FEDERAL FIREARMS STATUTES

Elements for Federal Prosecution

INTRODUCTION

Fortunately, Maine has historically experienced a violent crime rate well below the national average. Nonetheless, every effort must be made to further reduce violence to ensure that all Mainers are safe in our neighborhoods, schools, places of business and employment, and in our homes. Because Solutions to the root causes of violence require a focused, collaborative national and local effort.

To that end, the Department of Justice and the U.S. Attorney's Office in Maine have instituted Project Safe Neighborhoods (PSN Maine), an initiative designed to prevent, disrupt, and reduce violence. Maine's PSN Team includes representatives from local and state law enforcement, domestic violence groups, schools, civic groups and business works to develop a comprehensive strategy to address this issue. Part of this strategy includes support for state and local law enforcement agencies with specialized teams that address violent crime throughout the state and an aggressive enforcement policy for the coordinated prosecution of all firearm crime.

This booklet is designed to offer a concise summary of some of the federal statutes which can be used to prosecute violent offenders in Maine. It is not exhaustive; however, it describes the principal available federal statutes. By distributing this information, we hope to generate referrals of cases to our office or the appropriate federal agency and hence assist state prosecutors and law enforcement personnel in their efforts to combat violent crime within Maine.

Thank you for your partnership and interest in keeping Maine safe. Please do not hesitate to contact my office if you have any questions about the applicability of any of these statutes to specific situations.

FREQUENTLY ENCOUNTERED FEDERAL FIREARM OFFENSES

Definition of a Firearm

For purposes of § 922 and § 924 violations 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(3) defines a "firearm" as:

- A. any weapon (including a starter gun) which will or is designed to or may readily be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive;
- B. the frame or receiver of any such weapon;
- C. any firearm muffler or firearm silencer; or
- D. any destructive device. Such term does not include an antique firearm.

This broad definition encompasses not only operable firearms but those that have been disassembled or dismantled or altered in such a way that they are inoperable at the time of the offense. For example, this definition has been found to include a firearm with the hammer filed down because it could be "readily converted" to expel a projectile. United States v. Ruiz, 986 F.2d 905 (5th Cir. 1993). This same justification applies for including starter guns within the definition of a firearm. "Firearm" is defined differently for violations of 26 U.S.C. § 5861. See 26 U.S.C. § 5845 (a) and Appendix.

Possession of Prohibited Firearms

While there are a number of exceptions, federal law prohibits the possession of firearms with obliterated serial numbers and machine guns manufactured after May 19, 1986. See 18 U.S.C. § 922 (k), (o). In addition, unless registered to the possessor in the National Firearms Registration and Transfer Record, it is generally unlawful to possess short-barreled shotguns (defined as one with a barrel length of less than 18" or overall length less than 26"), short-barreled rifles (defined as one with a barrel length of less than 16" or overall length less than 26"), machine guns, silencers, and destructive devices. See 26 U.S.C. §§ 5845, 5861.

Penalties for Possessing a Prohibited Firearm

The statutory maximum for knowingly possessing a firearm with an altered serial number is five years and/or $250,000. 18 U.S.C. § 924 (a)(1)(B). Under the sentencing guidelines, a defendant with no prior record and one gun would likely receive approximately 15-21 months for possessing a sawed-off shotgun or a firearm with an altered serial number. A defendant with a substantial record including at least one conviction for drug trafficking or a crime of violence is eligible for a sentence of approximately 70-87 months for the same offense. Possessing an unregistered silencer, short barreled rifle, short barreled shotgun, destructive device or a sawed-off shotgun is punishable by a fine of up to $10,000 and/or 10 years in prison. 26 U.S.C. § 5871. For the possession of a machine gun manufactured after May 19, 1986, the statutory maximum is 10 years and/or $250,000. 18 U.S.C. § 924(a)(2).

Possession of Firearms by Prohibited Person

Possession of a firearm by a "prohibited person" is illegal. Under 18 U.S.C. § 922 (g) there are nine categories of prohibited persons. Generally, they include:

- felons;
- fugitives;
- unlawful users of or addicts to a controlled substance;
- persons who have been adjudicated as mentally "defective" or who have been involuntarily committed to a mental institution;
- illegal aliens and non-immigrant aliens;
- persons dishonorably discharged from the armed forces;
- persons who have renounced their U.S. citizenship;
- persons who are the subject of a qualifying domestic protection order; and
- persons convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence.

A prohibited person cannot possess, ship, transport or receive a firearm or ammunition that has traveled in interstate commerce. While this booklet cannot cover every nuance of these categories, some clearly warrant further explanation.

Felon in possession - 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1)

Felon in possession charges are considered for all individuals in possession of firearms who have been previously convicted of a felony and special attention is given to individuals who have been convicted of crimes of violence or serious drug transactions. Under this category, generally anyone who has been convicted of a crime punishable by more than one year in prison is a prohibited person.

