 3:43 PM

Attorney General Merrick Garland reiterated Wednesday he would pursue investigations into the Capitol attack on Jan. 6, 2021, by following the facts and the law, after some advocates worried a recent memo signaled he would avoid investigating former President Donald Trump. "No person is above the law in this country," Garland said. "I can't say it any more clearly than that. There is nothing in the principles of prosecution and any other factors which prevent us from investigating anyone – anyone – who is criminally responsible for an attempt to undo a democratic election." WaPo: [OPINION] Merrick Garland doesn't have forever, Richard Ben-Veniste, July 20, 2022, 1:29 PM Let's take Attorney General Merrick Garland at his word that he is vigorously investigating Donald Trump and the apparent conspiracy that led to the violent coup attempt at the U.S. Capitol 18 months ago. My guess is that Garland should be able to make the decision on whether there is enough evidence to indict the former president for the crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States and/or related felonies in six months' time. That decision should be based solely on whether the evidence is sufficient to convince a jury, beyond a reasonable doubt, of Trump's guilt — not on political considerations. [Continue Reading]

WaPo: [OPINION] Some good news: Trump seems closer than ever to prosecution, Jennifer Rubin, July 20, 2022, 12:00 PM

Reuters: Trump letter allowed as evidence in ex-adviser Bannon's trial, Sarah N. Lynch, July 20, 2022, 5:43 PM

The judge in Steve Bannon's trial on Wednesday let the defense inform jurors that Donald Trump this month gave the green light for his former presidential adviser to testify before the congressional committee probing last year's U.S. Capitol attack after previously asking him not to cooperate. U.S. District Judge Carl Nichols made the ruling - a potential boost to Bannon's defense - on the second day of trial testimony in federal court. Bannon, 68, has pleaded not guilty to two misdemeanor counts of contempt of Congress for defying the House of Representatives select committee's subpoena for testimony and documents as part of its inquiry into the Jan. 6, 2021, rampage by Trump supporters. AP: Abortion ruling prompts variety of reactions from states, Unattributed, July 20, 2022, 3:00 PM The U.S. Supreme Court on June 24 overturned Roe v. Wade, the 1973 decision that had provided a constitutional right to abortion. The ruling was expected to lead to abortion bans in roughly half the states, although the timing of those laws taking effect varies. Some Republican-led states banned or severely limited abortion immediately, while other restrictions will take effect later. In anticipation of the decision, several states led by Democrats took steps to protect abortion access. The decision also set up the potential for legal fights between the states over whether providers and those who help women obtain abortions can be sued or prosecuted.

Fox: Border Patrol pushes back on Mayorkas claim that southern border is secure: 'They are liars', Adam Shaw, July 21, 2022, 2:07 AM

Multiple Border Patrol agents are pushing back against Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas' claim that the southern border is "secure" — just as agents on the frontlines of the historic migrant crisis are struggling to cope with the overwhelming numbers facing them. There were more than 207,000 migrant encounters in June alone, the fourth month in a row where the number of encounters breached the 200,000 mark. But Mayorkas, speaking at the Aspen Security Forum on Tuesday, dismissed claims about the border not being secure.

Washington Times: [OPINION] Misinformation threatens sound immigration policy, Mario López, July 20, 2022, 4:00 PM

Of the many public policy issues plagued with misinformation these days, immigration remains near the top of the list. Unfortunately, a recent Washington Times article ("Up to 33% of ICE catch-and-release migrants abscond: GAO audit." Web, June 22) contributes to this problem. This article twisted government data to cast doubt on a successful program that helps noncitizens comply with federal immigration rules. It characterized the federal Alternatives to Detention efforts as a "catch and release program," which gave the false impression that migrants are let loose to do whatever they please with no supervision. CNN: Steve Dettelbach sworn in to lead ATF after 7 years of acting directors, Hannah Rabinowitz and Veronica Stracqualursi, July 19, 2022, 3:45 PM

Former federal prosecutor Steve Dettelbach was ceremonially sworn in on Tuesday as the new director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, marking the first time in seven years that the agency has a permanent, Senate-approved leader at the helm. Dettelbach assumes control of the agency, which imposes and issues federal firearm regulations, during a surge of gun violence and mass shootings in the United States. He will also be tasked with enforcing the country's new sprawling gun legislation, the Bipartisan Safer Communities Act, which is the most significant new federal legislation to address gun violence in decades. CBS: New ATF director says there's "no one solution" to ending gun violence, Caitlin Yilek, July 19, 2022, 8:43 PM

Steven Dettelbach, the newly sworn-in director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, said there is no overarching answer to solving the nation's gun violence, even as guns have become the leading cause of death for children in the U.S. "One of the things that makes this problem so hard is that it looks way different depending on where you are," Dettelbach told "CBS Evening News" anchor and managing editor Norah O'Donnell in an interview Tuesday. AP: US disrupts North Korean hackers that targeted hospitals, Eric Tucker, July 19, 2022, 3:30 PM

The FBI and Justice Department recently disrupted the activities of a hacking group that was sponsored by the North Korean government and that targeted U.S. hospitals with ransomware, ultimately recovering half a million dollars in ransom payments, Deputy Attorney

General Lisa Monaco said Tuesday. Monaco revealed new details of the attacks during a speech in which she encouraged organizations hit by ransomware to report the crime to law enforcement, both so that officials can investigate and so that they can help victim companies try to get ransom payments back. In this case, Monaco said, a Kansas hospital that paid a ransom last year after being attacked by ransomware also contacted the FBI, which traced the payment and identified China-based money launderers who assisted the North Korean hackers in cashing out the illicit proceeds. WaPo: What the Garland memo really means for investigating Trump, Aaron Blake, July 19. 2022

If there's a powerful Democrat who has given his party as much heartburn as Sens. Joe Manchin III (D-W.Va.) and Kyrsten Sinema (D-Ariz.), it might well be Attorney General Merrick Garland. A party base anxious for Jan. 6, 2021-related criminal charges against former president Donald Trump has long been suspicious of the moderate attorney general. And the limited peeks they've gotten behind the Justice Department curtain have often left them wholly unsatisfied, at best, and suspicious of Garland's fortitude, at worst. The most recent episode in the saga is a newly reported memo that Garland signed in May. But the memo probably doesn't warrant nearly the kind of consternation it has engendered. AP: Biden order aims to punish captors of Americans held abroad, Eric Tucker, July 19, 2022, 8:30 AM

President Joe Biden signed an executive order Tuesday aimed at increasing the flow of information to families of Americans detained abroad and at imposing sanctions on the criminals, terrorists or government officials who hold them captive. It is unclear if the new order will result in bringing home more Americans jailed in foreign countries, but senior Biden administration officials who previewed the action to reporters said they regard it as an important way to raise the cost of hostage-taking and to punish captors. NYT: Intelligence Agencies Say Russia Election Threat Persists Amid Ukraine War, Adam Goldman, July 19, 2022, 5:00 PM

Top national security officials warned on Tuesday about the continuing threat of election interference from abroad, emphasizing that Russia could still seek to meddle or promote disinformation during the 2022 midterm races even as it wages war in Ukraine. "I am quite confident the Russians can walk and chew gum," Christopher A. Wray, the F.B.I. director, said during a cybersecurity conference in Manhattan, where he spoke alongside Gen. Paul M. The Biden administration is pushing to fill hundreds of thousands of cybersecurity jobs in the United States as part of a bid to close a talent shortage US officials describe as both a national security challenge and an economic opportunity. On Tuesday, the administration announced a multi-agency plan to create hundreds of registered apprenticeship programs with the private sector to flesh out the nation's cybersecurity workforce — and defend against a rising tide of data breaches, ransomware attacks and other hacking incidents.

Roll Call: Senate support builds to seize, liquidate Russian oligarch assets, Rachel Oswald, July 19, 2022, 6:14 PM

Senators are making headway on a potentially significant piece of bipartisan legislation that would give the Justice Department new authorities to seize and liquidate ill-gotten assets of Russian oligarchs and use the proceeds to benefit the people of Ukraine. At a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on Tuesday, Democrats and Republicans debated the pros and cons of the legislation from Sens. Sheldon Whitehouse, D-R.I., and Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., which would create a narrow and expiring authority for the Justice Department to open civil forfeiture proceedings against the frozen assets of Russian individuals found to be tied to criminal activities and to redirect the proceeds of forfeitures to humanitarian and economic aid for Ukraine. The Department of Justice (DOJ) asked Congress for permission on Tuesday to use a sweeping set of laws originally designed to break up the mafia as part of their efforts to pursue the assets of the Russian elite following the country's war in Ukraine. The DOJ wants to include violations of sanctions and export controls in its definition of racketeering under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, or RICO Act, which allowed federal prosecutors in the 1980s and 1990s to go after organized crime rings on charges of extortion and murder for hire. Reuters: Trump ex-adviser Bannon felt he was 'above the law,' prosecution tells jury, Sarah N. Lynch, July 19, 2022, 8:30 AM

Federal prosecutors are due to start presenting their case on Tuesday in the trial of Steve Bannon, a prominent former presidential adviser to Donald Trump, on charges of contempt of Congress for defying a subpoena from the committee investigating last year's attack on the U.S. Capitol. Bannon, 68, is facing two misdemeanor counts after he declined last year to provide testimony or documents to the Democratic-led House of Representatives select committee. Prosecutors and Bannon's defense are set to present opening statements in the trial once jury selection is completed. U.S. District Judge Carl Nichols is presiding. The criticism of the Department of Justice continues to grow: Detractors see the department as too far behind the Jan. 6 committee. They want to know why Atty. Gen. Merrick Garland and the Justice Department have yet to come forward with a serious criminal charge against Donald Trump. These gloomy observations miss at least one crucial point: There is a gap in the committee's development of the Jan. 6 evidence for the most serious yet fitting charge against Trump. And it seems likely that only the Justice Department can fill it. [Continue Reading]

JUDICIAL NOMINEES & APPOINTMENTS

Reuters: GOP senator opposes Biden's Wisconsin prosecutor nominee, likely dooming pick, Nate Raymond, July 19, 2022, 4:52 PM

Republican U.S. Senator Ron Johnson of Wisconsin on Tuesday said he will oppose President Joe Biden's selection of a lawyer at law firm Perkins Coie to serve as the top federal prosecutor in Madison, potentially dooming her nomination. Johnson cited now-deleted "partisan" tweets by Sopen Shah about Republicans and the Jan. 6, 2021, attack on the U.S. Capitol in declaring he would not return a so-called "blue slip" supporting her nomination to become the second woman to serve as the U.S. attorney for the Western District of Wisconsin. WSJ: Michelle Childs Is Confirmed by Senate for U.S. Appeals Bench in Washington, Jan Wolfe, July 19, 2022, 9:14 PM

The Senate on Tuesday confirmed U.S. District Judge J. Michelle Childs for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, a prominent appeals court where several Supreme Court justices have served. Confirmed on a vote of 64-34, Judge Childs is set to replace Judge David Tatel, who in May took senior status, a form of semiretirement that creates a judicial vacancy. Law360: Treasury Urges DC Circ. To Nix Tribes' COVID-19 Funding Suit, Joyce Hanson, July 19, 2022, 8:34 PM

The federal government has asked the D. C. Circuit to back its summary judgment win in an appeal filed by Native American tribes challenging its distribution of COVID-19 relief, saying a lower court properly held that the U. S. Department of the Treasury's funding allocation was well within its discretion. In its Friday appellate brief, the government argued its final allocation was not "arbitrary and capricious," as the Prairie Band Potawatomi Nation and the Miccosukee Tribe of Indians of Florida claim in their consolidated suits. Reuters: Biden to announce executive actions on climate, Unattributed, July 20, 2022, 4:41 AM

President Joe Biden will announce a set of executive actions aimed at addressing climate change on Wednesday in a visit to the site of a former coal-fired plant in Massachusetts that is playing a role in supporting the state's offshore wind industry. Democratic lawmakers and environmental groups have been calling for the White House to take aggressive measures on climate change after Democratic Senator Joe Manchin said last week he was not ready to support key climate provisions in Congress, a critical loss in the evenly divided Senate.

AP: House passes same-sex marriage bill in retort to high court, Lisa Mascaro, July 19, 2022, 7:00 PM

The U.S. House overwhelmingly approved legislation Tuesday to protect same-sex and interracial marriages amid concerns that the Supreme Court ruling overturning Roe v. Wade abortion access could jeopardize other rights criticized by many conservatives. In a robust but lopsided debate, Democrats argued intensely and often personally in favor of enshrining marriage equality in federal law, while Republicans steered clear of openly rejecting gay marriage. Instead leading Republicans portrayed the bill as unnecessary amid other issues facing the nation. [Continue Reading] See also: ABC, Bloomberg, CNBC, NBC, NYT, Reuters, USA Today, WaPo, WSJ

JAN. 6 ATTACK & 2020 ELECTION PROBES

The Georgia prosecutors scrutinizing former President Trump's efforts to overturn the 2020 election said yesterday that all 16 "fake electors" are now targets of an ongoing criminal investigation. "Each of the sixteen persons who signed the unofficial Elector Certificate ultimately submitted to the National Archives received a similar target letter alerting that person both that his testimony was required by the special purpose grand jury and that he was a target of the investigation," prosecutors said. The significant development indicates prosecutors are moving closer to possible criminal charges against those involved in the scheme. Zachary Cohen, Sara Murray and Jason Morris report for CNN.

The Secret Service was only able to provide a single text exchange to the Department of Homeland Security inspector general who had requested a month's worth of records, according to a letter to the Jan. 6 committee. This revelation provides insight into the concern raised in a previous letter to Congress by the inspector general, who accused the agency of not retaining records needed for the Jan. 6 investigation. In June 2021 Inspector General Joseph Cuffari requested text messages sent and received by 24 Secret Service personnel between Dec. 7, 2020, and Jan. 8, 2021, according to the previously unreported letter. "The Secret Service submitted the responsive records it identified, namely, a text message conversation from former US Capitol Police Chief Steven Sund to former Secret Service Uniformed Division Chief Thomas Sullivan requesting assistance on January 6, 2021, and advised the agency did not have any further records responsive to the DHS OIG's request for text messages," Assistant Director Ronald Rowe wrote in the letter. Jamie Gangel reports for CNN.

The Secret Service has no new text messages related to the Jan. 6 attack to hand over to the Jan. 6 committee, a source familiar with the matter has said. The Secret Service plans to do a "forensic examination" of agents' phones identified in the inspector general's report, the source said, adding that the agency does not expect this will yield relevant emails or other records. The Jan. 6 committee had given the Secret Service until yesterday morning to turn over the text messages it had subpoenaed. However, according to committee member Rep. Stephanie Murphy (D-FL), whilst the Secret Service has provided lots of documents and some data, the committee has not received the additional text messages they were looking for. Scott Wong and Peter Nicholas report for NBC News.

Arguments in the federal trial of former Trump strategist Steve Bannon began yesterday, with prosecutors saying in opening statements that Bannon "decided he was above the law" by defying a subpoena to testify before the Jan. 6 committee. Bannon's defense claimed that the case against him arose from a politically charged Congress, with Bannon telling reporters outside court that the Jan. 6 committee had launched a "show trial." The trial is set to continue today. Spencer S. Hsu, Tom Jackman, Devlin Barrett and Shayna Jacobs report for the Washington Post.

OTHER DOMESTIC DEVELOPMENTS

Americans' approval of the Supreme Court has fallen again, according to a new poll released yesterday. The Marquette Law School poll, which was conducted just days after the court overturned Roe v. Wade, found that only 38% of respondents approved of the nine justices. Just one year ago, in July 2021, the Marquette poll showed 60% approval. Devan Cole reports for CNN.

Democratic members of Congress were among those arrested by Capitol Police yesterday as part of an abortion rights protest in front of the Supreme Court. The U.S. Capitol Police tweeted: "Demonstrators are starting to block First Street, NE. It is against the law to block traffic, so officers are going to give our standard three warnings before they start making arrests." Capitol police later said they had arrested 34 people in total, including 16 members of Congress. Edward-Isaac Dovere reports for CNN.

The House yesterday passed a bill that would provide protection for same-sex and interracial marriage under federal law. The 267-157 vote on the Respect for Marriage Act followed concerns from Democratic lawmakers that the recent supreme court ruling ending abortion rights could endanger other precedents. The chamber is also set to vote on the Right to Contraception Act - both pieces of legislation would enshrine into law rights not enumerated in the Constitution but that the court has recognized in recent decades. Eliza Collins reports for the Wall Street Journal.

U.S. RELATIONS

Top national security officials warned yesterday about the continuing threat of election interference from aboard. During a cyber security conference in Manhattan, FBI director, Christopher Wray, emphasized that Russia could still seek to meddle or promote disinformation during the 2022 midterm races, even as it wages war on Ukraine. Iran and China also remain potent threats, mounting their own campaigns to undermine American democracy, Wray and other officials speaking at the conference said. Adam Goldman reports for the New York Times.

Law-enforcement authorities recently disrupted a North Korean state-sponsored hacking campaign that targeted hospitals and other medical facilities in the U.S., Deputy Attorney General Lisa Monaco said yesterday. The disruption was part of a Justice Department operation that included the cryptocurrency seizure of about half a million dollars in ransom payments. The operation is the latest example of the Biden administration's strategy to rely less on charging foreign hackers who may never see a courtroom and instead dedicate resources to combatting cyberattacks before they can do more damage, Monaco said. Dustin Volz reports for the Wall Street Journal.

China issued a fresh warning yesterday that a Taiwan visit by House Speaker Nancy Pelosi would deeply damage U.S.-China relations. Zhao Lijian, a spokesman for China's Foreign Ministry, said that such a visit would "have a severe negative impact on the political foundation of China-U.S. relations, and send a gravely wrong signal to "Taiwan independence" separatist forces." The statement follows news that Pelosi plans to make a trip to the island in August. James T. Areddy reports for the Wall Street Journal.

RUSSIA, UKRAINE

Ukrainian shelling has badly damaged the crucial Antonivskyi bridge in the Russia-controlled Kherson region of southern Ukraine, Moscow-installed regional authorities have said. The bridge - one of only two crossing points for Russian forces to territory they have occupied on the western bank of the vast Dnipro river in southern Ukraine - has been a key target for Ukrainian forces in recent days, with Kyiv using high-precision U.S.-supplied rockets to try to destroy it. Reuters reports.

The geographical objectives of Moscow's "special military operation" in Ukraine are no longer limited to the eastern Donbas region but include a number of other territories, Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov has said. Russia's objectives will expand still further if the West delivers long-range weapons to Kyiv, he added. Reuters reports.

The White House has warned that Russia is beginning to roll out its plans to annex large parts of southern Ukraine by installing proxy officials and preparing to hold sham referendums. John Kirby, head of strategic communications at the U.S. National Security Council, told reporters: "Russia is beginning to roll out a version of what you could call an annexation playbook — very similar to the one we saw in 2014," referring to when the Kremlin sent special forces into Crimea to capture territory before holding a carefully controlled referendum on sovereignty. "Already Russia is installing illegitimate proxy officials in the areas of Ukraine that are under its control, and we know their next moves," he added. "First, these proxy officials will arrange sham referenda on joining Russia, then Russia will use those sham referendums as a basis to try to claim annexation of sovereign Ukrainian territory." The Kremlin had detailed plans in place to annex the cities of Kherson and Zaporizhzhia, as well as the entire Donetsk and Luhansk regions. Kiran Stacey reports for the Financial Times.

