From: Doug Chapman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:32:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Doug Chapman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Davis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Larry Davis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nancy Marshall <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Nancy Marshall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Tharp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Tharp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: R J Guenther <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is R J Guenther. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Naughton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Peter Naughton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tim White <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tim White. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Glen Young <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Glen Young. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Caroline Dringle <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Caroline Dringle. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Feldman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Larry Feldman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Onofre Torres <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Onofre Torres. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Julie Pietryla <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Julie Pietryla. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dianne Hoaglin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dianne Hoaglin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Hogan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel Hogan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Case Collins <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Case Collins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Camma Roberts <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Camma L Roberts. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Moore <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael J Moore. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Del Potocnik <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Del Potocnik. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Amorah Ross <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Amorah Ross. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Swiesz <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles Swiesz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Knick <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott Knick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Sulzer <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James Sulzer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Howard Medlock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:33:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Howard Medlock Jr. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dick Bruce <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dick Bruce. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pat Laster <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Pat Laster. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Candace Corbani <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Candace Corbani. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Helen Nelling <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Helen Nelling. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joan Gremse <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joan Gremse. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Warren Pender <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Warren Pender. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Roger Salmon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Roger Salmon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Lozada <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Lozada. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Melanie Smock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Melanie Smock. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Anthony Apfelbeck <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Anthony Apfelbeck. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Arthur Fox <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:34:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Arthur Fox. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leland Anderson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Leland Anderson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Heckman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James M. Heckman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kateri T Dupuis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kateri T Dupuis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Nott <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeff Nott. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kate Garmise <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kate Garmise. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Vogt <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Eric W Vogt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Grabeck <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Grabeck. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kenneth Redmer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kenneth Redmer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dirk Friedrich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dirk E Friedrich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kenneth Carleton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kenneth Carleton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Terrance Fleming <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:35:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Terrance J Fleming. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tim Linerud <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tim C Linerud. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Keith Klesk <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Keith Klesk. I am also a retired US Naval Officer, and am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Howard Rutfield <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Howard Rutfield. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nicholas Rosen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nicholas Rosen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tamara Baltin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tamara Baltin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Carstens <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Chris Carstens. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Curtis Cook <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Curtis Cook. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Matthews <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Larry D Matthews. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Leber <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Eric Leber. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sue Barry <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sue Barry. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marsha Seas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:36:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Marsha Seas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judy Kinsman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Judy Kinsman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Spencer Walts <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Spencer Walts. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Louie Thery <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Louie Thery. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Mayo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Robert M Mayo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dana Thornley <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Dana Thornley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Anastacia Russell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Anastacia Russell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mike Stemle <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mike Stemle. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Keller <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael Keller. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Douglas Kinney <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Douglas W Kinney. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Shayee Khanaka <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Shayee H Khanaka. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rodney Hinds <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rodney Hinds. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ryan Cragun <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Ryan T. Cragun. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael G Bauer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael G Bauer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce Quarantello <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:37:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bruce Quarantello. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christine Andrews <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Christine A Andrews. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Doug Stewart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Doug Stewart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karl Jonasson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Karl Jonasson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Salemson <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steve Salemson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ted Slater <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ted Slater. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patrick Devitt <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Patrick J Devitt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jerry Horacek <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jerry L. Horacek III. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Vicki Gallegos <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Vicki Gallegos. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Frank Hawkins <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Frank Hawkins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Werbe <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Peter Werbe. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gail Jones <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Gail Jones. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Redmond <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Brian Redmond. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carrie Hildeman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:38:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Carrie Hildeman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Robbins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stephen Robbins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Janice Zembrzuski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Janice Zembrzuski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Morgan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Steven D. Morgan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Melanie Lawrence <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Melanie Lawrence. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carol Loomis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Carol J Loomis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kimberly Brammer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kimberly Brammer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tom Fennelly <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tom Fennelly. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan Cancro <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dan Cancro. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stuart Rubinow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:39:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stuart Rubinow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Jones <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Charles Christopher Jones. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Terry Walters <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Terry Walters. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Don Walker <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Don Walker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Frank Story <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Frank Story. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Raymond Raymond <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Raymond Raymond. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lee Hayward <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lee Hayward. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mike Kuhlenbeck <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mike Kuhlenbeck. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Gittleman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steven Gittleman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Douglas DiCarolis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Douglas DiCarolis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Lazar <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeffrey Lazar. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Spurlock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:40:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Eric Spurlock. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kerstin Lawrence <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Kerstin Lawrence. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Glenn Deacon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Glenn Deacon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Coffey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott Coffey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ben Brunette <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Ben Brunette. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Manuel Beltran Delgado <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Manuel Andrés Beltran Delgado. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Baker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Scott Baker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ann Wendell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Ann Wendell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: JosephoAdams <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joseph Adams. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kenneth Noyes <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kenneth R Noyes. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Aram Azadpour <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Aram Azadpour. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tim Wescott <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:41:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tim Wescott. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dale Oliver <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:42:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dale Oliver. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sheila Bryan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:42:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sheila Bryan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jordan Brown-Dorsey <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:42:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jordan Brown-Dorsey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Heather Layne <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:42:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Heather Layne. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Fitzpatrick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William E Fitzpatrick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Keith Ovregaard <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Keith Ovregaard. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Tribotti <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Tribotti. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jason Lankford <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jason Lankford. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kim Hall <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Kim Hall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Hayes <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David TK Hayes. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gayle Hagensen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:43:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Gayle Hagensen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Philip Ross <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Philip Ross. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jessica Davis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jessica Davis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Sweeny <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Chris Sweeny. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Arden Voigt <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Arden Voigt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Fred Niggemeyer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Fred Niggemeyer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause of our Constitution protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government. When these are mixed, both are diminished.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. This is Theocracy in action. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you!