Similarly, a person under indictment for a crime punishable by more than a year is prohibited from receiving a firearm. 18 U.S.C. § 922 (n).

In federal court, it is not enough to merely introduce a prior conviction — you must show that the defendant is the individual convicted. This can be done through stipulation, fingerprint or signature cards, date of birth or social security number, and testimony of the arresting officer for the prior charge, or the testimony of the defendant's parole or probation officer.

Unlawful user of or addict to a controlled substance

18 U.S.C. § 922 (g) (3) and case law do not provide clear guidance on who is considered to be an unlawful user of or addict to a controlled substance. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives regulations require that the use must have occurred "recently enough to indicate that the individual is actively engaged in such conduct." 27 C.F.R. pt 178.11.

This statute has survived constitutional void for vagueness challenges. United States v. Edwards, 540 F.3d 1156, 1162 (10th Cir. 2008). While courts do not require contemporaneous use, a temporal nexus is required between the drug use and the firearm possession. United States v. Burchard, 580 F.3d 341, 352 (6th Cir. 2009). Courts now examine the “pattern and recency” of the defendant’s drug use in determining if there is a temporal nexus between the possession of the firearm and drug use.

Obviously, the easiest method of demonstrating drug use is to question the defendant regarding his or her drug use habits. Use also may be demonstrated through drug tests and arrest records. If a defendant is found with a small quantity of drugs and a gun, good police work is essential in determining the most appropriate charge. If the defendant says that drugs are only for personal use, he or she may be charged under § 922(g)(3). If the defendant is a distributor, then § 924 (c) may apply.

Domestic violence prohibitions, 18 U.S.C. §§ 922(g)(8) and (g)(9)

Congress passed the domestic violence-related firearm prohibitions (18 U.S.C. §§ 922(g)(8) and (g)(9)) out of concern for the number of domestic violence assaults that can and do escalate into firearm homicides and out of a hope that keeping domestic violence perpetrators from possessing guns would save the lives of victims of domestic violence. The U.S. Attorney’s Office is committed to prosecuting domestic violence-based federal gun violations, including violations of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(8) - possession of a firearm by a person under a qualifying protection order, and 18 U.S.C. § 922 (g)(9) - possession of a firearm by a person convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence. Recently, the First Circuit held in United States v. Minor, 63 F.4th 112, 118 n.4 (1st Cir. 2023) (en banc) that a conviction under § 922(g)(9) requires the government to prove that, (i) the defendant had been previously convicted of an offense that “is a misdemeanor under Federal, State, or Tribal law”; (ii) that his prior conviction required proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant “use[d] or attempted [to] use . . . physical force”; and (iii) the victim of that offense was, at the time of the offense, in one of the statutorily defined domestic relationships with the defendant. 18 U.S.C. § 921(a)(33)(A). Physical force, in this context, tracks the Castleman definition: “intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly causing bodily injury or offensive physical contact to another person.” See U.S. v. Castleman, 572 U.S. 157, 134, S. Ct., 188 L.Ed.2d 426 (2014).

Questions regarding the applicability of these provisions should be referred to an Assistant United States Attorney.

Penalties for Possession by A Prohibited Person

Absent sentencing enhancements for armed career criminals, 18 U.S.C. § 924(a)(2) provides that the maximum penalty for most prohibited persons in possession of a firearm is 10 years and $250,000. The outcome in most cases will be determined by the sentencing guidelines. A prohibited person who is found in possession of one gun but who has no prior record will likely receive approximately 15-21 months. A prohibited person with a substantial record that includes one conviction for a crime of violence or drug trafficking is eligible for a sentence of approximately 70-87 months.

Armed career criminals receive enhanced penalties in the federal system. This office considers the prosecution of armed career criminals to be of the highest importance. An armed career criminal is a person who has three or more convictions for a serious drug offense or a felony crime of violence, which includes crimes that have, as an element, the use, attempted use or threatened use of physical force against the person of another. A defendant who falls into this category faces a mandatory minimum of 15 years imprisonment under 18 U.S.C. § 924(e).

The Commerce Clause and a Prohibited Person

In order to establish federal jurisdiction in § 922 cases, the gun involved must have traveled in interstate or foreign commerce. For firearms cases the prosecutor needs to show only that the firearm or ammunition crossed a state line at some point in its history. For example, if the firearm was manufactured in Michigan and is recovered in Maine, the interstate nexus requirement has been satisfied. If the firearm was made in Maine and recovered in Maine, but the prosecutor can demonstrate that it was used to commit a crime in Maryland 10 years ago, this too will suffice. The best way to establish that the gun has traveled in interstate commerce is to contact the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF), which can trace crime guns to determine the location of manufacture and/or subsequent sale.