Russian President Vladimir Putin ended his summit in Tehran with an endorsement from Iran for its invasion of Ukraine. "War is a violent and difficult endeavor, and the Islamic Republic is not at all happy that people are caught up in war, But in the case of Ukraine, if you had not taken the helm, the other side would have done so and initiated a war," Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei told Putin, according to the supreme leader's office. Khamenei's endorsement of the war went well beyond the much more cautious support offered by another key Russian ally, China, embracing Putin's claim that the West had left the Kremlin no choice but to act. It was a signal to the world that with Europe and the United States now hitting Russia with sanctions comparable to those that have suffocated Iran's economy for years, the long-fraught relationship between Moscow and Tehran may be becoming a true partnership. Anton Troianovski and Farnaz Fassihi report for the New York Times.

The Biden administration is putting $100 million into a new program to provide Ukrainian farmers with vital supplies. Some Ukrainian farms have turned into battlefields, and farmers who have maintained their harvests have been unable to get machinery and other key supplies including fertilizer, seeds and storage bins that would typically arrive through Black Sea ports due to Russia's ongoing blockade of Ukrainian ports. It is hoped that the new program will allow farmers to maintain future harvests, alleviating the global food security crisis that has been exacerbated by Russia's war in Ukraine. Kylie Atwood reports for CNN.

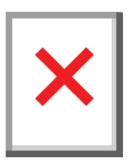

OTHER GLOBAL DEVELOPMENTS

Sri Lankan MPs have elected prime minister Ranil Wickremesinghe as the country's new president, despite his unpopularity with the public. Speaking to parliament following his win he urged for unity and bipartisanship moving forward, saying that the nation was "in a very difficult situation" and there were "big challenges ahead." Protestors and activists, who had called for his resignation alongside that of former president Gotabaya Rajapaksa, have expressed despair and disappointment over his appointment. Frances Mao and Anbarasan Ethirajan report for BBC

News

Italian Prime Minister Mario Draghi has stepped back from resigning, calling for a new pact to save his unity government from collapse. Six days after the president rejected his resignation, Draghi said it was impossible to ignore the many Italians calling for the coalition to survive. Draghi tendered his resignation last week when the populist Five Star Movement pulled out of a confidence vote over policy disagreements. Now Draghi has decided to face down the Five Star movement and stay. A confidence vote will take place on Wednesday evening, which he will need to pass to remain in the job. Mark Lowen and Paul Kirby report for BBC News.

China is asking the U.N. to bury a highly-anticipated report on human rights violations in Xinjiang, according to a letter seen by Reuters and confirmed by three diplomats. The letter, which China began circulating among diplomatic missions in Geneva from late June, expresses "grave concern" about the Xinjiang report and aims to halt its release. "The assessment (on Xinjiang), if published, will intensify politicisation and bloc confrontation in the area of human rights, undermine the credibility of the OHCHR (Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights), and harm the cooperation between OHCHR and member states," the letter says. United Nations High Commissioner Michelle Bachelet, who faced severe criticism from human rights organisations for being too soft on China during her May visit, has pledged to publish a report on the region before stepping down at the end of August. Emma Farge reports for Reuters.

COVID-19

COVID-19 has infected over 89.54 million people and has now killed over 1.02 million people in the United States, according to data compiled by Johns Hopkins University. Globally, there have been over 562.475 million confirmed coronavirus cases and over 6.37 million deaths. AP: US disrupts North Korean hackers that targeted hospitals, Eric Tucker, July 19, 2022, 3:30 PM The FBI and Justice Department recently disrupted the activities of a hacking group that was sponsored by the North Korean government and that targeted U.S. hospitals with ransomware, ultimately recovering half a million dollars in ransom payments, Deputy Attorney General Lisa Monaco said Tuesday. Monaco revealed new details of the attacks during a speech in which she encouraged organizations hit by ransomware to report the crime to law enforcement, both so that officials can investigate and so that they can help victim companies try to get ransom payments back. In this case, Monaco said, a Kansas hospital that paid a ransom last year after being attacked by ransomware also contacted the FBI, which traced the payment and identified Chinabased money launderers who assisted the North Korean hackers in cashing out the illicit proceeds. Bad news doesn't get better with age, and neither does a bad legal argument. Unfortunately, the Biden Justice Department recently proposed resurrecting a bad and illegal Obama-era practice that let left-wing operatives control a slush fund to reward their political allies with the public's money. And they want to do it without even making any effort to persuade Congress to authorize the giveaway. [Continue Reading]

The Department of Justice (DOJ) asked Congress for permission on Tuesday to use a sweeping set of laws originally designed to break up the mafia as part of their efforts to pursue the assets of the Russian elite following the country's war in Ukraine. The DOJ wants to include violations of sanctions and export controls in

Roll Call: Senate support builds to seize, liquidate Russian oligarch assets, Rachel Oswald, July 19, 2022, 6:14 PM

Senators are making headway on a potentially significant piece of bipartisan legislation that would give the Justice Department new authorities to seize and liquidate ill-gotten assets of Russian oligarchs and use the proceeds to benefit the people of Ukraine. At a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on Tuesday, Democrats and Republicans debated the pros and cons of the legislation from Sens. Sheldon Whitehouse, D-R.I., and Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., which would create a narrow and expiring authority for the Justice Department to open civil forfeiture proceedings against the frozen assets of Russian individuals found to be tied to criminal activities and to redirect the proceeds of forfeitures to humanitarian and economic aid for Ukraine. Reuters: Trump ex-adviser Bannon felt he was 'above the law,' prosecution tells jury, Sarah N. Lynch, July 19, 2022, 8:30 AM

Federal prosecutors are due to start presenting their case on Tuesday in the trial of Steve Bannon, a prominent former presidential adviser to Donald Trump, on charges of contempt of Congress for defying a subpoena from the committee investigating last year's attack on the U.S. Capitol. Bannon, 68, is facing two misdemeanor counts after he declined last year to provide testimony or documents to the Democratic-led House of Representatives select committee. Prosecutors and Bannon's defense are set to present opening statements in the trial once jury selection is completed. U.S. District Judge Carl Nichols is presiding.

LAT: [OPINION] There is a gap in the evidence we've seen against Trump. We have to rely on the DOJ to fill it, Harry Litman, July 20, 2022, 6:00 AM

The criticism of the Department of Justice continues to grow: Detractors see the department as too far behind the Jan. 6 committee. They want to know why Atty. Gen. Merrick Garland and the Justice Department have yet to come forward with a serious criminal charge against Donald Trump. These gloomy observations miss at least one crucial point: There is a gap in the committee's development of the Jan. 6 evidence for the most serious yet fitting charge against Trump. And it seems likely that only the Justice Department can fill it.

Law360: Attys Say DEA Stonewalled Drug-Related FOIA Requests, Sam Reisman, July 19, 2022, 4:53 PM

The U. S. Drug Enforcement Administration has been unlawfully stonewalling Freedom of Information Act requests seeking clarity about terminally ill patients' right to try psilocybin, according to a new lawsuit filed Tuesday in Texas federal court. According to the complaint, the DEA "has adopted an unlawful policy and pattern or practice. Specifically, the agency deems any FOIA request that requires the FOIA office to obtain a document from any other office 'complex' and, on that basis, categorizes virtually all FOIA requests as raising 'unusual circumstances. WaPo: Brett Kavanaugh's neighbors: For abortion rights but tired of protests, Dan Morse and Ellie Silverman, July 19, 2022, 8:00 PM

On paper at least, Emily Strulson might seem a welcoming host to the weekly protests outside Supreme Court Justice Brett M. Kavanaugh's home. The 46-year-old artist, who lives a half-block away, first marched for abortion rights as a middle-schooler with her mom on the National Mall. The court's recent moves to overturn Roe v. Wade prompted her to chalk out a message on her driveway: "Reproduction Rights are Human Rights." And she has had more than 200 yard signs printed and distributed that echo the widely held sentiments of her left-leaning jurisdiction just north of Washington: "Chevy Chasers for Choice." CNN: 60% of Americans approved of the Supreme Court last July. Now, it's 38%, according to a new poll, Devan Cole, July 20, 2022, 5:00 AM

Americans' approval of the Supreme Court has fallen again, according to a new poll released Wednesday, with just 38% of the country saying it approves of the nation's highest court after it overturned Roe v. Wade -- a dramatic shift in public opinion from one year ago. The Marquette Law School poll provides key insight into how the country views the Supreme Court after its controversial decision to reverse nearly 50 years of precedent. Taken between July 5 and 12, just days after the court reversed Roe, the survey found that 61% of respondents said they disapproved of the nine justices and 38% said they approved.. DRIVING THE DAY

ABOUT LAST NIGHT — "Trump wins proxy war with Hogan in Maryland primary — boosted by Democrats," by Zach Montellaro

In the Republican primary: DAN COX, a state delegate "who has full-throatedly embraced [DONALD] TRUMP's repeated falsehoods about fraud in the 2020 election, scored the former president a win in his fight with [Gov. LARRY] HOGAN," defeating the Hogan-endorsed KELLY SCHULZ in the gubernatorial primary.

"The closing weeks of the race were dominated by the Democratic Governors Association, which dropped a multi-million ad campaign 'attacking' Cox as too loyal to Trump," Zach writes. "The DGA has insisted it was merely getting a head start on the general election, casting Cox as the frontrunner — despite public polling in the run-up to Tuesday showing Cox and Schulz deadlocked. But the campaign was widely seen as an attempt to boost the more extreme candidate in the Republican primary, in hopes that Cox would be easier to beat in the general election." For more about this Dem primary-meddling strategy, check out Tuesday's Playbook

In the Democratic primary: With mail ballots yet to be counted (Maryland state law prevents election officials from counting them until Thursday), it's too early to call. As of this morning, author WES MOORE led the field, with former DNC Chair and Labor Secretary TOM PEREZ and state Comptroller PETER FRANCHOT in striking distance.

Also notable: In the Democratic primary for Maryland's open 4th congressional district, GLENN IVEY defeated former Rep. DONNA EDWARDS, who was attempting a comeback bid after leaving Congress in 2016 and faced an onslaught of negative ads from AIPAC-aligned groups. More from NYT

Full results: Maryland statewide and Maryland congressional districts

THE VIEW FROM ASPEN — The House is teeing up a messaging bill on contraception, while the Senate continues its struggle to pass legislation on industrial policy and health care. Meanwhile, JOE BIDEN will tour an old coal plant today and announce some modest new climate change policies.

But the place to be this week to really understand where the country is headed is 1,800 miles away from Washington: Aspen, Colorado, where Biden's top national security officials — including his CIA director, national security adviser, and top officials from DOJ and Treasury — are gathering with a small cohort of journalists over the next four days for rare on-the-record sessions at the Aspen Security Forum. Things kicked off last night with DHS Secretary ALEJANDRO MAYORKAS. The full agenda can be found here.

There hasn't been anything close to this many senior Biden people gathered together in one place and speaking publicly during the Biden presidency thus far. Playbook is in Aspen, along with our colleagues Dafna Linzer, Alex Ward, Nahal Toosi and Daniel Lippman, and we'll be bringing readers highlights through Saturday.

We asked Alex, author of POLITICO's "National Security Daily" newsletter, to weigh in with the three big things he'll be watching for this week. Here's what he told us:

- 1. The administration has struggled to convey its foreign and national security policies since taking the reins in Jan. 2021. Covid was largely to blame there's only so much nuance you can convey over Zoom. Now, officials from national security adviser JAKE SULLIVAN to CIA Director WILLIAM BURNS to Undersecretary of State VICTORIA NULAND have a chance to road test their views and assumptions in front of an elite audience. ASF is chock full of reporters, government officials, business leaders, activists, lobbyists and concerned citizens who will have no qualms about poking at the Biden administration's foreign policy with a critical stick.
- 2. Biden just finished two major trips, one to Europe to rally NATO and the broader West against Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and the other to the Middle East to reestablish American influence in a region where it has largely waned. After all that jet-setting, what does the administration have to show for it? And what comes next?It'll be important for Biden's team to not just defend its policies to date, but outline what they plan to do in the future. Will they supply Ukraine with even more advanced weapons, or lift restrictions on what Kyiv's forces can do with what the West provides them? Will Biden invest in a better relationship with Saudi Crown Prince MOHAMMED BIN SALMAN or the intractable peace process between Israelis and Palestinians? Oh, and what does any of that mean for the largest challenge of confronting China?
- 3. Members of the Biden administration, from the top on down, get prickly when people question their policies. They claim outside critics don't have the right information or overemphasize something trivial (cough the fist bump cough). But in Aspen, officials won't be able to wave away broadsides against their views. They'll have to face them head on, potentially leading to some ... let's say "candid" ... moments. Again, because of the pandemic, the administration hasn't faced sustained in-person challenges from outsiders for the last 18 months. I'm glad I and my colleagues have a front-row seat to it all.

A message from Amazon:

Out of work and worried he would lose everything, Frank applied for a job at Amazon and got a career.

Frank started as a shift assistant in 2017 and steadily worked his way to becoming a senior operations manager at an Amazon Air Hub. Frank is now mentoring others to help advance their career goals and grow at Amazon just like he did.

Good Wednesday morning. Thanks for reading Playbook. Drop us a line and tell us what you want to know from Biden's foreign policy high command in Aspen: Rachael Bade, Eugene Daniels, Ryan Lizza.

INSIDE 1600 PENN — Senior White House officials are "considering a major overhaul of its press and communications shop in the coming weeks," NBC's Mike Memoli and Carol Lee report. The first step is finding a new comms director, a process which senior adviser ANITA DUNN has already begun, they write. "Among those under consideration to be communications director are LIZ ALLEN, currently Assistant Secretary of State for Global Public Affairs; KATE BERNER, currently Deputy Communications Director, and ELIZABETH ALEXANDER, Communications Director for First Lady JILL BIDEN."

SURVEY SAYS — The latest POLITICO/Morning Consult poll has some generally good news for DONALD TRUMP as he decides whether and when to announce a possible 2024 campaign:

- If the 2024 GOP primary was held today, 53% of Republican voters and Republican-leaning independents say they would vote for Trump.
- Worth noting: That number has held steady and even slightly increased since last fall. In Oct. 2021, 47% of that same group said they'd support Trump. By late June, it was 51%.
- Of the 16 other potential 2024 GOP candidates tested, only five polled above 1%: Florida Gov. RON DESANTIS at 23%, MIKE PENCE at 7%, TED CRUZ at 3%, and MITT ROMNEY, NIKKI HALEY and LIZ CHENEY all tied at 2%. ("Would not vote" came in at 4%.)
- Among Democrats and Democratic-leaning independents, 72% said they'd back Biden if the 2024 primary was held today, while 20% said they'd support someone else and 8% said they would not vote.

Three more numbers to watch:

- Biden's approval rating: 38% approve, 58% disapprove. (Net: -20)
- The generic congressional ballot: Dems have a four-point advantage over Republicans, 45%-41%.
- Right track/wrong track: 22% of voters say that things in the country are generally going in the right direction, while 78% say they're on the wrong track.

THE WHITE HOUSE

HAPPENING TODAY — "President Joe Biden will announce new steps to combat climate change, but will stop short of declaring a national emergency that would unlock new tools for driving down greenhouse gases, the White House said Tuesday," per Kelsey Tamborrino, Zack Colman, Josh Siegel and Alex Guillén. "Biden will travel on Wednesday to a shuttered power plant in Massachusetts to talk about climate change, a trip that comes six days after the collapse of negotiations aimed at getting a climate bill through Congress."

— Related read: "Biden to announce small steps as climate agenda stalls," by Zack Colman

ABORTION FALLOUT — The White House is considering implementing "a narrow public health directive aimed at safeguarding nationwide access to abortion pills," Adam Cancryn reports. "The Biden team has zeroed in on that authority in recent days. They consider it the most feasible of the White House's limited options for protecting abortion rights, and have concluded that it could have the most immediate on-the-ground impact while also quelling Democrats' demands for stronger action."

CONGRESS

RESPONDING TO SCOTUS — The House on Tuesday passed the Respect for Marriage Act to codify same-sex and interracial marriages by a vote of 267-157. Every Democrat voted for the bill, as did 47 Republicans, per CBS' Melissa Quinn.

- Up next: A vote to "create a statutory right for people to access birth control and protect a range of contraceptive methods."
- Over in the Senate: "One Republican, Sen. SUSAN COLLINS of Maine, is a backer of the marriage equality measure, and GOP Sen. LISA MURKOWSKI of Alaska said she would like to see contraception and same-sex marriage rights protected under federal law."
- FWIW: Our colleagues Olivia Beavers and Anthony Adragna report that GOP leadership is not expected to whip against the contraception bill.

THE MANCHIN EFFECT — Burgess Everett and Marianne LeVine take the temperature of the Democratic caucus after the latest drama involving Sen. JOE MANCHIN (D-W.Va.) appears to be subsiding. "Nearly 18 months since Manchin became Democrats' elusive 50th Senate vote, it's become clear that most in his party — himself included — are ready to put endless party-line negotiations behind them," they write. "But Democrats are hardly in the mood to declare victory. Senate Majority Leader CHUCK SCHUMER proclaimed his caucus is 'excited' about the deal with Manchin, even though the topic was not the focus of the party's weekly lunch [on Tuesday]. And some colleagues are criticizing Manchin openly, a move that may only further alienate the centrist."

— One thing that's not likely to make it into the spending package: Covid aid. Jordain Carney and Sarah Ferris report that House Majority Leader STENY HOYER and Appropriations Chair ROSA DELAURO (D-Conn.) are cool on the idea. "Asked about the chances that the two issues are merged, Hoyer told reporters that, 'that's one alternative. I don't think it would be my alternative."

DEPT. OF VOTE COUNTING — House Democrats are trying to pass an assault weapons ban, but they're still shy of enough votes to get it through. Jordain Carney and Sarah Ferris have the latest on the effort. "This is a bill that destroyed the Democrats in '94. I guess, do we really have a death wish list as Democrats?' said Rep. KURT SCHRADER (D-Ore.), who will not be on the ballot in November as he has already lost his primary. The Oregonian centrist is one of more than a half-dozen Democrats either opposed to or undecided on the legislation, many from rural districts where gun safety laws are more contentious. Part of Schrader's argument: Democrats would risk stomping on their latest bipartisan gun bill by passing something that goes further but will not become law."

ALL POLITICS

THE TRUMP EFFECT — It's the question that's been looming over the Jan. 6 hearings for weeks now: Just how damaging are they turning out for Trump? Conventional wisdom said there wouldn't be any silver bullet. "What happened instead, a slow drip of negative coverage, may be just as damaging to the former president," David Siders writes this morning. "The fatigue is evident in public polling and in focus groups that suggest growing Republican openness to an alternative presidential nominee in 2024. The cumulative effect of the hearings, according to interviews with more than 20 Republican strategists, party officials and pollsters in recent days, has been to at least marginally weaken his support."

JUST POSTED — "Pence Campaigns for House Republicans, Papering Over Party Rift," by NYT's Annie Karni: "On Wednesday, his alliance with congressional Republicans will be on display when he speaks on Capitol Hill as a guest of the Republican Study Committee, a conservative caucus."

VANCE'S REQUEST — "Ohio Senate candidate Vance asking donors to help pay debts," by Roll Call's Kate Ackley

DESANTIS' DONORS — "DeSantis Plays the Silicon Valley Money Machine," by Puck's Theodore Schleifer: "Ron (and Casey) DeSantis have been spending some time with the Thiels and Musks of the world as the tech industry rallies around a potential new 2024 favorite."