From: Judith Ashcroft <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Judith Ashcroft. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Gagnon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard A Gagnon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: T Logan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. T Logan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gregg Stave <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Gregg M. Stave. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Zach Glueck <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Zach Glueck. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Cordova <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:44:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael Cordova. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christopher Kendel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Christopher J. Kendel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cynthia Glenn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Cynthia Glenn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Margaret Carden <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Margaret Carden. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathy Steffens <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kathy Steffens. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Lederman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steve Lederman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tamara Thompson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tamara Thompson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mervyn and Marilyn Carse <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mervyn and Marilyn Carse. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gary Shropshire <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:45:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Gary Shropshire. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Davis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:46:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Davis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chafin Rhyne <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:46:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Chafin Chafin Rhyne. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William OBryan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:46:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William OBryan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gina Bates <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:46:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Gina Bates. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Shirley Beningo <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:46:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Shirley Beningo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathy Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:46:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Kathy E Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Doug Rader <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:47:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Doug A Rader. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Dunstan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:47:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is George Dunstan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dale Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:47:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dale Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce Bernstein <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:47:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bruce Bernstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Madison Arnold <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:47:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Madison Arnold. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Elise Larson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Elise Larson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Allen Wolovick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Allen Wolovick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dana Wickware <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dana Wickware. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brent Berge <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Brent A Berge. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marianne Kirchhoff <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Marianne Kirchhoff. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mike Polk <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mike Polk. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joanna Taylor <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:48:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Joanna Taylor. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: TERRY MACKENZIE <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:49:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. TERRY Lynn MACKENZIE. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Edwin Vennik <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:49:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Edwin T Vennik. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Koch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:49:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael Koch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paula Frease <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:50:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paula Frease. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Greenlaw <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:50:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steven Greenlaw. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Connie Opland <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:50:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Connie Opland. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Mathis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:51:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bill Mathis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Wayne Westmoreland <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:51:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Wayne Westmoreland. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jason Benisch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:51:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jason Benisch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Brown <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:51:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Brown. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Celia Isbrecht <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Celia Isbrecht. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Kreutzer <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joseph Kreutzer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Frederick Hecker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Frederick H Hecker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Gorham <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Gorham. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Lawrence <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeffrey Lawrence. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Diana Delp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Diana Delp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Flemking <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Flemking. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lewis Epstein <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:52:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lewis Epstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nathaniel Morgan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nathaniel Morgan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leslie Boston <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Leslie Boston. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Roberts <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mark Roberts. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ken Chapman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Ken W Chapman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Andrew Dalton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Andrew R Dalton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gerrie Paino <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Gerrie Paino. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marcus Burmood <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marcus Burmood. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Gillette <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:53:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Gillette. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Hegstrom <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:54:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Hegstrom. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gerry Blue <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:54:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Gerry Blue. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathy Higgins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:54:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Kathy Higgins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brett Barnes <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:54:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Brett Barnes. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Fellenbaum <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:54:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steve Fellenbaum. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: JL Angell <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:54:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is JL Angell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Gillis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:55:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is George Stephen Gillis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: JohnDParkero [PII]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [PII]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:56:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Parker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lynne Howe <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:56:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Lynne Howe. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dennis Maun <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:56:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dennis Maun. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Borelli <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:56:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeff David Borelli. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Amanda Smock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:56:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Amanda Smock. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Faith Parker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:56:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Faith Parker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dewayne Buratti <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:57:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dewayne Buratti. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Evelyn Badger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:57:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Evelyn Badger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gregory Davies <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:57:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Gregory J Davies. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Nuhfer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:57:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chris Nuhfer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Anibal Guerrero <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:58:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Anibal Guerrero. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Manser <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:58:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. William the Manser. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sue Schuetz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:58:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sue Schuetz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Finney <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:58:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Peter Finney. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Heath Garrard <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:58:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Heath Garrard. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karen Welch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:59:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Karen E Welch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Roni Elmore <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 16:59:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Roni Elmore. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alfred Mansfield <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:00:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Alfred Mansfield. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Wendy Kaplan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:00:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Wendy Kaplan. I am writing to express my strong opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Timko <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:00:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Brian Timko. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laurie Vanzura <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:00:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Laurie Vanzura. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tom Fitch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:00:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tom Fitch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Blake Beacham <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:00:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Blake Beacham. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Fade Zu Grau <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Fade Zu Grau. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Franklin <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Franklin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lyle Updike <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Lyle Updike. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Reuben Abraham <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Reuben Abraham. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Arthur Rosenberg [PII]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [PII]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Arthur Rosenberg. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Craig Rowlands <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Craig D Rowlands. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Heather Tachna <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Heather Tachna. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marjorie Malone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:01:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marjorie Malone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rob Lockey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:02:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rob Lockey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan McCann <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:02:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Dan McCann. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph PUshman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:03:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Joseph A PUshman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Arlund <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:03:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Arlund. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Hemendra Shah <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:03:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Hemendra Shah. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Dobbin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:03:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Daniel R. Dobbin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan Burdin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:03:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dan Burdin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Galen Moore <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:04:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Galen A Moore. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Kimball <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:04:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Larry Kimball. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors NOR disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Nugent <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:04:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Stephen Nugent. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lawrence Beat <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:04:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Lawrence W Beat. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Fred Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:05:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Fred Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Wendy Harris <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:05:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Wendy L Harris. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brycia James <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:05:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Brycia L James. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Hischemellor <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:05:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steve Hischemellor. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Al Blazo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:06:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Al Blazo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce Dassel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:06:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bruce Dassel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Wagle <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:06:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard Wagle. I am a non-religious person who respects all people of faith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others or to force any faith onto those without faith. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Solomon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:06:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Steven Solomon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Donald Thomas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:07:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Donald Miguel Thomas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joshua LaDeau <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:07:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joshua LaDeau. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Reynolds <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:07:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Brian Reynolds. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Patterson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:07:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Eric Patterson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judith Epstein <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:07:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Judith Epstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Fisk <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:07:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Ames Fisk. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jay Burrup <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:08:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jay Burrup. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Long <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:08:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael O Long. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Susan Gibson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:08:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