Use of a Firearm in Drug Trafficking or Violent Crimes

The prosecution of defendants who use a firearm in connection with a crime of violence or with a drug trafficking crime is a priority for this office. A person who "uses or carries" a firearm during or in relation to, or possesses a firearm "in furtherance of," drug trafficking or a crime of violence that can be prosecuted in federal court may receive enhanced penalties under 18 U.S.C. § 924(c). Most of the cases arising out of this statute have centered on the definitions of "use," "carry," and "in furtherance of." In an unpublished First Circuit opinion (United States v. Dolliver, July 2007), the Court found that bartering drugs for firearms was sufficient to prove a violation of §924(c)(1)(A)(i).

Meaning of "Use" under § 924(c)

Courts have determined that "use" of a firearm requires something more than mere possession; it requires active employment of the weapon. Bailey v. United States, 516 U.S. 137, 149 (1995) defines active employment to include: "brandishing, displaying, battering, striking with, and most obviously, firing or attempting to fire a firearm." The Bailey court also notes that "use" can mean "to convert to one's service," "employ," "avail oneself of," and to make "reference to" if referring to the firearm is calculated to make the transaction easier.

For example, a drug dealer who keeps a firearm in the closet during a drug transaction cannot be said to have "used" the firearm unless he makes reference to the weapon during the transaction. However, this same section also prohibits possession of a firearm "in furtherance of" drug trafficking. Under the "fortress theory," if the defendant uses a firearm to protect the house in which drugs or the proceeds of drugs are kept, he could be guilty of possession in furtherance of drug trafficking.

Meaning of "Carry" under § 924(c)

The federal circuits have varying definitions of "carry." All circuits agree that carrying requires knowing possession and transportation of the firearm. United States v. Mitchell, 104 F.3d 494, 653 (4th Cir. 1997). However, the First, Second, Sixth and Ninth circuits also require that the firearm be readily accessible. See United States v. Ramirez-Ferrer, 82 F.3d 1149, 1153-4 (1st Cir. 1996); United States v. Cruz-Rojas, 101 F.3d 283 (2d Cir. 1996); United States v. Riascos-Suarez, 73 F.3d 616, 623 (6th Cir. 1996); United States v. Hernandez, 80 F.3d 1253, 1257-8 (9th Cir. 1996).

In a jurisdiction that requires that the firearm be accessible, transporting a gun in the trunk of a car will not qualify as carrying because the defendant does not have easy access to the weapon.

Meaning of "in furtherance of"

One of the principal cases in determining the definition and scope of "in furtherance of" is United States v. Ceballos-Torres, 218 F.3d 409 (5th Cir. 2002). Possession of a firearm is "in furtherance of" a drug trafficking crime "when it furthers, advances, or helps forward that offense." Id. at 411.

First, an accessible gun provides defense against anyone who may attempt to rob the trafficker of his drugs or drug profits. Second, possession of a gun, and letting everyone know that you are armed, lessens the chance that a robbery will even be attempted. Third, having a gun accessible during a transaction provides protection in case a drug deal in the apartment turns sour. Fourth, the visible presence of a gun during the transaction may prevent the deal from turning sour in the first place. Fifth, having a gun may allow the drug trafficker to defend 'turf,' areas of the street from which lower level dealers operate for the trafficker. There may be other ways. Id. at 412.

§ 924 (c) Does Not Require The Gun to Have Traveled in Interstate Commerce

Because the underlying offense (drug trafficking or a crime of violence over which there is federal jurisdiction) is prosecutable in federal court, there is no interstate nexus requirement for the gun itself.

Offense	Penalty
Standard case	Not less than 5 years
Brandishing the firearm	Not less than 7 years
Discharging the firearm	Not less than 10 years
A short barreled rifle or shotgun	Not less than 10 years
A machine gun, destructive device or silencer	Not less than 30 years
Second or subsequent conviction	Not less than 25 years
Second or subsequent conviction and the gun is a machine gun, destructive device or silencer	LIFE

The Penalties for a Violation of § 924(c)

Penalties under this section vary depending on the type of firearm, how the firearm was used and whether the offense is the defendant's first violation. All sentences under this section must be served consecutively to any other sentence, and offenders are not eligible for probation. Under federal law, the second conviction does not have to be the result of a separate incident.

THE BRADY ACT

The Brady Act obligates law enforcement officials to conduct background checks before someone can purchase a handgun from a gun dealer. Under the Brady Act, it is unlawful for any licensed dealer to sell, deliver or transfer a handgun to an individual who is not licensed unless there is compliance with the Brady Act waiting period. Violation of this statute carries a penalty of not more than one year imprisonment, as well as a $1,000 fine. See 18 U.S.C. §§922(s)(1) and 924(a)(5).