WAR IN UKRAINE

- The U.S. on Tuesday "doubled down on its assertion that Russia will try to annex additional Ukrainian territory, warning that Moscow intends to claim as its own large swaths of the country's east and south sometime later this year," WaPo's Karoun Demirjian and Mariana Alfaro report.
- The ripple effect: "Europe Fears a Long, Cold Winter if Russia Ends Supply of Natural Gas," by WSJ's Jenny Strasburg, Josh Ulick and Juanje Gómez

JAN. 6 AND ITS AFTERMATH

THE GEORGIA INVESTIGATION — "False Georgia electors are deemed targets of DA criminal probe," by Kyle Cheney

AT THE BANNON TRIAL — STEVE BANNON "was 'thumbing his nose' at Congress and the law when he refused to comply last year with a subpoena about the Jan. 6 attack, a prosecutor told a jury Tuesday," during opening statements, WaPo's Devlin Barrett, Spencer Hsu and Tom Jackman write. "The defendant decided he was above the law, and he didn't have to follow the government's orders like his fellow citizens,' Assistant U.S. Attorney AMANDA VAUGHN said in federal court. 'So this whole case is about a guy who just refused to show up? Yes, it is that simple."

THE PANDEMIC

THE STATE OF THE VIRUS — Covid cases are spiking anew as another highly transmissible variant spreads in cities across the country. But local leaders are out of ideas to address the surge. "There are no new plans or bold initiatives on the horizon, officials in 10 states told POLITICO, even as much of the South remains unvaccinated and vaccination uptake among children nationwide is well below what state and federal officials would like. Instead, state and federal strategies for managing 130,000 new daily Covid cases in the U.S. are largely the same as they were for managing 30,000 new daily cases four months ago," Megan Messerly, Krista Mahr and Adam Cancryn report.

MEDIAWATCH

MISTAKES WERE MADE — "New Yorker Staffer Goes Nuclear on David Remnick," by The Daily Beast's Corbin Bolies: New Yorker magazine's ERIN OVERBEY "on Tuesday claimed she was put under an internal review only after raising concern over gender parity. Perhaps more troublingly, she claimed, was that two issues raised about her work were actually factual errors inserted into her writing by top boss DAVID REMNICK ... 'a male colleague who knew that I was under a performance review & could be penalized or reprimanded severely for them.' The archive editor said she has emails from Remnick to support her assertion. ...

"Reached by phone Tuesday afternoon, Remnick said he would call back only to later refer The Daily Beast to a New Yorker spokesperson [NATALIE RAABE], who wrote: 'The New Yorker is deeply committed to accuracy, and to suggest that anyone here would ever knowingly introduce errors into a story, for any reason, is absurd and just plain wrong.'" Heather Cox Richardson Jul 20 " " "

Last week, the inspector general of the Department of Homeland Security, Joseph Cuffari, told the House Select Committee to Investigate the January 6th Attack on the U.S. Capitol that the U.S. Secret Service had erased text messages between agents on January 5 and January 6, 2021, during the time of the attack. Last Friday, July 15, the committee subpoenaed those records from the U.S. Secret Service.

Today, the Secret Service said it had only one new text to provide and that any other texts from its agents around January 6 have been deleted and cannot be recovered. Agents were supposedly told to upload their messages to an internal agency drive before a general reset of cell phones, but many did not do so. A Secret Service spokesperson said that the deletion was not on purpose, but the phone reset began on January 27, eleven days after Congress requested the information be preserved.

Because its agents protected then-president Trump and then vice president Mike Pence on January 6, their text messages could provide important context for the events of that day including, for example, Pence's apparent reluctance to get into a vehicle driven by a Secret Service agent, or why agents apparently permitted Trump to record a video outside the White House while the Capitol was under attack.

Like every other branch of government, the Secret Service is required to preserve its records. Today, the chief records officer of the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), Laurence Brewer, sent a letter to Damian Kokinda, the records officer of the Department of Homeland Security, about "the potential unauthorized deletion" of the texts. Brewer asked the Secret Service to investigate and to send all information about deleted records to NARA within 30 days.

While this seems a bit like locking the door after the horse has left the barn, let me just say that no one with any brains at all messes with archivists. That Secret Service members were willing to purge texts that they knew by law they had to preserve suggests that they calculated it would be better to face the fallout for deleting the texts than the fallout from whatever was in those texts.

In Georgia, legal filings today revealed that the 16 people who created a false slate of electors for Trump have been told they are targets of the grand jury's investigation into the attempt to steal the 2020 election in that state. Those false electors are trying to quash subpoenas for their testimony, claiming the subpoenas are "unreasonable and oppressive." Despite reports that a Trump campaign official urged them to operate in "complete secrecy," they claim they did not know how "certain high level members of the Trump team" intended to use those false electors, and had provided the slate only in case the real slate of electors was rejected.

Thus, they say, they did nothing wrong. But they did sign their names to a document saying they were the "duly elected and qualified Electors for President and Vice President of the United States of America from the State of Georgia," and they submitted that document to NARA (archivists, again).

In an interview today, Speaker of the Wisconsin Assembly Robin Vos said that earlier this month (not a typo), Trump called him to ask him to decertify the 2020 election, a plan some Republicans in the legislature are backing. Vos notes that the legislature does not have the authority to "reclaim" electors. After Vos declined to join Trump's effort, Trump posted a message saying: "The Democrats would like to sincerely thank Robin, and all of his fellow RINOs [Republicans in Name Only], for letting them get away with 'murder.' A Rigged & Stolen Election!"

On Thursday, the January 6 committee will hold another public hearing, this one in prime time. Today, committee chair Bennie Thompson (D-MS) announced he has Covid, so the vice chair, Representative Liz Cheney (R-WY), will run the hearing.

The topic will be Trump's behavior on January 6, 2021 what he did do and what he didn't and former deputy national security advisor Matthew Pottinger and former deputy press secretary Sarah Matthews are scheduled to testify. Both Pottinger and Matthews resigned immediately after January 6. Pottinger said that he decided to quit when he read Trump's 2:24 p.m. tweet attacking Pence as not having "the courage to do what should have been done to protect our Country and our Constitution," even while Pence's life was in danger.

Arizona House Speaker Rusty Bowers, who testified before the January 6 committee, has been formally censured by the Arizona Republican Party. Tonight, the chair of the party announced the censure over a number of "offenses." The censure called for voters to throw Bowers out of office.

While Trump's people try to evade the law and establish minority rule, others are trying to change it to reflect the wishes of the majority of Americans.

Capitol Police today arrested 34 people, including 17 Democratic members of Congress, for engaging in nonviolent civil disobedience as they protested in front of the Supreme Court in support of abortion rights. Sitting on the street, they were blocking traffic, so police immediately ordered them to leave. When they refused, they were arrested.

Representative Carolyn Maloney (D-NY), who at 76 has seen all this before, later said: "There is no democracy if women do not have control over their own bodies and decisions about their own health, including reproductive care. I have the privilege of representing a state where reproductive rights are respected and protected the least I can do is put my body on the line for the 33 million women at risk of losing their rights. The Republican Party and the right-wing extremists behind this decision are not pro-life, but pro-controlling the bodies of women, girls, and any person who can become pregnant. Their ultimate goal is to institute a national ban on abortion. We will not let them win. We will be back."

On Friday, Lauren Robel, the former dean of Indiana University's Maurer School of Law, filed a misconduct complaint with the Indiana Supreme Court Disciplinary Commission against Indiana attorney general Todd Rokita. Rokita's inflammatory statements about the physician who provided abortion care to the ten-year-old rape victim forced to travel from Ohio to Indiana to obtain an abortion after the Supreme Court's June 24 Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health decision overturning Roe v. Wade, put her in danger. Rokita made baseless claims on the Fox News Channel that the physician had not reported the case properly as child abuse, and he began to investigate her medical license. In fact, the physician had reported the abuse as Indiana law required.

This afternoon, the House of Representatives passed a bill to protect gay marriage. The Respect for Marriage Act repeals the 2014 Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA), which defined marriage as "only a legal union between one man and one woman as husband and wife" and allowed states to refuse to recognize same-sex marriages. The 2015 Supreme Court decision in Obergefell v. Hodges overrode DOMA, but in case this Supreme Court goes after Obergefell, as it has suggested it might do, members of the House want to make sure DOMA doesn't again become the law of the land.

The bill passed by a vote of 267 to 157. Josh Marshall of Talking Points Memo noticed something about the vote. Not surprisingly, all Democrats voted in favor. Also not surprisingly, 157 Republicans 77% of the caucus voted no. The surprise is that 47 Republicans joined the Democrats to vote yes on the measure, and another 7 did not vote. These Republicans were likely willing to vote in favor in part because the new law defers to states to permit them to deny same-sex marriage licenses although it requires them to recognize marriages from other states and Republicans tried hard to argue that such a measure was unnecessary.

But in the end, 54 Republicans were unwilling to go on record against gay marriage, which a whopping 70% of Americans including 55% of Republicans support.

Today's PM — edited by Justin Green — is 486 words, a 2-minute read.

1 big thing: China vs. Pelosi

Speaker Pe os arr ves for her week y news conference ast Thursday. Photo: Tasos Katopod s/Getty Images

China is threatening "strong and resolute measures" if Speaker Pelosi follows through next month on her plans to lead a delegation to Taiwan.

Why it matters: Pelosi would be the highest-ranking U.S. lawmaker to visit since former Speaker Newt Gingrich in 1997.

 Pelosi's visit to Taiwan would "seriously violate" the "one China" policy, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesperson Zhao Lijian said at a press briefing.

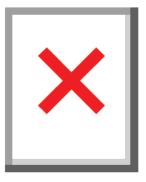

The big picture: Chinese President Xi Jinping has vowed to take control of the self-governing island, by force if necessary.

Pelosi's office wouldn't confirm the trip, first reported by the Financial Times.

17 House Democrats were detained this afternoon at an abortion rights rally protesting the Supreme Court decision overturning Roe v. Wade.

• U.S. Capitol Police said the demonstrators were arrested after they failed to follow three warnings to stop blocking a street near the Supreme Court, Axios' Andrew Solender and Oriana Gonzalez report.

Capitol Police said 35 people were arrested for "Crowding, Obstructing or Incommoding," including 17 members of Congress.

• Protesters sat down on First Street NE outside the Capitol building and blocked the road.

The lawmakers are expected to be released and fined.

 $\hfill 4$. Parting shot: Iconic SUV revival

Volkswagen's plan to roll out a new line of sporty electric trucks and SUVs under the resurrected Scout brand is a rare chance to win back Americans' hearts, Scout's new boss, Scott Keogh, tells Axios' Joann Muller.

• Why it matters: The Scout is among America's most iconic vehicles, developed in 1961 by International Harvester as a precursor to the modern SUV.

The VW Group aims to double its U.S. market share, currently at 5%.

Biden's Order On Abortion Compounds GCs' Confusion

By Michele Gorman

While President Joe Biden's recent executive order on reproductive health services is largely symbolic in the wake of the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing states to ban abortions, legal experts said general counsel grappling with how to respond should pay close attention to future guidance from federal agencies — and advise their companies to act carefully.

Reuters: Former CIA engineer convicted in WikiLeaks espionage case, Jonathan Stempel, July 13, 2022, 6:35 PM

A former CIA software engineer was convicted on Wednesday of leaking classified information to WikiLeaks from the spy agency, in one of the biggest such thefts in CIA history. Jurors in Manhattan federal court convicted Joshua Schulte, 33, on eight espionage charges and one obstruction charge over the so-called Vault 7 leak. Reuters: Biden to sign joint pledge with Israel to prevent Iran going nuclear, Steve Holland, July 14, 2022, 4:47 AM

U.S. President Joe Biden and Israeli Prime Minister Yair Lapid will sign a joint pledge to deny Iran nuclear weapons on Thursday, closing ranks after long-running disputes between the allies over global diplomacy with Tehran. Biden, who is visiting Jerusalem, told Israeli TV on Wednesday he was open to "last resort" use of force against Iran - an apparent move toward accommodating Israel's calls on world powers to present a "credible military threat". WaPo: White House wants transparency on American investment in China, Ellen

Nakashima, July 13, 2022, 3:07 PM

The Biden administration says it supports congressional action to require U.S. companies to notify the government before investing in critical sectors in China, endorsing in its first public statement on the matter a bipartisan push for transparency that pits business interests against national security. After more than a year of debate, the White House has achieved a consensus among relevant government agencies on an approach to legislation that mandates notification but empowers the president to go further: to develop regulations restricting and even prohibiting what officials say would be a broad set of investments in a narrow range of sectors that it believes undermine national security. NYT: Jan. 6 Panel Will Turn Over Evidence on Fake Electors to the Justice Dept, Luke Broadwater July 13, 2022, 10:00 PM

The Justice Department has asked the House committee investigating the Jan. 6 attack on the Capitol for evidence it has accumulated about the scheme by former President Donald J. Trump and his allies to put forward false slates of pro-Trump electors in battleground states won by Joseph R. Biden Jr. in 2020. Representative Bennie Thompson, Democrat of Mississippi and the chairman of the committee, disclosed the request to reporters on Capitol Hill on Wednesday, and a person familiar with the panel's work said discussions with the Justice Department about the false elector scheme were ongoing... A Justice Department official said the agency maintained its position that it was requesting copies of all transcripts of witness interviews. [Continue Reading] See also: Politico, CBS

NYT: A Trump Backer's Downfall as the Target of a Jan. 6 Conspiracy Theory, Alan Feuer, July 13, 2022, 7:00 PM

Up a winding country road, in a trailer park a half-mile from a cattle ranch, lives a man whose life has been ruined by a Jan. 6 conspiracy theory. Ray Epps has suffered enormously in the past 10 months as right-wing media figures and Republican politicians have baselessly described him as a covert government agent who helped to instigate the attack on the Capitol last year. AP: Witness tampering at Jan. 6 hearing? Cheney raises prospect, Eric Tucker, July 13, 2022, 5:45 PM

In the latest Jan. 6 hearing, already standing out for its notable moments, Rep. Liz Cheney saved the most startling for last. In her closing remarks, the co-chair of the House investigating committee said the panel had learned that former President Donald Trump had recently tried to contact a witness whom "you have not yet seen in these hearings." The witness apparently recognized the caller ID, and did not answer the phone, instead contacting a lawyer, who then told the committee. The committee in turn referred the matter to the Justice Department. [Continue Reading] See also: ABC, CNN, Guardian, NBC, NYT, Politico, Reuters, Washington Examiner

The Hill: Trump's 2020 outrage drives fear of 'insider' election threats, Robyn White, July 14, 2022, 5:15 AM

Former President Trump's campaign to undermine the 2020 election is fueling concerns over midterm election security, with experts warning of "insider" threats from the very officials charged with guarding the vote. Hundreds of GOP candidates in federal and state races have embraced his false claims about the election, including at least 20 Republican candidates running for secretary of state, according to an NPR analysis. NYT: U.S.C. Sex Scandals and the Paper That Tried to Cover Them Up, Katie Benner, July 13, 2022, 10:51 AM

"Bad City," by Paul Pringle, begins in Pasadena, Calif., in March 2016, with the kind of tip that reporters prize: An unconscious young woman. A drug-paraphernalia-strewn hotel room. An older male companion, reluctant to call for help, who turns out to be the dean of the University of Southern California's prestigious Keck School of Medicine. Pringle, an investigative reporter at The Los Angeles Times, believed that he could quickly push out a story about one more powerful man behaving badly, the bread-and-butter work of someone who keeps tabs on the city's most influential people for a living. In fact, the hotel episode led to a series of facts that were much darker than Pringle could have imagined. [Continue Reading]

ABC: 2 men charged in separate alleged human smuggling cases, Teddy Grant and Luke Barr, July 13, 2022, 6:16 PM

Two men have been charged in separate incidents for allegedly attempting to smuggle more than 70 migrants each through a border patrol checkpoint in Texas, weeks after the deadliest human trafficking incident in U.S. history. The departments of Justice and Homeland Security claim that Menietto Lateet Crawford, 41, and Denny Fuentes, 41, attempted to smuggle migrants across the border on June 14 and 15, respectively. The men were also each charged with conspiracy. [Continue Reading]

AP: Asylum wait lists at US border frustrate, confuse migrants, Elliot Spagat, July 13, 2022. 2:00 PM

Opaque waiting lists at the Mexico border to gain a chance at obtaining asylum in the United States have persisted under President Joe Biden, leading many migrants to give up and cross illegally or languish for months in border towns. U.S. preparations in late April to end pandemic-related limits on asylum led to the latest round of registering names. In Tijuana, an online registry run by advocacy group Al Otro Lado soared to about 50,000. In Piedras Negras, a migrant services center's list ballooned to 2,000 before being halted. Axios: Scoop: ICE is short $345 million, poised to spend more than ever, Stef W. Kight, July 13, 2022, 7:00 PM

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) will run out of money before October

unless the Department of Homeland Security pulls millions of dollars from other programs, as the surge of migrants at the border drives up costs, three sources familiar with the details tell Axios. Why it matters: ICE is one of the most controversial government agencies and a target for progressives because of its role in arresting and detaining undocumented immigrants. But under President Biden, it's poised to spend more taxpayer funds than ever as it closes an estimated $345 million shortfall for the current fiscal year. [Continue Reading]

AP: North Carolina Man Sent to Prison for $2.5M Tax Fraud, Unattributed, July 13, 2022, 4:16 PM

A North Carolina man is going to prison following his conviction stemming from a $2.5 million tax fraud scheme based on the preparation and filing of false tax returns, according to federal prosecutors. Court documents and statements said Joseph Octave, 49, of Charlotte was the leader of a multi-year, multimillion-dollar tax fraud scheme involving hundreds of fraudulent tax returns, according to a news release from the U.S. Attorney's Office. Octave owned and operated a tax preparation business in Charlotte. [Continue Reading]

The Post-Standard (Syracuse, NY): CNY donut shop owners sentenced to prison for hiding $4.5 million in cash sales, feds say, James McClendon, July 13, 2022, 5:49 PM The owners of a popular Central New York donut shop were sentenced to prison Wednesday after they were convicted for concealing $4.5 million in cash sales, federal prosecutors said. Rome residents John Zourdos, 69, his wife Helen Zourdos, 65, and their son Dimitrios Zourdos, were found guilty in November 2021 by a federal trial jury in Utica of conspiring to defraud the United States and for tax evasion, according to a news release issued by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of New York. JUDICIAL NOMINEES & APPOINTMENTS

AP: Biden nominates two more judges for western Washington, Unattributed, July 13, 2022, 7:00 PM

President Joe Biden on Wednesday made two more nominations for the federal bench in western Washington state: Seattle lawyers Jamal Whitehead and Kymberly Evanson. Whitehead is a civil litigator with the firm Schroeter Goldmark & Bender, where he focuses on workplace discrimination and unfair labor practices. He recently represented a class of immigration detainees at the Northwest Detention Center in Tacoma who successfully sued the private prison contractor The GEO Group for back pay, arguing that they should have been granted the minimum wage for cooking, cleaning and other tasks they performed [Continue Reading]

Washington Examiner: Is America's immigration crisis causing the fentanyl epidemic?, Anna Giaritelli, July 13, 2022, 4:48 PM