To members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am firmly opposed to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith.

Those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty.

These proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof.

WITHDRAW this report!

RESPECT our First Amendment rights!

From: Charles Sager <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:08:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles Sager. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Bravmann <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:08:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Bravmann. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alex Barrera <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:09:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Alex Barrera. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Massey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:09:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda Massey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rob Ryman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:09:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rob Ryman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard VanEtten <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:09:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard Steven VanEtten. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mike Skiba <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mike Skiba. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Moss <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. William Moss. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William McPhee <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William McPhee. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Sorensen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard C Sorensen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Devan Odenbrett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Devan Odenbrett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cheryl Hudson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Cheryl Hudson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Stachowiak <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Larry Stachowiak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Maria Palmer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Maria Palmer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Scot Buell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:10:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard Scot Scot Buell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Bocci <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:11:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chris Bocci. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Rubenstein <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:12:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Paul Rubenstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dianne Post <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:12:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Dianne Post. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rose WHITE <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:12:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rose WHITE. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sharon Page <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:12:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Sharon Page. I am writing to express my firm OPPOSITION to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ronald Wood <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:12:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Ronald S Wood. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Schneider <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:12:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William J Schneider. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ray Bartholow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:13:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Ray Bartholow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Weber <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:14:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Weber. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Frank Paino <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:14:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Frank Paino. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Moyer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:14:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James Moyer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bobby Gaines <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:14:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bobby Gaines III. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mercedes Von Pichl <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:14:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mercedes Von Pichl. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Gonnella <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:14:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James Gonnella. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Wallace Nunnelly <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:15:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Wallace Nunnelly. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Hatcher <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:15:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Peter Hatcher. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Ray <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:15:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda Ray. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Chasalow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:15:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott D Chasalow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Vander Kamp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:16:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Patricia Vander Kamp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Lynch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:16:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Lynch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dennis Livingston <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:16:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dennis Livingston. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard d'Avy <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:16:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard d'Avy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Hynd <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:17:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Brian Hynd. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Glen Mertz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:18:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Glen Mertz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christopher Levy <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:18:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Christopher Levy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Rafferty <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:19:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas e Rafferty. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Stokes <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:19:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Stokes. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Pinski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:19:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steven Pinski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Thompson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:19:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael E Thompson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Scifres <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:19:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rick Scifres. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

If you read history carefully, I think you will agree with me that the greatest threat to "Religious Liberty," comes from other religions. The idea that the world's most powerful nation would favor one religion over any other is abhorrent to me and should concern ANY person who understands human behavior.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

I believe it is the duty to ANYONE who's pledged to support and defend the Constitution to reject this proposal.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeremy Brown <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:20:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeremy J Brown. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Terry Callaway <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:20:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Terry Callaway. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Shoaf <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:21:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steve Shoaf. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Connie Allison <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:21:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Connie Allison. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sharyn Charnas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:21:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sharyn Charnas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tom Reber <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:21:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tom Reber. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jennifer Reznick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jennifer Reznick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lawrence Carr <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Lawrence Carr. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Collins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Collins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laurie Ware <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Laurie C. Ware. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Valerie Weiss <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Valerie Weiss. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Baysinger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeff Baysinger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

Just to start, the draft report ignores the history of pilgrims fleeing European nations because they were being persecuted for having the wrong religious ideas. Ironically, pilgrims came to this continent and kept some of those same persecution ideas. For example, pilgrims didn't recognize Native Americans as being human, they didn't recognize slaves as people, and they didn't believe women should be equal to men.

Enlightened founders for a new government tried to make changes that could accomodate all with rights and religious liberty. Keenly note that the Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others.

The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government. We must all wonder why this rich history was ignored? Was this done only to favor one religion here today?

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. That is completely against the Pilgrim's history.

Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty.

Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. Where was the peer review for the legal history? The absence is astounding. The commission appears negligent to address these critical comments. Thus, I ask that you withdraw this report and respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Tasch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Tasch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laura Taylor Morgan <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:22:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Laura Taylor Morgan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gregory Robinson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:23:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Gregory Robinson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Rothman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:23:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Rothman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Oswaldo Veliz Rafael <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:23:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Oswaldo Veliz Rafael. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Michicich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mark Michicich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lewis Thompson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lewis Thompson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Patten <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Patten. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Schneider <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bill Schneider. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Skinner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Skinner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alan Olshevski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Alan Olshevski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Manuel Matos <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:25:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Manuel Matos. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Ralston <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Ralston. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rebecca Fenstermaker <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rebecca Fenstermaker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Uhler <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel Uhler. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathy Kelehan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Kathy Kelehan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: WILLIAM Schneider <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is WILLIAM Schneider. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Knous <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rick Knous. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Nelson <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:26:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. John A Nelson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Teri Knick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:27:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Teri Knick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Griese <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:27:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeff Griese. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sue Sturbaum <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:28:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Sue Sturbaum. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Debbie Haghighat <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:28:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Debbie Haghighat. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kevin Castellano <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:28:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kevin Castellano. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carole Scott <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:28:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Carole Scott. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Anita Marks <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:28:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Anita Marks. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Ortman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:29:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Ortman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sarah Maxwell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:29:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Sarah Maxwell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Frease <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:29:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Frease. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tim Cotter <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:29:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tim Cotter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Hollis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:30:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Chris D Hollis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jody Rieck <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:30:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Jody Rieck. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Tompkins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:30:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bill Tompkins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sandra Smith <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:31:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sandra Smith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jamile Sims <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:31:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jamile Sims. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: LaJauna Oyler <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:31:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is LaJauna Oyler. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Manuel Vega <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:31:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Manuel Vega. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Phil Pearson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:32:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Phil Pearson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Canary <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:32:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steven L Canary Jr. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Harrison Heitman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:32:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Harrison. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marian Wiggins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:32:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Marian E Wiggins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marie-Laure Price <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:33:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Marie-Laure Price. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rodney Weaver <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:33:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rodney Weaver. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Esper <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:33:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rev. Charles Esper. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Matthew McDonough <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:33:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Matthew McDonough. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tsee Lee <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:33:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tsee Lee. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Hourigan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:34:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Brian Hourigan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Benashvili <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:34:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. George Benashvili. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Kensey <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:34:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Kensey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ron Griffin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:34:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ron Griffin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Vachuska <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:36:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Peter Lynn Vachuska. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karla Milosevich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:36:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Karla Milosevich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jon Taggett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:36:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is LTC Jon Taggett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report by the "Religious Liberty Commission." The consititution's clear intent nis to protect religious liberty by not allowing the government to favor one religion over another. To suggest that this premise is somehow HOSTILE to Christianity or any other religion is ludicrous.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Benson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:36:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Stephen Benson. I am writing to express my absolute opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. Those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote any faith over any other. The report ignorantly ignores this critical distinction consistently, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Hedrick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:37:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Larry Hedrick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Luke <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:37:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda Luke. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jereme Hansen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:37:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jereme Hansen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rebecca Martinez <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:38:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Rebecca Martinez. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Susan Zornek-Stevens <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:38:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Susan Zornek-Stevens. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michela Colosimo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:38:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Michela Colosimo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Elinore Krell <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:38:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Elinore Krell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Andreow Hyman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:40:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Andreow Hyman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Amspacher <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:41:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Amspacher. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marinus Broekman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:41:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marinus Broekman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Van Horn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:42:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Patricia L. Van Horn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Miller <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:42:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Daniel Miller. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Sturgeon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:42:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard S. Sturgeon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Rush <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:42:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert N. Rush. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The bottom line is we have hundreds different religions in the United States. The separation of church and state is what keeps our country free. The government needs to keep each persons religion to themselves. For example if a teacher in a public school preaches his/her particular beliefs they are going to upset many students in class. What makes the U.S. so great is that it does not push religion onto the pubic.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Kresan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:42:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Peter Kresan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Bailess <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:43:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeff Bailess. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ingrid Andersson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:43:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Ingrid Andersson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ronald Black <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:43:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Ronald f Black. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Patterson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:43:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas W Patterson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Notestine <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:44:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Notestine. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Prentice Steffen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:44:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Prentice Steffen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Archer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:45:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Archer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Scherer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:45:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Scherer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Maria Studer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:45:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Maria Studer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Randall Stattel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:45:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Randall Stattel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Craig Snapp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:45:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Craig Snapp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kerry O'Quinn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:45:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kerry O'Quinn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lee Zacharias <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:46:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lee Zacharias. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Norden Lucke <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:46:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Norden Lucke. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Meisburger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:47:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Joseph Meisburger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Haas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeffrey P. Haas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jackie Duncan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jackie Duncan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Julia McNally <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Julia McNally. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Russell Strom <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Russell Arthur Strom. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Marcussen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Marcussen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Rote <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steve Rote. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Bardsley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Bardsley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jamin Ellis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jamin Ellis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Lipkis <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:48:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Thomas Lipkis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lew Laird <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:49:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Lew Laird. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stanley Lancaster <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:50:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Stanley Lancaster. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Ameen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:50:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. William Ameen Jr. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Moorhead <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:51:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Thomas Moorhead. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Harald Stellwag <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:51:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Harald Stellwag. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lion Gardiner <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:52:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lion Gardiner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Clyde Berry <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:52:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Clyde Berry. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Duane Crissman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:52:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Duane Crissman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lynne Larsen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:52:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lynne Larsen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Applegate <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:53:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Applegate. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Collins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:53:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel P Collins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Levy <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:54:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Peter J Levy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bradley Drury <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:54:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bradley Drury. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jason Lingle <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:54:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jason Wade Lingle. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steve Singkofer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:57:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steve Singkofer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report, in which it is eminently clear that your commission is in no way dedicated to further promoting true religious liberty. You are, instead, devoted to establishing a national religion made up of White Christians.