Also, any person who makes a false statement to a licensed dealer in connection with the acquisition of a firearm shall be punished by imprisonment for no more than ten years. See 18 U.S.C. §§922(a)(6) and 924(a)(2). A false statement can include:

name, age, address, date of birth, identification number, and status as convicted felon, fugitive, unlawful user of or addict to controlled substance, prior commitment to a mental institution, illegal alien, dishonorable discharge from the military, status as U.S. citizen who has renounced citizenship, being subject to certain protection orders and having been convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence. False statements can also include the representation that the purchaser is the real intended owner of the firearm when the purchaser is actually making a "straw" purchase for someone else.

Although this is a crime separate and apart from the Brady Act, every time a Brady background check establishes that a handgun should not be sold to the prospective purchaser, the prospective purchaser has falsified the form and, accordingly, the false statement statute has been violated.

DRUG-RELATED HOME INVASIONS

Armed drug-related robberies, especially home invasion robberies, are appropriate cases for federal prosecution and will be prosecuted where federal jurisdiction exists and where acceptable sentencing criteria are present. Federal jurisdiction can be predicated on the commission of a drug offense as part of the robbery or on the armed defendant's felony record. For example, where two or more people agree to break into a home and steal a distributable quantity of drugs, they have committed a drug conspiracy. If a gun is carried in the execution of the plan, they have violated 18 U.S.C. §924(c), which carries a mandatory five-year sentence consecutive to any other sentence imposed. If the robber is a felon, the case is prosecutable as a firearm felon case.

Home invasion cases that are accepted for federal prosecution include those in which the defendant is an armed career criminal, a career offender or a major drug dealer. In addition, most cases in which there is a provable 924(c) case will be accepted for federal prosecution.

STRAW PURCHASE, 18 U.S.C. § 932

It is against federal law for any person to knowingly purchase a firearm on behalf of any other person, knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that such other person— meets the criteria of 1 or more paragraphs of section 922(d), intends to use, carry, possess, or sell or otherwise dispose of the firearm in furtherance of a felony, a Federal crime of terrorism, or a drug trafficking crime, or intends to sell or otherwise dispose of the firearm to a person described in paragraph (1) or (2).

Any person who violates section 932 shall be imprisoned for not more than 15 years, or both. If a violation of subsection (b) is committed knowing or with reasonable cause to believe that any firearm involved will be used to commit a felony, a Federal crime of terrorism, or a drug trafficking crime, the person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not more than 25 years.

COMMERCIAL ROBBERIES - HOBBS ACT, 18 U.S.C. § 1951

It is against federal law to interfere with interstate commerce by means of extortion or robbery. The Hobbs Act, 18 U.S.C. §1951, is a traditional tool in combating organized crime. However, prosecution under the Hobbs Act is also available where the defendant interferes with commerce by means of a robbery. If a person robs a business that is engaged in interstate commerce, then it is possible to charge that individual with a violation of the Hobbs Act. Of course, if the robber in any particular situation carries or uses a firearm in the commission of the offense, we also have the traditional firearms statutes which can be used to prosecute the violator federally. To the extent permissible, our office will vigorously prosecute anyone who uses a firearm in the commission of a robbery.

JUVENILES

Youth Handgun Safety, 18 U.S.C. § 922(x)

The Violent Crime Control Act makes it a federal offense for a juvenile under 18 years of age to knowingly possess a handgun or handgun ammunition. The Act also makes it unlawful to transfer a handgun or handgun ammunition to a person the transferor knows or has reasonable cause to believe is under 18 years of age.

These provisions are subject to a number of exceptions, such as for the armed forces, ranching, farming, hunting and other specified uses. Some exceptions require the juvenile to be in possession of the prior written consent of his or her parent or guardian. The penalty for possession of a handgun or handgun ammunition by a juvenile is probation if the juvenile has never been convicted of an offense or adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for an offense. Otherwise, the maximum penalty for a juvenile is one year of imprisonment.

The penalty for an adult who transfers a handgun or handgun ammunition to a juvenile is ordinarily a maximum of one year of imprisonment. However, if the violator knew or had reasonable cause to know that the juvenile intended to possess or use a handgun or ammunition in a crime of violence, the maximum penalty is 10 years imprisonment.

Guns In School, 18 U.S. C. § 922(q)(2)(A)

The reduction of gun violence and gun possession in schools is also a priority of this Office. Accordingly, any individual who knowingly possesses a firearm at a place that the individual knows, or has reasonable cause to believe, is a school zone (on school grounds or public property within 1,000 feet of school grounds) violates 18 U.S. C. § 922(q)(2)(A) and faces a maximum of five years imprisonment. See enumerated exceptions listed in § 922(q)(2)(A).