More black market fentanyl is being seized from drug smugglers at the U.S.-Mexico border than ever before — an indication of just how much of the powerful powdery substance cartels are moving into the United States. Consequently, U.S. overdose deaths have skyrocketed — all while illegal migration at the southern border soars to the highest levels in U.S. history. Ahead of the midterm elections, Republicans have pointed to both border phenomena as being connected. [Continue Reading]

WaPo: [PERSPECTIVE] Federal employees aren't happy. These agencies are especially troubled, Joe Davidson, July 13, 2022, 10:53 AM

The latest Best Places to Work in the Federal Government rankings, released on Wednesday, raise troubling issues for the Biden administration and those federal agencies whose reputations are falling fast. Across the government, the overall 4.5-point drop in employee engagement, an estimate of worker morale, is a disturbing indication that significant improvement is needed at agencies large and small. Almost two-thirds of the agencies saw their scores drop or stay flat — not a good sign. Employee engagement scores are the key element in the annual ratings produced by the nonprofit Partnership for Public Service and the Boston Consulting Group. [Continue Reading]

WaPo: White House wants transparency on American investment in China, Ellen Nakashima, July 13, 2022, 3:07 PM

The Biden administration says it supports congressional action to require U.S. companies to notify the government before investing in critical sectors in China, endorsing in its first public statement on the matter a bipartisan push for transparency that pits business interests against national security. After more than a year of debate, the White House has achieved a consensus among relevant government agencies on an approach to legislation that mandates notification but empowers the president to go further: to develop regulations restricting and even prohibiting what officials say would be a broad set of investments in a narrow range of sectors that it believes undermine national security. NBC: [OPINION] Trump's 'executive privilege' letter may have little to do with trying to help Bannon, Shan Wu, July 14, 2022, 4:22 AM

The lead-up to the contempt of Congress trial of former Donald Trump adviser Steve Bannon may reveal more about the former president's planned defense strategy than what defense Bannon intends to raise. Bannon is going to trial for his refusal to comply with the Jan. 6 House select committee's subpoena for months. In a last-ditch effort to weasel his way out of his upcoming trial, he requested a delay and said he would now be willing to comply with the committee's investigation. What caused this change of heart? A letter from Trump on Saturday claiming that he had invoked executive privilege but was now "waiving" it. [Continue Reading]

CNN: [OPINION] The Supreme Court's EPA decision is a wake-up call. Congress must act now, Suzanne DiBianca, July 13, 2022, 11:00 AM

The US Supreme Court's ruling limiting the EPA's authority to regulate greenhouse gas emissions is a wake-up call for Congress to pass urgent and meaningful legislation on climate and clean energy. The ruling not only impedes the federal government's ability to slow climate change — it also sets an alarming precedent that may inhibit other federal agencies from enacting critical climate policies to protect the lives and livelihoods of the American people. Reuters: Teva takes $235 mln 'skinny label' dispute with GSK to U.S. Supreme Court, Blake Brittain, July 13, 2022, 4:59 PM

Teva Pharmaceuticals USA Inc has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn its $235 million loss in a closely watched patent dispute with GlaxoSmithKline LLC, arguing in a petition made public Wednesday that the case threatens an important protection for generic drugmakers. The case could be important for the future of so-called "skinny labels," which allow generic drugmakers to avoid patent claims if the generic's government-mandated drug label omits potentially infringing uses of the brand-name drug. Forbes: [OPINION] The Supreme Court And The Demise Of The "Make America Great Again" Ambition, Frank Van Gansbeke, July 13, 2022, 11:00 PM

"...We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness..." The second paragraph of the Declaration of Independence begins with words that are fundamental to the United States of America. It goes on to say that the role of government is to protect these rights. Yet three recent Supreme Court decisions will damage, not protect, the ability of citizens to live lives that realize the Declaration's ideal. [Continue Reading]

The Hill: [OPINION] What can be done when the Supreme Court turns political?, William Becker, July 13, 2022, 6:30 PM

The U.S. Supreme Court has occupied an exalted place in America. Its justices are the fellowship of the final word. They are expected to rise above politics to fulfill the promise of equal justice under the law. But in several recent rulings, the court has shown it is neither infallible nor apolitical. Its six conservative Justices clearly intend to shift the nation to the right, even to the point of reversing "settled law" and ignoring precedents set by their predecessors. [Continue Reading]

AP: Biden nominates two more judges for western Washington, Unattributed, July 13, 2022, 7:00 PM President Joe Biden on Wednesday made two more nominations for the federal bench in western Washington state: Seattle lawyers Jamal Whitehead and Kymberly Evanson. Whitehead is a civil litigator with the firm Schroeter Goldmark & Bender, where he focuses on workplace discrimination and unfair labor practices. He recently represented a class of immigration detainees at the Northwest Detention Center in Tacoma who successfully sued the private prison contractor The GEO Group for back pay, arguing that they should have been granted the minimum wage for cooking, cleaning and other tasks they performed [Continue Reading]

Reuters: Biden's six newest judicial nominees include Hispanic, LGBTQ firsts, Nate Raymond, July 13, 2022, 4:30 PM

President Joe Biden on Wednesday nominated six federal judges in Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and Washington, but the list once again did not include a Republican abortion opponent, who the White House recently planned to name to a judgeship in Kentucky. The latest batch of district court nominees included two who would be the first Hispanics to serve on the federal district courts in Massachusetts and northern New York and the first openly LGBTQ judge in Virginia. Daily Beast: Why the Hell Isn't Biden Ending the Federal War on Cannabis?, Ben Burgis, July 13, 2022, 8:00 PM

Joe Biden and the Democrats are in deep trouble. The president's approval ratings are in the sewer and all signs continue to indicate that his party will be pulverized this fall. It's not surprising. Biden enjoyed public support at the beginning of his presidency when he was actually doing things for the public (like economic stimulus and child tax credits). All of that's a distant memory now. The president and his spokespeople barely even talk about the ambitious legislative proposals they introduced with so much fanfare in 2021. And gas and food keep getting more expensive. WaPo: [PERSPECTIVE] Federal employees aren't happy. These agencies are especially troubled, Joe Davidson, July 13, 2022, 10:53 AM

The latest Best Places to Work in the Federal Government rankings, released on Wednesday, raise troubling issues for the Biden administration and those federal agencies whose reputations are falling fast. Across the government, the overall 4.5-point drop in employee engagement, an estimate of worker morale, is a disturbing indication that significant improvement is needed at agencies large and small. Almost two-thirds of the agencies saw their scores drop or stay flat — not a good sign. Employee engagement scores are the key element in the annual ratings produced by the nonprofit Partnership for Public Service and the Boston Consulting Group.

AP: Judge won't delay trial for Trump ex-adviser Steve Bannon, Nomaan Merchant, July 11, 2022, 2:00 PM

A federal judge on Monday declined to delay the upcoming trial of Steve Bannon, a one-time adviser to former President Donald Trump who faces contempt of Congress charges after refusing for months to cooperate with the House committee investigating the Jan. 6 Capitol insurrection. Bannon is still scheduled to go on trial next week despite telling the House committee late Saturday that he is now prepared to testify. It's unclear whether Bannon will again decline to appear before the committee with the trial pending. NYT: Raskin Brings Expertise on Right-Wing Extremism to Jan. 6 Inquiry, Luke Broadwater, July 11, 2022, 6:00 PM

When Representative Jamie Raskin enters a Capitol Hill hearing room on Tuesday to lay out what the House committee investigating the Jan. 6 attack has uncovered about the role of domestic extremists in the riot, it will be his latest — and potentially most important — step in a five-year effort to crush a dangerous movement. Long before the Jan. 6, 2021, assault, Mr. Raskin, Democrat of Maryland, had thrown himself into stamping out the rise of white nationalism and domestic extremism in America. [Continue Reading]

NYT: Hutchinson Testimony Jolts Justice Dept. to Discuss Trump's Conduct More Openly, Katie Benner and Glenn Thrush, July 11, 2022, 3:26 PM

For the past year and a half, the Justice Department has approached former President Donald J. Trump's effort to overturn the 2020 election results with a follow-the-evidence strategy that to critics appeared to border on paralysis — and that limited discussions of his role, even inside the department. Then came Cassidy Hutchinson. The electrifying public testimony delivered last month to the House Jan. 6 panel by Ms. Hutchinson, a former White House aide who was witness to many key moments, jolted top Justice Department officials into discussing the topic of Mr. Trump more directly, at times in the presence of Attorney General Merrick B. Garland and Deputy Attorney General Lisa O. Monaco. In conversations at the department the day after Ms. [Continue Reading] See also: Fox

LAT: Connecting Trumpworld to extremist groups could be Jan. 6 committee's biggest moment, Sarah D. Wire, July 11, 2022, 2:16 PM

The committee investigating the Capitol insurrection will focus for the first time this week on the relationship between people in former President Trump's orbit and the extremist groups that planned and orchestrated the violence on Jan. 6, 2021. The hearing could be one of the most consequential held by the panel, potentially answering the long unresolved question of whether Trump knew that far right extremist groups such as the Proud Boys and Oath Keepers would storm the Capitol, and whether the president was in contact through intermediaries with the groups' leaders, who have since been indicted for seditious conspiracy. Bloomberg: Jan. 6 Committee Postpones Prime-Time Hearing Planned for Thursday, Billy House, July 11, 2022, 12:37 PM

The House committee investigating the Jan. 6 assault on the US Capitol by a mob of Donald Trump's supporters has decided to delay a hearing planned for prime time Thursday, a person familiar with the move said. The Thursday hearing was to explore the former president's actions and activities on Jan. 6 during the 187 minutes the committee it says it took between when the Capitol attack began and Trump tweeted for supporters to go home. WaPo: [OPINION] Biden's trip to Saudi Arabia erodes our moral authority, Publisher Fred Ryan, July 11

Inexperienced politicians often learn the hard way about the difference between campaigning and governing, making bold statements on the trail that later require embarrassing reversals. But when it comes to international realpolitik, no recent candidate could have been better informed than Joe Biden. After decades on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and eight years as vice president, Biden campaigned in 2020 partly on his foreign-policy experience. When, seeking votes, Biden vowed to make Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman a "pariah" for his role in murdering Washington Post contributing columnist Jamal Khashoggi, the world had every reason to think he meant it. So why is President Biden now going to Jiddah on bended knee to shake the "pariah's" bloodstained hand? Once again, he is seeking votes. [Continue Reading]

China's government used American private investigators to harass dissidents in the United States, according to a federal indictment of five people made public last week. The indictment identified five men who are charged with acting as foreign agents of China in a scheme to monitor and harass three dissidents who were not identified by name. Breon Peace, U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of New York, said the case involves "a multifaceted campaign to silence, harass, discredit and spy on U.S. residents for exercising their freedom of speech. AP: Another US appeals court upholds right to record police, Colleen Slevin, July 11, 2022, 5:00 PM

People have a right protected by the First Amendment to film police while they work, a Western U.S. appeals court ruled Monday in a decision that concurs with decisions made by six of the nation's other 12 appeals court. The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver ruling came in the case of a YouTube journalist and blogger who claimed that a suburban Denver officer blocked him from recording a 2019 traffic stop. Citing decisions from the other courts over about two decades as well as First Amendment principles, the 10th Circuit said the right to record police was clearly established at the time and reinstated the lawsuit of the blogger, Abade Irizarry. WWLP-NBC/CW (Springfield, MA): AG Healey backs ATF rule on ghost guns, Matt Murphy, July 11, 2022, 10:38 PM

With a Texas gun parts manufacturer challenging the Biden administration's new rule regulating "ghost guns," Attorney General Maura Healey joined a coalition of 20 top state prosecutors in supporting the ability of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to regulate the sale of the currently untraceable guns. Healey signed on to a brief filed last week in U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas supporting the final rule issued by the ATF in April that would give law enforcement the ability to trace "ghost guns" and prevent unqualified individuals from purchasing parts to make their own weapons. NYT: Justice Department Taps Oregon Official to Run Troubled Bureau of Prisons, Glenn Thrush, July 11, 2022, 8:00 PM

Colette S. Peters, the longtime director of the Oregon Department of Corrections, has been tapped to lead the chronically mismanaged and understaffed federal Bureau of Prisons, according to two people familiar with the decision. The Justice Department, which oversees the bureau, is expected to announce her appointment this week, perhaps as early as Tuesday. The bureau, a sprawling network of 122 facilities with an annual budget of around $10 billion, houses about 158,000 inmates. [Continue Reading]

Reuters: Judge orders Lindsey Graham to testify before grand jury in Trump election probe, Kanishka Singh, July 11, 2022, 3:42 PM

A judge ordered U.S. Senator Lindsey Graham to testify in front of a special grand jury in Georgia investigating former President Donald Trump's alleged attempts to overturn the results of the 2020 election. Fulton County Superior Court Judge Robert McBurney ordered that Graham will be required to testify on Aug. 2. The judge's certification filed on Monday described Graham as a "necessary and material witness" to the grand jury probe. [Continue Reading]

USA Today: 'It wouldn't be my choice for judge': Senate Democrats slam Biden's planned anti-abortion pick, Joey Garrison, Dylan Wells, Joe Sonka and Andrew Wolfson, July 12, 2022, 12:31 AM

Several Senate Democrats said they would vote against the confirmation of a conservative, anti-abortion federal judge nominee if President Joe Biden follows through with a purported deal with Republican Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell. The strong reaction from Democrats on Biden's planned nomination of attorney Chad Meredith in Kentucky raised the prospects of the president's own party blocking the pick should he move forward. WSJ: DOJ's Criminal Chief Places Prevention at Forefront of Agency's White-Collar Crime Efforts, Dylan Tokar, July 12, 2022, 5:30 AM

A key figure in the Justice Department's campaign to crack down on white-collar crime is looking to use a tool he brought to bear both as a prosecutor fighting gang violence in New Orleans and as a lawyer for the city's sole Fortune 500 company. Stopping crime before it happens should be a central goal of the more than 1,150 employees of the department's criminal division, said Assistant Attorney General Kenneth Polite, who took charge of it last year.

JAN. 6 COMMITTEE

AP: Jan. 6 panel probes Trump's 'siren call' to extremists, Lisa Mascaro, July 11, 2022, 12:00 PM The Jan. 6 committee is preparing to highlight the way violent far-right extremists answered Donald Trump's "siren call" to come to Washington for a big rally, as some now facing rare sedition charges over the deadly U.S. Capitol attack to overturn the presidential election. The panel investigating the Jan. 6, 2021, Capitol siege is set to convene Tuesday for a public hearing probing what it calls the final phase of Trump's multi-pronged effort to halt Joe Biden's victory. As dozens of lawsuits and false claims of voter fraud fizzled, Trump tweeted the rally invitation, a pivotal moment, the committee said. The far-right Proud Boys, Oath Keepers and others now facing criminal charges readily answered. [Continue Reading] See also: ABC, CNN, CNN-2, Insider, NBC, NPR, USA Today, WVIT-NBC (New Britain, CT)

AP: Judge won't delay trial for Trump ex-adviser Steve Bannon, Nomaan Merchant, July 11, 2022, 2:00 PM A federal judge on Monday declined to delay the upcoming trial of Steve Bannon, a one-time adviser to former President Donald Trump who faces contempt of Congress charges after refusing for months to cooperate with the House committee investigating the Jan. 6 Capitol insurrection. Bannon is still scheduled to go on trial next week despite telling the House committee late Saturday that he is now prepared to testify. It's unclear whether Bannon will again decline to appear before the committee with the trial pending. WaPo: Jan. 6 hearing expected to focus on link between militants, White House, Jacqueline Alemany and Hannah Allam, July 11, 2022, 7:44 PM

The House select committee investigating the Jan. 6, 2021, insurrection plans to hold its seventh public hearing on Tuesday, with an expected focus on the ways in which former president Donald Trump and his allies summoned farright militant groups to Washington as he grew increasingly desperate to hold on to power. The hearing is likely to drill down on the period after states cast their electoral college votes on Dec. 14, 2020, action that confirmed Joe Biden's victory. Trump, the committee is expected to argue, then shifted his focus to using the date of the congressional counting of the votes, Jan. 6, 2021, to block a peaceful transfer of power. NYT: Raskin Brings Expertise on Right-Wing Extremism to Jan. 6 Inquiry, Luke Broadwater, July 11, 2022, 6:00 PM

When Representative Jamie Raskin enters a Capitol Hill hearing room on Tuesday to lay out what the House committee investigating the Jan. 6 attack has uncovered about the role of domestic extremists in the riot, it will be his latest — and potentially most important — step in a five-year effort to crush a dangerous movement. Long before the Jan. 6, 2021, assault, Mr. Raskin, Democrat of Maryland, had thrown himself into stamping out the rise of white nationalism and domestic extremism in America. [Continue Reading]

NYT: Hutchinson Testimony Jolts Justice Dept. to Discuss Trump's Conduct More Openly, Katie Benner and Glenn Thrush, July 11, 2022, 3:26 PM

For the past year and a half, the Justice Department has approached former President Donald J. Trump's effort to overturn the 2020 election results with a follow-the-evidence strategy that to critics appeared to border on paralysis — and that limited discussions of his role, even inside the department. Then came Cassidy Hutchinson. The electrifying public testimony delivered last month to the House Jan. 6 panel by Ms. Hutchinson, a former White House aide who was witness to many key moments, jolted top Justice Department officials into discussing the topic of Mr. Trump more directly, at times in the presence of Attorney General Merrick B. Garland and Deputy Attorney General Lisa O. Monaco. In conversations at the department the day after Ms. [Continue Reading] See also: Fox

LAT: Connecting Trumpworld to extremist groups could be Jan. 6 committee's biggest moment, Sarah D. Wire, July 11, 2022, 2:16 PM

The committee investigating the Capitol insurrection will focus for the first time this week on the relationship between people in former President Trump's orbit and the extremist groups that planned and orchestrated the violence on Jan. 6, 2021. The hearing could be one of the most consequential held by the panel, potentially answering the long unresolved question of whether Trump knew that far right extremist groups such as the Proud Boys and Oath Keepers would storm the Capitol, and whether the president was in contact through intermediaries with the groups' leaders, who have since been indicted for seditious conspiracy. MSNBC: Bannon's offered Jan. 6 testimony is designed to provide chaos, not clarity, Hayes Brown, July 11, 2022. 6:09 PM

I think it's safe to say that Steve Bannon thinks of himself as a very clever person. The former White House adviser and Breitbart executive chairman has been throwing bombs and dodging consequences fairly successfully for years now. So how, then, to respond to Bannon's offer over the weekend to finally testify before the House Jan. 6 committee after refusing to cooperate? AP: Another US appeals court upholds right to record police, Colleen Slevin, July 11, 2022, 5:00 PM People have a right protected by the First Amendment to film police while they work, a Western U.S. appeals court ruled Monday in a decision that concurs with decisions made by six of the nation's other 12 appeals court. The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver ruling came in the case of a YouTube journalist and blogger who claimed that a suburban Denver officer blocked him from recording a 2019 traffic stop. Citing decisions from the other courts over about two decades as well as First Amendment principles, the 10th Circuit said the right to record police was clearly established at the time and reinstated the lawsuit of the blogger, Abade Irizarry. AP: Biden admin: Docs must offer abortion if mom's life at risk, Zeke Miller, July 11, 2022, 9:00 PM
The Biden administration on Monday told hospitals that they "must" provide abortion services if the life of the mother is at risk, saying federal law on emergency treatment guidelines preempts state laws in jurisdictions that w ban the procedure without any exceptions following the Supreme Court's decision to end a constitutional right to abortion. The Department of Health and Human Services cited requirements on medical facilities in the Emergency Medical Treatment and Labor Act, or EMTALA. The law requires medical facilities to determine whether a person seeking treatment may be in labor or whether they face an emergency health situation — or one that could develop into an emergency — and to provide treatment. WaPo: Domestic terror cases increasingly cross borders, FBI director says, Devlin Barrett, July 8, 2022, 3:20 PM

Many domestic terrorism cases now have an international component, as would-be killers are "egging each other on" and drawing inspiration from racist or neo-Nazi attacks overseas, the head of the FBI and his British counterpart said Friday. FBI Director Christopher A. Wray, speaking to reporters alongside Ken McCallum, director general of the British domestic security agency MI5, said their agencies have spent decades developing tip-sharing systems to handle international terrorism cases, but that "muscle memory" is now being applied to domestic terrorism investigations. WSJ: Calls for TikTok Probe Widen, Adding to Pressure on Biden to Weigh In, John D. McKinnon, July 8, 2022, 8:05 AM

Calls for an investigation into the security risks posed by the video app TikTok are widening, adding to pressure on President Biden to make good on his year-old promise to get tough on apps that could share Americans' personal data with foreign adversaries. The Democratic chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee and the panel's top Republican sent a joint letter to the Federal Trade Commission this week urging an investigation of TikTok's data-handling and other practices. TikTok's parent, ByteDance Ltd., has its headquarters in Beijing. [Continue Reading]

Bloomberg: Biden Lauds CIA for Punching 'Gigantic Hole' in Putin's Playbook, Akayla Gardner, Justin Sink, and Jordan Fabian, July 8, 2022, 5:43 PM

President Joe Biden praised the Central Intelligence Agency's efforts to expose Russia's plans to invade Ukraine, telling the staff that they had "punched a gigantic hole" in President Vladimir Putin's objectives. "It was thanks to the incredible work of our intelligence professionals that we were able to forewarn the world what Vladimir Putin was planning in Ukraine," Biden said during his first visit as president to CIA headquarters in Langley, Virginia. Reuters: Putin warns West: sanctions risk energy price spike catastrophe, Guy Faulconbridge, July 8, 2022, 12:23 PM

President Vladimir Putin warned the West on Friday that continued sanctions against Russia over the war in Ukraine risked triggering catastrophic energy price rises for consumers around the world. Putin, who casts the sanctions imposed on Russia as a declaration of economic war, said that Western calls to reduce reliance on Russian energy had made global markets "feverish" with spikes in oil and gas. NYT: Florida Man Sentenced to 20 Years for Uploading Bomb-Making Video, Vimal Matel, July 9, 2022, 9:25 AM

A Florida man who had pledged support to ISIS was sentenced on Thursday to 20 years in prison for uploading a video he believed would help the terrorist group make bombs, the federal authorities said on Thursday. The man, Romeo Xavier Langhorne, 32, of St. Augustine, Fla., pleaded guilty in March 2021 to one count of providing material support to ISIS, according to a statement from the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Florida. The sentence, handed down in U.S. District Court in Jacksonville, also included an additional 15 years of supervised release, the statement said. [Continue Reading]

Reuters: Oath Keeper brought explosives to D.C. ahead of Jan. 6 attack, prosecutor

says, David Morgan, July 9, 2022, 11:57 AM

A member of the Oath Keepers extremist group brought explosives to the Washington, D.C., area ahead of the Jan. 6, 2021, attack on the U.S. Capitol by supporters of former President Donald Trump, according to the U.S. Justice Department. In a court filing, federal prosecutors alleged that Jeremy Brown, an Oath Keepers member from Florida, drove explosives to a Virginia hotel in his recreational vehicle on Jan. 6. A second member of the group, Thomas Caldwell, was later found in possession of a "death list" that included the name of a Georgia election official, according to the document. The founder of the Oath Keepers militia group, Elmer Stewart Rhodes, is willing to testify to the House Committee investigating the Jan. 6 assault on the US Capitol, his attorney said, but only if it is during a public session. "He's willing to waive his Fifth Amendment rights, he wants to testify in public, and he wants to testify live," James Lee Bright said in a telephone interview. "I don't think they'll go along with that." [Continue Reading]

WABE-NPR (Atlanta, GA): DOJ: Oath Keeper's 'death list' targeted Georgia elections official, Patrick Saunders, July 9, 2022, 2:26 PM

Federal prosecutors on Friday released new details about several Oath Keepers charged with seditious conspiracy in the Jan. 6 attack on the U.S. Capitol, saying one co-defendant kept a "death list" that included the name of a Georgia elections official and their family member. The Justice Department cited the list in a previous filing in Feb. 2021, but did not reveal that it included a Georgia official until Friday. [Continue Reading]

Bloomberg: Jan. 6 Committee Is Considering a Prime-Time Hearing for Next Week, Billy House, July 8, 2022, 9:58 AM

The House committee investigating the insurrection at the US Capitol is considering a second televised hearing next week, this one in prime time on Thursday, people familiar with the planning said. Those people did not provide a specific topic, or say whether the tentative hearing, which would be the committee's eighth since June, would be its last one until a late August or September presentation of a report on its findings. The saga of the Special Victims Division is the latest illustration of the extraordinary measures required to meaningfully reform the nation's largest police department. When the N.Y.P.D. conducted sweeping surveillance of Muslim communities in the years after the Sept. 11 attacks, class-action litigation was needed to put an end to the practice. When the department violated the civil rights of millions of innocent Black and Latino men by targeting them for unconstitutional police searches, years of lawsuits were needed to curb the tactic. WSJ: Biden Administration Asks Supreme Court to Rule on Immigration Enforcement, Jess Bravin and Michelle Hackman, July 8, 2022, 5:36 PM

The Biden administration asked the Supreme Court Friday to reinstate immigration enforcement guidelines that a lower court blocked after Texas and Louisiana filed suit arguing that the policy lets too many noncitizens with criminal records go free while their cases are processed. The guidelines focus detention efforts on noncitizens deemed to threaten national security, public safety and border security. Reuters: States' top lawyers ask Supreme Court to review charity-only class settlements, Alison Frankel, July 8, 2022, 4:12 PM

State attorneys general are once again calling on the U.S. Supreme Court to restrict the use of charitable donations as an alternative to class payouts in class action settlements. Led by Arizona's Mark Brnovich, 20 state AGs filed an amicus brief on Thursday, backing a petition for Supreme Court review of a $13 million privacy class-action settlement that called for Google Inc to donate money to universities and non-profits dedicated to internet privacy issues instead of paying the funds to class members. WaPo: Brett Kavanaugh is the latest target of protests at D.C. restaurants, Emily Heil and Tim Carman, July 8, 2022, 4:13 PM

After the Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade, eliminating the fundamental right to abortion, comedian Samantha Bee floated a plan for targeting the conservatives on the court who made up the majority opinion: "We have to raise hell — in our cities, in Washington, in every restaurant Justice Alito eats at for the rest of his life," she implored viewers of her latenight show, "Full Frontal with Samantha Bee." "Because if Republicans have made our lives hell, it's time to return the favor." [Continue Reading]

MARIJUANA LEGALIZATION

WGBH (Boston, MA): Mass. marijuana equity advocates say federal action would 'level the playing field', Kana Ruhalter, July 8, 2022, 11:00 AM

After a six-month wait, the Department of Justice finally responded to Sen. Elizabeth Warren and Sen. Cory Booker's letter to the White House asking President Joe Biden's administration to effectively decriminalize marijuana and pardon all non-violent cannabis-related offenses. Warren's office called the 230-word, half-page response "extraordinarily disappointing" and issued another statement with five fellow senators on Wednesday urging the administration to take federal action. NYT: At 79, Biden Is Testing the Boundaries of Age and the Presidency, Peter Baker, July 10, 2022, 6:38 PM

When President Biden leaves Tuesday night for a four-day swing through the Middle East, he will presumably be more rested than he would have been had he followed the original plan.

The trip was initially tacked onto another journey last month to Europe, which would have made for an arduous 10-day overseas trek until it became clear to Mr. Biden's team that such extended travel might be unnecessarily taxing for a 79-year-old president, or "crazy," as one official put it. NYT: [EDITORIAL] What the Biden Administration Could Do Now to Protect Abortion Rights, Editorial Board, July 8, 2022, 6:36 PM

Less than three weeks have passed since the Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade, and already chaos reigns. Several states are moving to ban abortion almost completely, abortion-rights proponents are challenging those bans in court and in some cases, judges have been asked to issue injunctions that could, for a time, prevent the bans from going into effect.

Bloomberg: Biden Brags There Are More Private-Sector Jobs Now Than Under Trump, Justin Sink, July 8, 2022, 10:06 AM

President Joe Biden said Friday's jobs report showed that "our private sector has recovered all of the jobs lost during the pandemic, and added jobs on top of that" but predicted employment gains would slow in the coming months as the country transitions to "stable growth." "We have more Americans working in the private sector today than any day during Donald Trump's Presidency -- more people than any time in our history," Biden said in a statement, adding that the employment situation left the US "uniquely well positioned to tackle a range of global economic challenges – from global inflation to the economic fallout from Putin's war" in Ukraine. LAT: [OPINION] Prosecute Trump? Merrick Garland is investigating aggressively but prosecuting cautiously, Doyle McManus, July 10, 2022, 7:00 AM

The House committee on the Jan. 6, 2021, insurgency, whose hearings resume this week, has produced impressive evidence that could allow prosecutors to argue that former President Trump committed crimes as he tried to overturn the 2020 election. Thanks to the hearings, we now know more clearly that Trump tried to bully Vice President Mike Pence into blocking Congress' count of electoral votes, tried to bully Justice Department officials into declaring the election fraudulent even though they knew it wasn't and stood by with seeming approval while his armed supporters sacked the Capitol. Arkansas Democrat-Gazette: Michigan seeks details on pipeline plan, Rann Miller, July 10, 2022, 1:00 AM

A Michigan regulatory panel said Thursday that it needs more information about safety risks before it can rule on Enbridge Energy's plan to extend an oil pipeline through a tunnel beneath a waterway linking two of the Great Lakes. [...] Enbridge is defying Michigan Gov. Gretchen Whitmer's 2020 order to shut down the line, a move long sought by environmental groups and Native American tribes who fear a rupture would devastate the lakes. The company says the line is in good condition and contends in a federal lawsuit that the Democratic governor doesn't have the jurisdiction to shut it down. [Continue Reading]

DRIVING THE DAY

NOW STREAMING — ALEX HOLDER'S "Unprecedented," the three-part documentary about DONALD TRUMP and his family, dropped at 4 a.m. today on Discovery+. "Orange you glad it's premiere day?" Holder tweeted, referring to the noticeably heavier makeup on Trump in his sitdown interviews with the filmmaker.

MUST-READ — If you read only one thing this weekend, make it this Maureen Dowd classic on ERIC ADAMS. You couldn't ask for a better match of writer and subject:

"On a breezy June night in the Bronx, I was on the balcony at the restaurant Zona De Cuba, sipping a mojito, vibing to a salsa band and peeking at a special menu for the plant-based mayor of New York, Eric Adams, who was soon to arrive. ...

"I pulled out a notebook, getting ready to interview Adams. But MAXWELL YOUNG, the mayor's communications director, announced, 'We have to go.' The mayor had pulled up outside in his black Suburban, but plans had changed. We ran out to the motorcade and headed to the Upper East Side.

"Suddenly, we were staring down at a sidewalk full of blood."

BIDEN AGONISTES — President JOE BIDEN continues to struggle. N.Y. Mag's Ed Kilgore notes that the president "is now polling worse than Trump was at the same point in his presidency."

Two big pieces delve into two of Biden's biggest problems: the continued dissatisfaction on the left and the age issue.

1. The White House pushes back against its critics in this WaPo piece from Ashley Parker, Yasmeen Abutaleb and Tyler Pager on "the administration's 14-day struggle to craft a message and policy plan after the Supreme Court decision in Dobbs."

KATE BEDINGFIELD, the outgoing comms director, with a statement making waves online:

"Joe Biden's goal in responding to Dobbs is not to satisfy some activists who have been consistently out of step with the mainstream of the Democratic Party. It's to deliver help to women who are in danger and assemble a broad-based coalition to defend a woman's right to choose now, just as he assembled such a coalition to win during the 2020 campaign."

The reaction: "Outrage Erupts as White House Calls Abortion Rights Activists 'Out of

2. From Peter Baker's front-page take on Biden's age in the NYT this morning:

"In interviews, some sanctioned by the White House and some not, more than a dozen current and former senior officials and advisers uniformly reported that Mr. Biden remained intellectually engaged, asking smart questions at meetings, grilling aides on points of dispute, calling them late at night, picking out that weak point on Page 14 of a memo and rewriting speeches like his abortion remarks on Friday right up until the last minute.

"But they acknowledged Mr. Biden looks older than just a few years ago, a political liability that cannot be solved by traditional White House stratagems like staff shake-ups or new communications plans. His energy level, while impressive for a man of his age, is not what it was, and some aides quietly watch out for him. ... Although White House officials insist they make no special accommodations the way Reagan's team did, privately they try to guard Mr. Biden's weekends in Delaware as much as possible."

DAVID GERGEN, who has advised four presidents: "I do feel it's inappropriate to seek that office after you're 80 or in your 80s. ... I have just turned 80 and I have found over the last two or three years I think it would have been unwise for me to try to run any organization. You're not quite as sharp as you once were."

MIKE DONILON, who has advised Biden for years: "On the way back from long trips when the staff is wiped out, he'll want to spend four hours planning for how we hit the ground running on domestic policy, when all much younger staff want to do is sleep."

Biden on the WaPo op-ed page: "Why I'm going to Saudi Arabia"

CHENEY'S DEM SUPERFANS — As Biden shrinks, LIZ CHENEY continues to rise as the leader of the opposition to Trump. While the president is abroad this week, Cheney will once again be in the political spotlight when the Jan. 6 committee convenes for its next public hearing on Tuesday. Three key Cheney reads:

- 1. NYT's Kate Kelly and Maggie Haberman dive into Cheney's massive fundraising haul and report on some of the big-name Democratic donors writing her checks:
- JEFFREY KATZENBERG: "We agree on little, if anything...But she has done something that very, very few people in history have done, which is she's put her country over party and politics to stand in defense of our Constitution."
- DMITRI MEHLHORN, "a political strategist who advises the LinkedIn co-founder Reid Hoffman": "Cheney is the most important politician in America right now."
- REID HOFFMAN, "a major Democratic donor whom Mr. Mehlhorn said had quietly begun supporting Ms. Cheney": "Liz Cheney demonstrates incredible integrity, standing for America."
- SETH KLARMAN, "billionaire hedge fund manager [and] an independent with liberal views on social policies": Cheney is "perhaps the strongest voice in the Republican Party speaking out about the importance of upholding the Constitution."
- JANE FRASER, "a registered Democrat who is the chief executive of Citigroup"
- 2. CNN's Harry Enten looks at the available data and explains why "Cheney should be regarded as the clear underdog in her efforts to retain her seat." She's way behind in the few polls that have been released, but Enten also looks at a few other key metrics to get a sense of the primary, which will take place on August 16:
- "Cheney was the least popular member of Congress" in the 2021 Cooperative Election Study, "a large academic survey [that] asks Americans whether they approve or disapprove of their member of Congress."
- "Further, national polls seem to confirm the bad data in Wyoming for Cheney. A mere 17% of Republicans nationwide approved of Cheney's job as vice chair of the January 6 committee, according to a recent Quinnipiac University poll. The vast majority (61%) disapproved. Why is this notable? Because the vast majority of Wyomingites are Republicans. According to the Wyoming secretary of state, 71% of registered voters are Republicans. Just 15% are Democrats."
- "Beyond polling and real-world elections data, Cheney's problems become apparent in fundraising numbers. So too does the dichotomy between her national stardom and issues back home. According to the FEC and OpenSecrets, Cheney raised more than $10 million this cycle through March 31. Hageman pulled in a little more than $2 million through the same date. But Hageman pulled in nearly $650,000 of her total from Wyoming donors, more than twice as much as Cheney's in-state haul (about $270,000)."

- 3. James Bennet, The Economist's new Lexington columnist, interviews ALAN SIMPSON, who explains how Cheney's real fight isn't the Wyoming primary she is likely to lose:
- "...Simpson, a former three-term senator, has known her since she was a girl. Asked if she could win, he says he doesn't know. 'That really isn't the issue for her,' he adds. 'That's not the golden chalice for Liz.'
- "Senator Simpson, droll as ever at 90 , was once booted from a leadership position himself, for insisting on being pro-choice in a pro-life party. He is delighted by Ms Cheney's resistance to the herd: "She's her own person." He describes an environment of hate and nihilism around Mr Trump like nothing he has seen. "The guy is a wrecking ball of history," he says. The chalice, for Ms Cheney, is to block Mr Trump's path back to power, and the testimony elicited by her sombre, methodical questioning may just achieve that."

HEADS UP — STEVE BANNON told the Jan. 6 select committee in a letter on Saturday that he is "now willing to testify, ideally at a public hearing," after "he received a letter from former President Donald Trump waiving executive privilege," CNN's Sara Murray reports.

What Trump said in the letter: "When you first received the Subpoena to testify and provide documents, I invoked Executive Privilege. However, I watched how unfairly you and others have been treated, having to spend vast amounts of money on legal fees, and all of the trauma you must be going through for the love of your Country, and out of respect for the Office of the President."

SUNDAY BEST ...

— VP KAMALA HARRIS on new immigration moves by Texas Gov. GREG ABBOTT, on CBS' "Face the Nation": "I would suggest that so-called leaders focus on solutions instead of attacks if they really are concerned about a problem, and that includes on the issue of immigration, passing a pathway for citizenship, fixing what, in particular under the prior administration, was a badly broken system. So that we can have a humane and appropriate approach to this issue, including of course, what we will continue to do in terms of prioritizing border security, but understanding we also need to create a pathway. And, and that's where I think everyone should be focused if they're actually concerned about solutions instead of flame throwing." Read the full transcript of Harris' interview with Bob Costa

— Transportation Secretary PETE BUTTIGIEG on the protesters outside of Morton's that led to Justice BRETT KAVANAUGH leaving the restaurant, on "Fox News Sunday": "When public officials go into public life we should expect two things. One, you should always be free from violence, harassment and intimidation. And two, you're never going to be free from criticism or peaceful protests, people exercising their First Amendment rights. That's what happened in this case. ... People are upset. They're going to exercise their First Amendment rights. As long as that's peaceful, that's protected. Compare that for example, to the reality that as a country right now, we're reckoning with the fact that a mob summoned by the former president ... attacked the United States Capitol for the purpose of overthrowing the election. ... I think common sense can tell the difference."

Asked if he would be OK with protesters demonstrating when he and his husband, CHASTEN, go to dinner, he said: "Protesting peacefully outside in a public space? Sure. Look, I can't even tell you the number of spaces, venues and scenarios where I've been protested. And the bottom line is this: Any public figure should always always be free from violence, intimidation and harassment, but should never be free from criticism, or people exercising their First Amendment rights." Watch the clip of Buttigieg's response

— Rep. STEPHANIE MURPHY (D-Fla.) on PAT CIPOLLONE's testimony before the Jan. 6 committee, on NBC's "Meet the Press": "I think there was a lot of information that fit into this bigger puzzle that we're putting together. And we have different voices telling about the same meeting, and more or less telling the same narrative."

BIDEN'S SUNDAY — The Bidens will leave Rehoboth Beach, Del., at 8:15 p.m., arriving back at the White House at 9:30 p.m.

Fox: Dan Bongino on Supreme Court Justice 'harassment': Biden's DOJ is a 'cosmic level embarrassment', Unattributed, July 9, 2022, 11:05 AM

Answering to whether Biden's Department of Justice takes harassment and threats against Supreme Court justices seriously, "Unfiltered" host Dan Bongino called the DOJ a "disgrace," and a "cosmic level embarrassment" under U.S. Attorney General Merrick Garland on "Fox & Friends Weekend" Saturday. Washington Examiner: [OPINION] Merrick Garland is failing in his duty to protect Supreme Court justices, Quin Hillyer, July 8, 2022, 2:36 PM

By failing to arrest and prosecute people who harass Supreme Court justices, Attorney General Merrick Garland is dangerously, almost criminally guilty of supreme dereliction of duty. The issue arises yet again after Justice Brett Kavanaugh felt compelled to leave a Washington, D.C., steakhouse through a back door to avoid what the restaurant itself described as "unruly protesters" who "unduly harassed" not just Kavanaugh but "all of our other patrons at the restaurant." OPERATION NORTH STAR

WBBM (Chicago, IL): During 'Operation North Star,' U.S. marshals arrested over 1,400 people in 30 days — including 156 in Chicago, Brandon Ison, July 7, 2022, 6:14 PM

More than 1,400 violent criminals were taken into custody by federal and local task forces nationwide as part of Operation North Star, which targeted the most violent offenders in 10 major U.S. cities, including Chicago.

Thursday afternoon, U.S. Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois LaDon Reynolds announced that 156 Chicago-area arrests had been made as part of Operation North Star during the month of June. [Continue Reading]

WLS-ABC (Chicago, IL): US Marshals take 1,500 of country's most violent criminals off the streets in special operation, John García, July 7, 2022, 5:06 PM

More than 1,500 of the country's most violent criminals are now off the streets as part of the Justice Department's "Operation North Star." Arrests were made in 10 cities, including Chicago. As U.S. Marshals showed up to arrest 19-year-old Terrion Johnson on murder charges, they say he opened fire at them, injuring a senior Marshall and K-9. Both are recovering, but Johnson is now facing additional federal charges. [Continue Reading] See also: WBBM-CBS (Chicago, IL)

WHBQ-Fox (Memphis, TN): US Marshals' operation results in 122 arrests in the Mid-South, officials say, Unattributed, July 6, 2022, 3:35 PM

The U.S. Marshals Service conducted a 30-day initiative called Operation North Star (ONS) that resulted in the arrest of 122 fugitives, sex offenders, and violent criminals wanted in the Bluff City. ONS was a high-impact fugitive apprehension initiative focusing on the country's most violent offenders in 10 cities, including Memphis, a release said. [Continue Reading]

Reuters: Oath Keeper brought explosives to D.C. ahead of Jan. 6 attack, prosecutor says, David Morgan, July 9, 2022, 11:57 AM

A member of the Oath Keepers extremist group brought explosives to the Washington, D.C., area ahead of the Jan. 6, 2021, attack on the U.S. Capitol by supporters of former President Donald Trump, according to the U.S. Justice Department. In a court filing, federal prosecutors alleged that Jeremy Brown, an Oath Keepers member from Florida, drove explosives to a Virginia hotel in his recreational vehicle on Jan. 6. A second member of the group, Thomas Caldwell, was later found in possession of a "death list" that included the name of a Georgia election official, according to the document. Reuters: Putin warns West: sanctions risk energy price spike catastrophe, Guy Faulconbridge, July 8, 2022, 12:23 PM

President Vladimir Putin warned the West on Friday that continued sanctions against Russia over the war in Ukraine risked triggering catastrophic energy price rises for consumers around the world. Putin, who casts the sanctions imposed on Russia as a declaration of economic war, said that Western calls to reduce reliance on Russian energy had made global markets "feverish" with spikes in oil and gas. NYT: Florida Man Sentenced to 20 Years for Uploading Bomb-Making Video, Vimal Matel, July 9, 2022, 9:25 AM

A Florida man who had pledged support to ISIS was sentenced on Thursday to 20 years in prison for uploading a video he believed would help the terrorist group make bombs, the federal authorities said on Thursday. The man, Romeo Xavier Langhorne, 32, of St. Augustine, Fla., pleaded guilty in March 2021 to one count of providing material support to ISIS, according to a statement from the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Florida. The sentence, handed down in U.S. District Court in Jacksonville, also included an additional 15 years of supervised release, the statement said. [Continue Reading]

WaPo: [EDITORIAL] U.S.-supplied artillery is helping Ukraine's defense. Send more now, Editorial Board, July 9, 2022, 7:00 AM

Fresh from completing the conquest of Luhansk province in eastern Ukraine, President Vladimir Putin of Russia ordered his troops to rest and issued a kind of challenge to Ukraine's NATO backers. "Today we hear that they want to defeat us on the battlefield," he said Thursday. "What can you say? Let them try." President Biden responded to Mr. Putin a day later in exactly the right way: by announcing an additional military aid package for Kyiv worth $400 million, which included four new HIMARS long-range rocket launchers. This will bring the total number of U.S. HIMARS transferred to Ukraine to 12; the German and British governments have pledged similar systems. [Continue Reading]

AP: 4 days in January: Trump push for Capitol coda to 2020 vote, Lisa Mascaro, July 9, 2022, 11:00 AM

It would have been something never quite before seen in America — a defeated president, Donald Trump, standing at the Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021, with a mob of supporters, some armed, contesting the election outcome. Trump intended to go there that day. His allies had been planning for the moment, envisioning the president delivering a speech outside the building or even entering the House chamber amid objections to Congress certifying the 2020 election results for Democrat Joe Biden. NYT: [OPINION] Why Does Is It Take Federal Intervention to Fix the N.Y.P.D.?, Mara Gay, July 9, 2022, 11:00 AM

The saga of the Special Victims Division is the latest illustration of the extraordinary measures required to meaningfully reform the nation's largest police department. When the N.Y.P.D. conducted sweeping surveillance of Muslim communities in the years after the Sept. 11 attacks, class-action litigation was needed to put an end to the practice. When the department violated the civil rights of millions of innocent Black and Latino men by targeting them for unconstitutional police searches, years of lawsuits were needed to curb the tactic. NYT: Review Finds Agents Used Unnecessary Force Against Black Migrants, Eileen Sullivan and Zolan Kanno-Youngs, July 9, 2022, 2:22 AM

Border Patrol agents on horseback used "unnecessary" force in September against Black migrants who crossed into Del Rio, Texas, en masse, amid a humanitarian crisis that exposed the Biden administration's struggle to manage a record number of southwestern border crossings. In the absence of clear instructions from their supervisors, the agents took commands from the Texas state police and improperly "used force or the threat of force" to drive migrants back into the Rio Grande. LAT: Children separated from relatives at the border could be reunited under new Biden program, Hamed Aleaziz, July 8, 2022, 5:59 PM (EDT)

After the girl's grandfather died, she traveled from Guatemala to the Texas border with her uncle. Border Patrol agents separated them. The girl, then 10, ended up in foster care, while her uncle was deported, according to her attorney, Miriam Enriquez. Such painful separations could be avoided under a new Biden administration program that will allow children to quickly reunite with relatives like uncles and grandparents at the border.

WSJ: Biden Administration Asks Supreme Court to Rule on Immigration Enforcement, Jess Bravin and Michelle Hackman, July 8, 2022, 5:36 PM

The Biden administration asked the Supreme Court Friday to reinstate immigration enforcement guidelines that a lower court blocked after Texas and Louisiana filed suit arguing that the policy lets too many noncitizens with criminal records go free while their cases are processed. The guidelines focus detention efforts on noncitizens deemed to threaten national security, public safety and border security. Bloomberg: Biden Brags There Are More Private-Sector Jobs Now Than Under Trump, Justin Sink, July 8, 2022, 10:06 AM

President Joe Biden said Friday's jobs report showed that "our private sector has recovered all of the jobs lost during the pandemic, and added jobs on top of that" but predicted employment gains would slow in the coming months as the country transitions to "stable growth." "We have more Americans working in the private sector today than any day during Donald Trump's Presidency -- more people than any time in our history," Biden said in a statement, adding that the employment situation left the US "uniquely well positioned to tackle a range of global economic challenges – from global inflation to the economic fallout from Putin's war" in Ukraine. WSJ: Calls for TikTok Probe Widen, Adding to Pressure on Biden to Weigh In, John D. McKinnon, July 8, 2022, 8:05 AM

Calls for an investigation into the security risks posed by the video app TikTok are widening, adding to pressure on President Biden to make good on his year-old promise to get tough on apps that could share Americans' personal data with foreign adversaries. The Democratic chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee and the panel's top Republican sent a joint letter to the Federal Trade Commission this week urging an investigation of TikTok's data-handling and other practices. TikTok's parent, ByteDance Ltd., has its headquarters in Beijing.

CONGRESS

Reuters: U.S. House panel to investigate companies sharing reproductive data, Rose Horowitch, July 8, 2022, 4:53 PM

A U.S. congressional committee has asked data brokers and personal health apps to explain how they handle users' reproductive health data amid concerns states will use the information to track patients seeking abortion where it is illegal. Democrats on the House of Representatives Oversight Committee said they were concerned that location data, search history and other information on mobile phones could create "digital bread crumbs" that reveal interest in an abortion. FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

July 8, 2022

PRESS BR EF NG BY PRESS SECRETARY KAR NE JEAN-P ERRE

James S. Brady Press Briefing Room

12:57 P.M. EDT

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Good afternoon, everybody. Okay. And Happy Friday to everyone. Just a quick note, because we wanted to make sure we had a briefing today, but the President, as you know, has a very tight schedule.

Today he's going to be heading to the C A, so this is going to be a short briefing, so apologies at the top. But again, we wanted to make sure you guys all had an opportunity to ask your questions.

So joining us today is Jen Klein, the Director of the White House Gender Policy Council, which was established by President Biden at the start of this administration. This is her second time in the Briefing Room, some of you might remember.

By creating the Gender Policy Council, President Biden fulfilled a campaign promise to create a White House team backed by the whole of government for defending women's rights and advancing equality.

When the draft decision of Dobbs was leaked this spring, Jen Klein and the Gender Policy Council, along with other senior officials here at the White House, put every policy action on the table and evaluated them through an intensive process to determine which were the strongest and the most meaningful.

With that, Jen, 'll let you take it away.

MS. K E N: Thank you. Thanks, Karine, for having me today. As you said, when the final decision was issued, the President took immediate action under his executive authority to defend reproductive rights. And just now, as you know, he signed an executive order which builds on those actions.

So just to talk a little bit about what's in this executive order: t safeguards access to reproductive health services, building on steps HHS has already taken to ensure that medication abortion and contraception, including emergency contraception and long-acting contraception, are as widely available as possible, as well as the Attorney General's commitment to fight any attack by a state or local official who attempts to interfere with women exercising their constitutional right to travel out of state for medical care.

t also protects the privacy of patients and their access to accurate information, building on steps that HHS Office of Civil Rights has already begun to take to ensure that doctors and medical providers and plans know that, with limited exceptions, they're not required and, in many cases, they're not even permitted to disclose patients' private information.

t also promotes the safety and security of patients, providers, and clinics -- the physical safety and security. And finally, it coordinates the implementation of federal efforts to protect reproductive rights and access to healthcare.

As Karine said, my team, working really with colleagues all across the White House and around the administration, has been working around the clock since the draft decision was leaked in May. And we are going to continue to evaluate all options and steps that we can take.

So, as Karine said, know we're short on time. So, with that, 'll just be open to take your questions.

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Go ahead, Aamer.

- Q Yeah, ma'am, Senator Marco Rubio is demanding the federal government --
- Q Thank you.
- Q -- not provide sick leave to federal employees.
- Q Thank you. f --
- Q Will you respect the Hyde Amendment?
- O Medicaid Admin- --

- Q Will this administration respect the Hyde Amendment?
- Q The Medicaid Administrator said that the Biden administration was considering having Medicaid pay for travel for people. And with some of the instances that the President just highlighted in his speech just now, that seems like something that would be very useful right away. Just wondering, why isn't that included in this tranche of action?

And then secondly, if you could just broadly speak: There's been some frustration with abortion rights supporters that this administration is not moving fast enough. Some of this stuff seems like it could have been done on day one, considering you knew the leak and what was coming.

MS. K E N: So, on your first question on Medicaid, you know, as you heard from the President the day of the decision and again today as part of this executive order, we are very focused on protecting that right to travel.

The Attorney General issued an extremely strong statement, again, on the day of the decision, and has continued to be vigilant so that no woman, no person who is seeking a medical service in a state where it is legal is prevented from doing that.

We're also looking at all options to figure out how to best effectuate that right to travel.

On your second question more broadly, sort of take issue with the premise of the question, because think, first of all, what the President did on day one, which was really significant, was to take immediate action, as said, to ensure that medication abortion is available and accessible.

Fifty-four percent of abortions in this country are through Medicaid [sic] abortion -- medica- -- medication abortion, excuse me. So that is a hugely significant thing to make sure that people have accurate information about medication abortion and have the right to take it.

You know, a sort of falsity that is already out there is that it's illegal everywhere in the country. t's not. So we're, in this executive order, taking further action to make sure that the FDA has the support they need to go through their scientific process and that people have the information they need to access and get this vital critical medication, as well as contraception, which, you know, as we noted, the Supreme Court put on the table already.

The other thing would say is, you know, the leaked decision was two weeks ago. So in addition to the immediate actions that the administration took, Secretary of Health and Human Services Becerra took a series of actions while the President was away in Europe. When he came back, his first public event was meeting with nine Democratic governors, who really are in the frontlines, to talk to them about what we could do best to help them and what they are doing on their own to actually ensure reproductive rights and health in their states.

And then the last thing would say -- and, you know, you heard the President say it is: You can't solve by executive action what the Supreme Court has done. The Supreme Court has taken away a constitutional right that was precedent for nearly 50 years.

And think we all need to be mindful -- he is very mindful, we are all very mindful -- that that can't be solved by executive action alone and that the best and fastest way to fix that is by codifying Roe, restoring Roe by legislation. But that doesn't mean we won't be taking the actions he took today and more as we consider best actions.

- Q So is there a disconnect there? Because there is frustration. There is no doubt there's a lot of frustration, and some of the frustration is undoubtedly -- through anybody in this room that's spoken to a voter or an American that supports abortion rights -- that there is frustration with the administration. So is there a disconnect in what's happening and their ability to message it?
- MS. K E N: Well, would say that, you know, first of all, if you look at what NARA and Planned Parenthood said today about the actions that we're taking, they've both called it, you know, important steps.

And 've been in constant contact with stakeholders across lots of different constituencies and lots of different coalitions, from women's rights to reproductive rights and justice, civil rights, community, businesses, medical providers, mean, the American Medical Associa- -- Association and the ACOG and -- American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Very supportive of the actions we're taking to protect providers' rights and responsibilities to offer the services that they are legally allowed to provide, and to make sure that their responsibilities but also protect them in this time where, you know, what we are experiencing already but will continue to experience is serious legal chaos.

- So think we are taking strong action. And again, we're going to continue to look for where we can take the most significant actions.
- Q Does this administration --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Michael. Michael.
- Q -- respect the Hyde Amendment, ma'am? Simple question.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Go ahead, Michael.
- Q t's a real simple question. Do you respect the Hyde Amendment or no?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Michael, go ahead.
- Q You can't answer that question?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Go ahead, Michael.
- Q Sorry, so 'm a little still confused about what the actual -- the order actually does. t says here that it directs Mr. Becerra to develop a report identifying potential actions; to consider updates to guidances; to -- it directs the Chair of the Federal Trade Commission to consider actions; it asks Mr. Becerra to consider actions about protecting information; it talks about protecting the -- you know, the sort of safety of people, but it doesn't say how.

mean, how is this -- how is any of this actually doing the things that you say it's doing, or isn't it just repeating what the President said two weeks ago that he wanted to do but has already, both he and -- he and Mr. Becerra have both said their, sort of, hands are tied? think Mr. Becerra's comment was that there is no silver bullet here. So, mean, what is it actually going to do tomorrow?

MS. K E N: There are -- there are many new things in here, so let me -- let me walk through a few of them.

First of all, on privacy: You know, what we are seeing is already an assault on people's privacy. And there's sort of two things in the executive order to address that. The first is through the Federal Trade Commission.

Q But it doesn't actually do anything. t says it asks the Federal Trade Commissioner to consider actions, right?

MS. K E N: Yeah. So the Federal Trade --

Q What actions -- what actions do you want him to do?

MS. K E N: The Federal Trade Commission is obviously an independent agency, so the President can't compel them, which is why, you know, the exe- -- the words of the executive order are "to consider."

But what believe the Federal Trade Commission is looking to do is to ensure that people's private health information is not sold by data brokers, that when somebody goes on and does a Google search to find an abortion clinic, that that information is not made publicly available.

They have to make their --

Q How are they -- how are they going to do that?

MS. K E N: They have to make -- they have to make their own enforcement decisions, and obviously, neither nor -- certainly not me, but the President can't compel them to bring any sort of enforcement action. But they can clarify their policy, and that's what this executive order asks them to do.

Q Do you guys know what policies you would like them to clarify?

MS. K E N: Just what said: that --

Q But mean, specifically?

MS. K E N: They're the experts, and so they will make a determination and then release a policy statement, believe, that will ensure that people's private, sensitive health information is protected on the nternet, that people have access to accurate information.

This is -- this is what they will be able to do.

Q Okay. And the second piece is the HHS Secretary -- that's not -- he's not an independent agent. So why -- why are you just directing him to consider actions? And what actions do you want him to consider?

MS. K E N: So, what the executive order asks the Secretary to do is come back within 30 days with a plan. So part of this, as you are noting, are things the President has talked about and what -- and what the Secretary has already started to work on.

And what this asks for is a very deliberate plan and process to make sure that medication abortion is available; to support the FDA in their determination -- their scientific determination about this medic- -- critical medication, which, by the way, has been safe and legal for 20 years; and to take other steps.

So, to take one other example, emergency medical care. We need to make sure that when somebody walks into an emergency room and they're pregnant, that they are getting the care that they need and that they are not being turned away because -- either because a provider doesn't know that they're legally required or able to give them that care.

So there is guidance that the secretary can issue and the Secretary will issue to make clear what kind of treatment somebody needs to be -- needs to receive when they walk into an emergency room.

Same thing for pharmacists. You know, again, back to the notion of legal chaos, pharmacists don't know whether they can dispense mifepristone, the drug which is medication abortion -- which, by the way, is used in miscarriages, which are 1 in 10 pregnancies.

So again, the Secretary can take action, through guidance from the Department of Health and Human Services specifically, to make clear to pharmacists, again, what their responsibilities are but also what their rights are as pharmacists so that they are not putting themselves in jeopardy.

- Q Thank you so much. The White House says this executive action will expand access to medication abortion. How, specifically, will the administration do that? What concrete steps will be taken?
- MS. K E N: Well, that's what we're looking for the Secretary to come back to us with. mean, the two things immediately is -- is what 've noted, which is that the FDA is in a process right now, and they need to continue to do their process. And again, they are independent, they're making their own scientific judgment, but to do -- to extend permanently what they did in April.

So, in April, what they did was they said that medication abortion should be available by telehealth, and it should be able to be -- to be mailed.

And currently, they're going through a scientific process. And we can't interfere with that process, but the Secretary can support them in any way that he needs to.

And the other thing is we, you know, launched a website, ReproductiveRights.gov, and there will be many other ways to communicate -- again, as said, both, you know, critical medications like medication abortion, but also contraception, which is at risk.

Emergency contraception is at risk in states across the country now, partly because there are states that are -- are passing laws that say that fertilization -- that fertilization begins -- that pregnancy begins at fertilization, and that puts a drug like emergency contraception at risk. And we need to clarify for people what is and isn't available to them.

- Q But just to -- just to follow up really quickly here. s this sort of like a wait-and-see approach here for the American people? The White House says that this executive action will be expanding access to medication abortion, but right now, there's no details, no concrete steps until the Department of Health and Human Services releases that in 30 days?
- MS. K E N: No, no. The Secretary -- mean, know it feels frustrating because we're taking action and then asking for more action. But the Secretary is already taking action. The website is already launched. The Attorney General has already made a statement that we will be vigilant about protecting people's right to travel and also to look at the question about whether mifepristone should be available and how it can be available, because the FDA has already spoken, 20 years ago, that this is a safe and effective drug.

And at the same time, what we've asked for is, you know, continued vigilance and an ongoing process and ongoing work to make sure that that is really happening.

You know, as said, this is not going to be solved by one day's action. So the -you know, the strong statement at the outset; all the work we've done, both before the decision and after the decision; and then, you know, we will come back. And you know, the report from the Secretary is just one step in the process.

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: They moved the gather time, so we got to go.

- Q So, again, the Hyde Amendment -- will you answer my question? Really simple.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Go ahead, Phil. And then (inaudible).
- Q The idea of a public health emergency has been something some advocates have pressed for. My understanding is it's not off the table but that the consideration may give a window into the complexities that you guys are trying to deal with right now. Can you explain, kind of, the approach as it pertains to that specific item?
- MS. K E N: Yeah. So, as you said, we're really looking at everything. And it is definitely not off the table, as are many other options.

When we looked at the public health emergency, we learned a couple things. One is that it doesn't free very many resources. t's what's in the public health emergency fund, and there's very little money -- tens of thousands of dollars in it. So that didn't seem like a great option. And it also doesn't release a significant amount of legal authority. And so that's why we haven't taken that action yet.

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Go ahead.

- Q So, ma'am, pro-life Americans -- one question.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Sir, you're being rude.
- Q Pro-life Americans --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Sir, you're being rude to your colleagues.
- Q All the questions you're taking are pro-abortion. So let me ask you this question.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Excuse me --
- Q Senator Marco Rubio --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Go ahead, Caitlin.
- Q -- is demanding --
- Q Two questions.
- Q -- the federal government not provide sick leave to federal employees who travel to get abortions. Should -- he says that would violate the Hyde Amendment. So, what's your response to it?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Sir, take a seat in the back. You're being rude to your colleagues and our guest.

Go ahead, Caitlin.

- Q Two questions.
- Q 'm not (inaudible). can stand right here and ask my questions (inaudible).
- Q The President --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Sir, please. Please.
- Q can ask my question. She doesn't want to answer it.
- Q The President, earlier today, encouraged people to go out and vote, and essentially said, "f you want to change the rights for women, you have to show up at the ballot box."

Does that suggest that, with this order, the President has reached the limit of what he can do unilaterally?

MS. K E N: No, it does not. t means it's an important step that we're taking today. And we will continue to look at all options on the table that are legally appropriate.

- Q have another question about privacy. s the White House encouraging people in states where abortion is going to be illegal to not use different apps -- period-tracking apps, Google searches on fertility, those kinds of things? s the White House directing people to stop using those apps?
- MS. K E N: wouldn't say we're directing people. But think people should be really careful about that. And one of the things that HHS did just last week was -- as part of this website and also made public in other ways -- is literal instructions, practical instructions of how to delete certain apps that are on your phone so that if you want to protect yourself, you have the ability to do that.
- Q And then, sorry, quickly on the abortion pill: s the President, is the administration directing the FDA to loosen restrictions on the abortion pill?
- MS. K E N: The President can't direct the FDA. The FDA has to go through their process. But -- and they are in the middle of a process not to loosen restrictions but to clarify what the restrictions are and who can dispense and who can prescribe mifepristone.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Okay. Two questions left. Jeff and then -- go ahead.
- Q Can you give -- right here. Oh, and also, earlier you said the leaked decision came out two weeks ago. You probably meant six weeks.
- MS. K E N: Sorry, yes.
- Q The actual one was two weeks ago.
- MS. K E N: The actual decision. Sorry. Thank you.
- Q Can you give us a sense of what other options are on the table now that this executive order has been signed?
- MS. K E N: 'm not going to preview our process. But all the things that you've heard about that have been suggested by advocates, by members of Congress -- literally every single one of those things we have run down and either decided was not a viable option at the moment or are continuing to run down.
- Q And one question about the pill. s this White House studying or is the administration studying making it easier for people to get that pill without a prescription?
- MS. K E N: Again, the FDA has to go through their process. t's -- it's currently not only not -- it is not available without a prescription. And -- and, in fact, there are part of these -- the guidance that FDA has already issued is pretty specific about it.
- So can't answer a question about what they might consider in the future. But would say: At present time, it is -- it is a pretty regulated medication.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: ast question.

- Q Thank you. One of the executive actions announced today was creating a task force. Why wasn't that created after the Dobbs decision was leaked to help prepare?
- MS. K E N: So, we've been -- you know, a number of us have called it a task force, a war room. We've been meeting literally every day for weeks, far before the -- not only the decision, but the leaked decision, to think about all of the options that we could put in place to respond.

So this just formalizes the interagency work that's been going on between the Department of Justice, the Department of Health and Human Services -- really all of the agencies and across the White House.

And the reason, actually, we decided to formalize it and also to make clear that it will also be available as a way to communicate and coordinate with states was when the President met with the governors, they specifically asked for it.

One of the things that was really interesting to us is that when we've been meeting with state attorneys general, state legislators, and as well when the President met with the governors -- and, by the way, the Vice President has had a number of meetings, as have , with all of those different state officials.

One of the things that has come to the front is the avail -- is the importance of connecting them to each other, creating a network so that they can learn from each other. So, you know, states that are looking at laws to prevent extradition of providers who are providing a legal service in the state of, you know, where they -- where they reside, it became really clear that this was something that was very much needed. So we decided to make it part of this order.

- Q And one clarifying question on the public health emergency. So, if -- would you say that you -- the White House believes it has the authority to declare the public health emergency to preserve broad access to abortion services?
- MS. K E N: The Secretary of Health and Human Services has to declare a public health emergency. And it's not a question of legal authority that -- he has the authority to do that at any time. The question is, "What authority does he gain by declaring a public health emergency?"
- Q Will you take any questions from a pro-life American audience at all?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Thanks.
- Q No? You'll just walk away? Okay.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Thank you.
- Q Karine, have a question. Does the President have a reaction to the passing of the former Angolan President, Eduardo dos Santos? noticed that you just had your reaction to the passing of -- to the death of the Japanese prime minister.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: et me -- let me just get started, and then 'll -- 'll come back to you. Okay? et me just get started with the -- with the briefing.

We don't have a lot of time. As we know, the President is going to be leaving for C A pretty sho- -- pretty soon, and we're going to gather very shortly.

But do want to take a point of privilege and acknowledge Angela Perez, who is going to be leaving us. We have many big things to celebrate today, but you leaving and getting a promotion to the Department of Commerce as Deputy Press Secretary.

Angela has been with us from the beginning. She is what we call an "OG Biden person." She was with us on the campaign. And her tell -- intelligence, her follow through, and humor had been a gift to all of her colleagues here at the White House. know some of you have experienced her humor in this very room.

And we are going to be incredibly sad to see you go. But we're also going to be cheering you on as you do -- go and do really amazing and great things. And as said, today is her last day. And we love you, Angela. Thank you. Thank you for all that you do.

All right, Aamer, why don't you kick us off?

- Q Sure. One question. understand we're tight on time.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Yeah.
- Q Shireen Abu Akleh's family sent President Biden a letter in which they noted their "sense of betrayal" with the State Department's report on her killing. t was a very scathing letter.

Will the President meet with the family? Will he bring up the case with sraeli officials next week?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So haven't seen the letter as yet. have heard about the letter; just haven't had a sens- -- a chance to read it. And 'm not going to get ahead of the President's travel and what he'll be doing on his travel in the Middle East.

But can assure you that he has been closely monitoring the developments of the investigation into Shireen's killing. You have heard us talk about it many times right here at this podium.

Senior American officials also continue to be in touch with Abu Akleh family. And we hear their concerns. We feel their pain. We can't even -- we can't even imagine what they must be going through. don't want to imagine.

We continue to urge cooperation between srael and the Palestinian Authority on next steps. And we -- and we definitely continue to urge accountability.

- Q And as far as the gather: s the briefing going to continue? And --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: 'll go for -- 'll go a little bit longer for folks who stay.
- Q Okay. Should people gather and leave at 1:20?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: bel- -- they should if they want to -- if they want to catch --

(laughs) -- the President at the C A. But 'll continue.

Go ahead, Jeff.

Q And just one quick one before we leave? Can you give us an update on the President's thinking on tariffs and lifting tariffs in China?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Yeah, so we don't have anything, clearly, right now, at this time on -- on the -- on the tariff decision. The President, as 've said many times, is considering all options. This is an important decision that the President is making on behalf of the American public.

As soon as we -- as soon as we have something, we will we will share that.

Go ahead, Caitlin.

Q Some Democratic senators have praised the President's executive order today but say that he should be doing more. What else is the White House planning on doing? And does the President believe that he can do any more on this issue?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So the President -- you heard him speak very passionately today. He is going to continue to do everything that he can -- the legal authority that he has -- to continue to work and make sure that we -- that we look at all options to protect women, to protect women's rights, and their freedoms. So it doesn't end today.

t be- -- it be- -- you know, all of this kind of began on the day that decision was -- the Dobbs decision was made.

But he's been also very clear -- like said, you heard him today: The way to -- to really address this is for people to make sure that their voices are heard at the ballot box. That is what he is calling for. That is what we are -- we are asking our fellow Americans to make sure that they speak up and get their voices heard.

Q But does that --

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Yes?

Q Does that suggest that he believes that he doesn't have any more legal authority to act on this issue?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: No, he said he's going to -- he has -- we have continued to say he's going to look at every option that he has.

But, look, here's what we saw -- right? -- we heard him say that what -- the SCOTUS decision was not driven by the Constitution. t was driven by political and extreme raw political power. A decision that was made -- he disagrees with that decision. He thinks it's extreme. We have to be sure, and we continue --

He wants to be straight with the American people. And if you look at what's going to happen across the board; if you look at what Republicans -- national Republicans are saying: They're asking or going to go for a national ban.

So our work now is -- he's going to -- again, continue to do the work that he can from here. But also, you know, call on Congress to act. f they cannot, we have to make sure that people's voices are heard at the ballot box.

Q And just quickly, has he ruled out the sanctioning of federal lands for abortion?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So, look, we are -- we're looking at all options. Everything is on the table. We have talked about how, you know, while this is a -- a idea that comes from a good place, it is definitely a difficult thing to protect the provider or to protect any -- any woman who is on federal land, once they leave. t puts them in a legal -- kind of an illegal bind. So it is something that we have to think about when we have those discussions.

But again, everything is on the table. He's going to do everything that he can from whatever legal authority that he has to make sure that we continue to protect women's rights and also the freedom of women.

Go ahead.

Q n many ways, the President's rhetoric today was almost declaring war on the Court. He talked about galvanizing women voters, especially, to act. But he said some things that are kind of unusual for a President who is an institutionalist, when you're talking about a co-equal branch of government.

s it the President's view that the Court is not apolitical any longer? s it his view that it is, in fact, motivated by politics in all matters or just the Dobbs decision?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, 'll say this: The President respects the institution. He respects the Court. What he doesn't -- what he believes was unconstitutional, and spoke to this -- to this this morning -- to this morning and also prior, is their decision. He believes the decision that this Court has made is extreme and it is beyond the pale.

We are talking about, as you know, you know, a constitutional right that was around for almost 50 years. And so, when you think about that -- when you think about what was done two weeks ago, the President wants to speak very clearly and loudly about what we saw and how this will have an effect, as we know, on women's rights and women's freedom. And beyond that -- it's going to go beyond that when you think about privacy, when you think about contraception, when you think what else that -- what else extreme Republicans -- Republicans that he has called the "Ultra" -- the "Ultra-MAGA" of the Republican wing is planning to do.

But the reality is: n order to have pro-choice senators, pro-choice House members, we have to make sure that folks have their voices heard at the ballot box. And that is what he's going to continue to call on to make sure that they exercise their rights as well.

Q s it his view that the Court is now a politicized body or not an independent judicial panel?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, he believes that this was done by a war of political power.

You heard him say that today, that this decision was not a constitutional decision. t was beyond extreme. t will -- you know, it will hurt people's lives. t will upend, you know, people's -- you know, people's everyday decision on their own body and what they can decide what they -- what they need to take care of their health and how they want to grow their family. And so that is incredibly important as well.

Again, this decision was incredibly extreme. He's going to -- he's called that out. He's talked about that very emphatically, as you heard him today.

And -- but we have to also do our part. We have to do everything that we can to codify Roe into law. And the only way to do that is to make sure that Congress acts.

'm going to -- go ahead.

- Q Thanks, Karine. Governor Abbott in Texas issued an executive order today calling on the National Guard and officials there to apprehend undocumented immigrants. So 'm wondering if the administration is planning any legal response, and if you'll prohibit the National Guard from participating?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So 'll say this: The immigration enforcement is a federal authority, and states should not be mandating it -- meddling in it. That is just -- especially governor of Te- -- the Texas governor, Abbott, who has a track record of causing chaos and confusion at the border.
- So would refer you to DOJ on any legal matter. But again, this is an -- immigration enfortment [sic] -- enforcement is a federal authority.
- Q TPS for Venezuelans is up for renewal next week. Do you have any sense of how the President is planning to proceed there? And if he's not going to renew it, what has -- what the circumstances have changed?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So 'm not going to get ahead of the President's decision on TPS. don't have anything for you at this time to preview.
- Q And then one last one. You've discussed multiple times that the only way to, sort of, restore Roe is through legislative action and electing more Democrats, which think is undeniably true based on the, sort of, math.

But in the period, you know, before the ruling was issued, there was an effort by some Republican senators to pass a sort of scaled-down bill. We heard the President today talk passionately about a case -- a reported case of a rape survivor that had to go across state lines.

s the administration at all interested in engaging with Republicans on a smaller (inaudible) bill that might protect rape victims', incest victims' right -- you know, health of the mother -- less than Roe -- undeniably less than, you know, you and abortion activists want, but more than exists after the ruling?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So don't have anything to share right now about what we would do that's less than Roe. The President's priority right now is to make sure we codify Roe. And that is what is going to bring back the rights of women and the freedoms that women have.

And, you know, we have to take what the Court did very seriously, even what Judge [Justice] Thomas said about privacy and contraception and marriage. That is something that we have to be -- should be ready for. And that's why the President laid out what he has in the past two week -- two weeks -- whether it is the two executive authorities that he took on the day that the decision was made on Dobbs, which is making sure that the FDA provided approved medication to its full extent, because that is so incredibly important for women who are looking to have abortion; and also making sure that women who decide to travel across states have the protection; and everything else that he talked about today -- the privacy component, protecting clinics.

And so that's what he's going to continue to do. He's going to continue to see what other legal authorities that he haves -- he has to move forward and protect -- to protect those rights.

But the way that we truly get back those freedoms, that constitutional right that people -- the American public had for almost 50 years is we have to codify Roe into law.

Go ahead.

- Q The President mentioned that he's going to stop by the Japanese embassy today to sign a condolence book. Anything else you can share about how the administration is going to respond to this assassination? Any consideration of the President or Vice President traveling for the funeral? Anything like that at this point in time?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So don't have anything to share on the funeral travel. believe -- believe that they haven't set a date yet for the former prime minister. The President mentioned that he tried to give a call to the Prime Minister of -- Kishida, the current Prime Minister, obviously, to offer up his condolences.

You all saw the President's statement from this morning, where he is deeply saddened and outraged that his friend and former Prime Minister Abe was shot and killed. We send our deepest condolences to former prime minister and his family and all those who loved him. The President and the American pu- -- the American people stand with the people of Japan in their time of mourning. We have unwavering confidence in the strength of Japanese democracy and firmly believe that the former Prime Minister's legacy will live on.

For -- as far as travel or funeral arrangements, believe those have not been set, and just don't have anything to share at this time.

- Q One follow-up on that question, Karine.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Sure. You can follow up.
- Q Would the administration be open to the possibility of including President Trump as part of the presidential delegation that goes to the funeral?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Again, as far as know, a funeral date has not been scheduled. would --

Q They're doing this July 12, so that would be the same day that the President is traveling.

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: -- again, don't have anything to share with you on his travel at this time. But would refer you to President Trump on his own plans. can't speak to that from here.

Go ahead.

Q Thank you, Karine. You've talked a little bit about privacy today. Does the President think it's appropriate for abortion rights protesters to intimidate Supreme Court justices when they're out to eat, like Brett Kavanaugh, who had to sneak out of a steakhouse last night?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: We have been pretty clear on this, the President has been very clear, that we condemn any intimidation of judges in this specific question here. We have condemned that. We have signed -- he has assigned a piece of legislation making sure that they have the protection that they need. And so we --

Q But you never said, "Don't go to their houses." So as long as they're peaceful, would you say, "Don't go to a restaurant that a Supreme Court justice is at"?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: What 'm saying is we condemn any intimidation when it comes to judges. We've been -- the President has talked about this, and we have put out statements in his name and many, many times.

Q So there are circumstances that it's okay if protesters know that if a justice is out to eat at a restaurant, that pro---

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well --

 ${\tt Q}$ -- that they can go and protest as long as they are what you consider peaceful? That's okay?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, we have said that we want to see peaceful protests. That's what we have said. We want to see the pe- -- the protests be peaceful. But when it comes to intimidation, that is something that we have condemned.

Q So where's the line? f these protesters can go to a justice's house and they can go to a restaurant, where is it that you don't think it's appropriate for a group of protesters to go?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Where is -- just laid out. You asked me about intimidation. We condemn intimidation. We condemn any violence. And we've been very clear that is -- it is like clear -- it is a clear definition of what violence is and what intimidation is. Peaceful protest -- people should be allowed to be -- to be able to do that.

Q n a restaurant?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: f it's outside of a restaurant, if it's peaceful, for sure.

Q Really?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Peaceful protest. Where is -- you were -- your first question to me was "intimidation" --

- Q So these justices --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: -- and violence.
- Q -- because protesters do not agree with an opinion that they signed on to, have no right to privacy, is what you're saying?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: But, Peter, this is -- this is -- people have the right -- this is what a democracy is. People have the right --

Q Do people have a right to privacy?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Of course, people have a right to privacy, but people also have a right to be able to protest peacefully. Peacefully.

- 0 s that safe?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: t's the intimidation and the violence that we condemn.
- Q s -- is that safe?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Peter --
- Q sn't that creating a potential really bad situation when there are people -even if they're being peaceful at the time, they're angry. And that's why they would be there, right?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Peter, we have condemned any intimidation and violence.
- Q But you just said it's okay if they go to a restaurant.
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: said peaceful protest should be allowed. We do -- we do commen -- condemn intimidation --
- Q That's not --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: -- and we condemn any violence at any -- whatever -- every ty- -- whatever type of violence. We've been very clear on that. We've been --
- Q So President Biden --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: And the President has signed -- the President has signed legislation that was passed bipart- -- in a bipartisan way in Congress to make sure that the judges have the protection that they need. We -- this administration -- has provided U.S. Marshals, through the DOJ, to make sure that these judges are protected. So we have shown how we want to make sure that intimidation and violence is not the way to go. t is not the way to have a political discourse.

'm done here, Peter.

Go ahead.

Q The Mexican President will be here next week. want to get from you what President Biden expects out of that. And secondly, if you can respond to the criticism from the Mexican President over the spying charges against Julian Assange.

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, 'll speak to the -- to the AM O meeting -- is what you're speaking to.

ook, the President and the First ady look forward to welcoming the President of Mexico and the First ady here to Washington next week. t's going to be a bilateral visit, as we've spoken about before. And they'll have an opportunity to carry -- to work on the summit -- to carry out the work of the Summit of the Americas forward. That was the summit that happened in os Angeles not too long ago, just a few short weeks ago.

They will discuss a broad and deep agenda, including joint efforts on migration, food security, and economic opportunity. And so the President looks forward to having that conversation, and he's going to welcome them next week.

Q Can you -- could you address that second part? The president made some very critical comments about tearing down the Statue of iberty, you know, if the U.S. proceeds with that -- he's offered asylum there. Which -- what's the administration's response?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, we see -- we see AM O, the President of Mexico, as a partner. We are -- they are welcomed here next week. We're going to have a bilateral meeting. There will be many conversations that will be had. And 'm going to leave it as that.

Go ahead.

Q Can just follow up on one last question?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Yeah. Yeah, sure.

Q t's been reported that the President is considering giving a speech after the January 6th hearings are completed. Can you -- can you discuss that with us? And what's the -- what would be the intent of that?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: cannot confirm a speech that the President -- the President may or may not be having. That is not -- right now we are letting the January 6th Committee hearing go and do their -- do their jobs.

The President has -- as he has said many times and we have said many times, thinks it's -- their work is important. s it a -- it is an independent process that they are -- a bipartisan, independent process that they're running.

And we believe -- as the hearings are going on, we believe it's important for the American people to see exactly what happened on that day. January 6th was a dark day for our democracy. t was an attack on our law enforcement. And so we wanted -- we want to respect their process, and we're just not going to comment on that while it's going on.

do not have a speech to confirm for you at this time.

Go ahead.

Q Thanks, Karine. The White House has taken credit for the recent drop in gas prices. Do you believe that the administration's moves are more responsible for that drop than, say, changing consumer behavior and the fact that some recession jitters also seem to be pushing oil prices under $100 a barrel?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So, as you heard from the President today, he -- we saw the gas prices go down for 25 consecutive days and about 25 cents.

While we understand that that is not enough, and we understand that people are still going through a lot -- a lot of pain and with the -- with the cost of gas prices -- we know what it means for families.

But we do believe that the President has really taken this on these last several months: when it comes to Strategic Petroleum Reserve and that historic 1 million barrels a day; when it comes to the homegrown biofuels, the ethanol 15, that the President has called on. Remember that is only available in the wintertime; we made that available during the summer. And all of those -- all of the work that the President has done has helped to blunt the price increase.

Now, remember this price increase is due to Putin's -- Putin's tax hikes, Putin's war -- a brutal war on Ukraine. And that's why we have seen the increase of gas prices. That's why we have seen the increase -- food.

And so, the President is going to continue to do the work. We know we need to do more. That's why he asked for the gas tax holiday, which we -- is something that we're calling on Congress to do, something that's very, very easy to do that's going to give some -- a little bit more relief to the American public.

But, again, we are happy to see the decrease of gas prices. But we know we need to do more.

- Q Karine?
- Q Karine --
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Hold on, -- go ahead, Phil. haven't seen you in a while.
- Q Thank you, Karine. The President shared that tragic story, moments ago, about the 10-year-old girl who had to travel across state lines to receive an abortion. And 'm wondering, has the White House confirmed that local law enforcement knows the identity of this 10-year-old victim? And has the President directed the DOJ to do everything it can to prosecute the abuser and protect her?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So 'll say this: Anything to do with the DOJ that's a -- that's a legal component, would refer you to DO- -- to DOJ. don't have more to share on the identity of this young woman or the question that you just asked me.

The President spoke to that -- a young woman -- just to show how extreme the decision on -- the Dobbs decision was and just how extreme it is now for American public, the American families when there is no exception at all. When you have such a young girl who has to carry out the child of a rapist, that is unacceptable. You heard that from him directly.

And this is why he is calling for action. This is why he's trying to do everything that he can from his legal authority that he has. And so, he's going to continue to do that work.

But again, it is -- we have to make sure Congress acts.

Q Right. But is he taking any steps to protect her? Or does he expect that, you know, law enforcement will? know he cited her in the speech, and know that he wants some of these larger reforms, he wants Congress to act. But, mean, this little one certainly seems to be (inaudible).

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, think what the President is calling on and what he has laid out is to protect girls and women like her and beyond -- right? -- who do not have the rights and the freedom. That is why he's calling for the action that just laid out for Congress.

That is why he is using his legal authority and making -- and made an announcement on the executive authority -- the executive action today.

And so, he's going to continue to do that work. He's going to do everything that he can to protect young people who are like this young girl.

But at the same time, he's going to call it out and use his bully pulpit to make it clear of what is happening out there is unacceptable.

Q And just a very, very quick follow-up. asked on Tuesday about the releases from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. Were there any conversations before that release about making certain that that oil -- the million barrels a day -- stayed domestic? mean, was the administration aware that, you know, some of that oil could end up going overseas?

MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So when it comes to the oil, it is something that oil companies decide what -- you know, we cannot control what oil companies do with their oil.

And so, would ask -- you should ask the oil companies about where they are sending the oil they purchase and why. That is not something that we can answer from here.

The Department of Energy can't dictate what oil companies do with the oil they purchase or where they ship it to sell. That is something, again, that the oil company decides on.

And again, would refer you to Department of Energy on that question.

Q Thank you, Karine.

- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Okay. Thank you. We got to go. Okay, go ahead, Phil.
- Q Just real quick. The President has been so sharp in his denunciations of this Court -- of this Court's majority -- a majority that -- nobody is going anywhere anytime soon. f he's so sharply opposed to what they've done, why doesn't he support any changes to this Court or this Court's majority?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, because the President believes the best way to use our political capital is to make sure that we do everything that we can to get Congress to act; to make sure that we do everything we can to get pro-choice Democrats in the Senate, pro-choice Democrats in the House; to really codify Roe into law. That is the fastest way, the best way that we can get this done. That's why he's calling on the American people to go to the ballot box and get their voices heard. And that is the best way that we can get that done.
- Q (naudible.)
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: know. Simon, owe -- owe you a question. Go ahead.
- Q have two questions. The former President of Angola, Eduardo dos Santos, died today at the age of 79. Does the President have any reaction or any plans to call President João ourenço?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: So -- don't have any calls to preview at this time. Clearly, it is sad to hear that news. And, you know, our sympathies and condolences go out to the family. just don't have a call to preview at this time.
- Q The second question: know in the past few weeks you've had questions on abortion, on inflation -- everything that goes wrong with the President. s there anything -- or can you list a few things that are going right for this President at this moment?
- MS. JEAN-P ERRE: Well, would point you to the jobs numbers today. We saw 375,000 jobs in this pa- -- in the past month. While we understand what the American public is going through at this time, that is a good sign. That is a good sign for the economy.

And we also saw that unemployment rate is -- it remains at 3.6.

And in -- also, in those numbers, we saw that we are -- we have created -- we are back to the pre-pandemic job numbers when it comes to the private sector, which is incredibly important. And we've added jobs. We saw 1 million jobs added in this past quarter.

All of those things are very important as we talk about moving this historic economic recovery into tran- -- into a transition so that we can really truly deal with inflation.

And so think these numbers -- and you heard the President talk about that. He listed all of the -- all of the items that just listed in -- at the top of his speech.

And one more thing that someone just asked me as well is: We saw gas prices drop by 25 cents this past two weeks. That is also important.

We understand there's more work to be done. But a lot of that that we are seeing is because of the work that this President has done. When you look at the jobs number — is because of this — the work that this President has done. When you think about the American Rescue Plan, how it turned the economy back on — all of those things are incredibly important.

But again, we have more work to do, and we will continue to do that work on behalf of the American people.

Thank you. Thanks, guys.

Listen to today's Daily Briefing

DRIVING THE DAY

BREAKING OVERNIGHT — Former Japanese Prime Minister SHINZO ABE was shot and killed during a campaign speech Friday in western Japan. He was 67.

AP: "He was airlifted to a hospital but officials said he was not breathing and his heart had stopped. Police arrested the suspected gunman at the scene of an attack that shocked many in Japan, which is one of the world's safest nations and has some of the strictest gun control laws anywhere. ... The former leader is still highly influential in the governing Liberal Democratic Party and heads its largest faction, Seiwakai. Elections for Japan's upper house, the less powerful chamber of its parliament, are Sunday."

NHK: "Sources with the investigation tell NHK a gun seized at the scene appeared to be handmade."

RECESSION WATCH — The June jobs report will be released at 8:30 a.m. Along with next Wednesday's June CPI report, this morning's data will help inform the Fed when it meets on July 26 and 27 to decide how much more to hike interest rates. The Fed is debating between a .5-or .75-percentage-point hike. A good report today — say, above 250,000 jobs created in June — means the larger hike is more likely as the Fed tries to cool the economy.

THE USICA-RECONCILIATION DANCE — CHUCK SCHUMER made a couple of new moves in his effort to advance two pieces of legislation tangled in political knots.

Recall that Senate Minority Leader MITCH MCCONNELL recently tweeted, "There will be no bipartisan USICA as long as Democrats are pursuing a partisan reconciliation bill."

USICA, the United States Innovation and Competition Act, is the industrial policy legislation that would shower the semiconductor industry with $52 billion of incentives to ramp up chipmaking in America. China hawks like the bill because it makes the U.S. less reliant on Chinese imports. The Biden administration hails it as a policy that will strengthen the supply chain, boost domestic manufacturing, and "help us outcompete China."

The new reconciliation bill being negotiated by Schumer and Sen. JOE MANCHIN (D-W.Va.), who tanked the last one in December, has been inching along.

"Roughly speaking, Manchin and Schumer are working toward legislation that provides $1 trillion in new revenues, half of which would go toward deficit reduction and half of which would go toward energy and health spending," report Burgess Everett and Marianne Levine. "Such a deal is hypothetical at the moment: The tax and energy pieces remain in major flux."

This week, the portion of the bill dealing with prescription drug pricing was submitted to the parliamentarian for review, though the two parties haven't yet made their presentations before her. (Democrats have told Republicans they are ready to start next week.)

A message from Meta:

Learn how Meta is helping build the metaverse.

If they had to choose between the USICA and a reconciliation bill, most Dems would rather have the reconciliation bill, so it's unclear how much McConnell's threat matters. But Schumer is doing two new things to put pressure on the minority leader and his GOP colleagues:

- He's amping up the national security case for USICA. According to a spokesperson, Schumer has "requested an all-Senators classified briefing from the administration on the global innovation and technology race" and USICA. The briefing is scheduled for next Wednesday.
- He's highlighting a new highly popular piece of reconciliation. Schumer has crafted a proposal for the reconciliation package that would extend the solvency of Medicare through 2031 by taxing very high earners. (The AP has the full details of the idea.) Schumer is ready to submit the Medicare proposal to the parliamentarian, likely on Monday.

Next week will be busy on both fronts, and these two Schumer moves are aimed at McConnell's threat linking the two bills. (We remember when McConnell thought linkage was bad because it would "hold a bipartisan bill hostage over a separate and partisan process"!)

"McConnell [is] in [a] tough spot," one Senate Democrat argued to Playbook last night. "Blocking tough-on China-bill because he doesn't want to extend Medicare and lower prescription drug prices." Then again, this could be wishful thinking: One thing McConnell has learned over the years is that when you're in the minority, there is little price to pay for obstruction.

Happy Friday. Thanks for reading Playbook. Drop us a line with your best constitutional argument for the right to eat dinner: Rachael Bade, Eugene Daniels, Ryan Lizza.

"THE RIGHT ... TO EAT DINNER"—On Wednesday night, D.C. protesters targeting the conservative Supreme Court justices who signed onto the Dobbs decision overturning the constitutional right to abortion got a tip that Justice BRETT KAVANAUGH was dining at Morton's downtown D.C. location. Protesters soon showed up out front, called the manager to tell him to kick Kavanaugh out and later tweeted that the justice was forced to exit through the rear of the restaurant.

Daniel Lippman looked into the incident for us and confirmed that account.

While the court had no official comment on Kavanaugh's behalf and a person familiar with the situation said he did not hear or see the protesters and ate a full meal but left before dessert, Morton's was outraged about the incident. A rep for the chain steakhouse sent Lippman this statement:

"Honorable Supreme Court Justice Kavanaugh and all of our other patrons at the restaurant were unduly harassed by unruly protestors while eating dinner at our Morton's restaurant. Politics, regardless of your side or views, should not trample the freedom at play of the right to congregate and eat dinner. There is a time and place for everything. Disturbing the dinner of all of our customers was an act of selfishness and void of decency."

MUST-READ OF THE DAY — Michael Schaffer on Mark Leibovich's new book, "Thank You for Your Servitude":

""I wrote in "This Town," oh my God, the top guy at Treasury went to Goldman, what an outrage, you know?' [Leibovich] says. 'And now we're using terms like "civil war" and "threat to democracy" and it's not overheated, and we basically have bigger fish to fry.'

THE WHITE HOUSE

BIDEN TO TAKE ACTION ON ABORTION — Biden is planning to "take executive action Friday to protect access to abortion," AP's Seung Min Kim and Zeke Miller scooped late Thursday night.

The details: "The actions he was expected to outline are intended to try to mitigate some potential penalties women seeking abortion may face after the ruling, but are limited in their ability to safeguard access to abortion nationwide. Biden is expected to formalize instructions to the Departments of Justice and Health and Human Services to push back on efforts to limit the ability of women to access federally approved abortion medication or to travel across state lines to access clinical abortion services."

BIDEN HIS TIME — Plenty of ink has been spilled about Dems questioning whether Biden is prepared to meet the moment that he is facing on multiple fronts that threaten to undermine his administration and wipe out Democrats in the midterms. And those stories don't show sign of stopping anytime soon: "Underlying it all is a concern that Biden and his team are not just out of fresh ideas, but increasingly out of time to turn around their flagging poll numbers before the midterms," Jonathan Lemire and Christopher Cadelago report this morning.

"Rather than abruptly changing strategy, Biden's team has doubled down on what it believes is an effective two-pronged approach: First, to make steady — if at times slow — progress on the challenges it faces, or at least demonstrate to voters the president is fighting an intractable problem; and second, to highlight contrasts with Republicans to paint them as a party beholden to its extremists and doing little to help struggling Americans."

MIKE MADRID, a veteran Republican strategist and Trump critic: "He's the last of his kind. He served in the Senate for decades when it worked. He built personal relationships across the aisle when that still happened. He still believes the system works, or at least hopes it can. ... But that time has passed."

ALL POLITICS

GOP SENATE HOPEFULS' HIGH-RISK STRATEGY — Out with the old, in with the new. Several bipartisan deal-making Republicans are retiring from the Senate. And whereas they made reelection appeals in years past that were aimed at playing to the middle, they're being replaced this year by a slate of GOP candidates that is "largely foregoing appeals to the center, instead doubling down on conservative positions — from opposing popular bipartisan reforms to celebrating the rollback of abortion rights," Natalie Allison writes this morning.

"The stark difference in rhetoric and policy positions between those outgoing senators and the Republicans back home running for their seats also illustrates the deeply polarizing approach being taken by a new crop of GOP candidates," Natalie writes. "It's a reflection of both the Trumpification of the party and a calculation that they can still win because the environment is so bad for Democrats this year. And it shows their apparent belief that the electorate now prefers fighters, not peacemakers."

THE GOP'S MICHIGAN PROBLEM — AP's Brian Slodysko, Sara Burnett and Thomas Beaumont take a magnifying glass to Republicans' efforts to unseat Michigan Gov. GRETCHEN WHITMER, which they write is "shaping up as a battle of whose personal baggage is the least disqualifying." Among the GOP field, which has been littered with scandal after scandal, "there's little reliable polling to suggest there's a clear front-runner among the remaining candidates. But Republicans insist Whitmer is still vulnerable this fall given rising prices for gas and food and her close ties to President Joe Biden, whose approval ratings remain low."

TRUMP CARDS

WHAT'S UP AT THE IRS — The IRS on Thursday called it "ludicrous and untrue to suggest" that officials at the agency specifically targeted both JAMES COMEY and ANDREW MCCABE for an extremely intense and extraordinarily rare audit, as the NYT reported on Wednesday.

Lawmakers, however, found it hard to believe it was a simple coincidence. Despite his agency's pushback, IRS Commissioner CHUCK RETTIG said on Thursday that he personally requested a Treasury Department watchdog to investigate the matter, Bernie Becker and Brian Faler report.

The controversy comes at an interesting time for Rettig: "The IRS commissioner's term is to expire in November, and Biden administration officials had already begun interviewing potential candidates for his replacement before this week's news," WaPo's Jeff Stein reports, and Rettig has "expressed openness to a second term."

IMMIGRATION FILES — The Biden administration is staring down another major immigration decision deadline to decide the fate of hundreds of thousands of Venezuelan exiles living in the U.S. "But with days to go for a decision, officials are still torn, juggling the benefits it could have on their political standing in Florida and the potential it brings to worsen the migrant buildup on the U.S. southern border," Sabrina Rodríguez reports.

— In Texas: Gov. GREG ABBOTT on Thursday "cleared state authorities to return migrants they apprehend to the border," the Texas Tribune's James Barragán and Patrick Svitek report, "setting up a potential clash with the federal government over the authority to enforce immigration law."

WHAT COMES AFTER BOJO — Our colleague Nahal Toosi has the deets on the U.S. response to BORIS JOHNSON stepping down as British PM: "The so-called special relationship that binds the United States and the United Kingdom has survived wars, Donald Trump and Brexit. It will survive the departure of Boris Johnson. It might even improve. And if his no-namecheck statement on the matter is any indication, President Joe Biden is ready to move on. ... Outwardly, U.S. officials are playing it cool even as the resignation has rattled the U.K. If the clamor surrounding Johnson's myriad scandals fades and a more solid prime minister emerges, that could work to Washington's benefit."

THE G-20 SCENE SETTER — AP's Matthew Lee has your pre-summit reading for the G-20 confab that is set to kick off in Indonesia today: "Top diplomats from the world's richest and largest developing nations are confronting multiple crises as they open talks beset by sharp divisions over Russia's invasion of Ukraine and its impacts on food and energy security, along with climate change, endemic poverty and the lingering effects of the coronavirus pandemic."