You are, regardless of your race and in just three words, White Christian Nationalists. With every meeting and with every word you utter, you bring shame and derision down upon this country from every thinking person on Earth.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bentley Burnham <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:57:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Bentley Burnham. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Susan Goshert <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:57:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Susan Goshert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Warren <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:57:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Warren. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marinus Broekman <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:58:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marinus Broekman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan Straka <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:58:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dan Straka. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tony Cupaiuolo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:58:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tony Cupaiuolo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leslie Cohen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:59:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Leslie Cohen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Hall <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:59:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda Hall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Novak <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 17:59:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is MAJ Joseph Novak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Vickie Walker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:01:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Vickie Walker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Benjamin Schwartz <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:01:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Benjamin Schwartz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jared Sacco [PII]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [PII]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:01:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jared Sacco. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karin Mccollum <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:03:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Karin Mccollum. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joyce Miller <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:03:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joyce Miller. I strongly oppose the recommendations contained in this draft report because they undermine one of the most important principles of the United States Constitution: the separation of religion and government.

Religious liberty is best protected when the government remains neutral toward religion. The First Amendment guarantees every American the freedom to worship according to their own beliefs, to practice no religion at all, and to express those beliefs without government interference. Those freedoms are strengthenednot weakenedwhen the government neither promotes nor disfavors any faith.

History demonstrates that the Framers understood the dangers of government entanglement with religion. They sought to prevent the very divisions and abuses that arise when government aligns itself with a particular religious viewpoint. Preserving this constitutional balance protects Christians, Jews, Muslims, Hindus, Buddhists, Sikhs, Indigenous spiritual traditions, Humanists, atheists, and every other belief system equally.

I am especially concerned by recommendations that would increase religious promotion in public institutions, weaken long-established First Amendment protections, repeal the Johnson Amendment to permit partisan political activity by tax-exempt churches, and encourage government policies that favor one interpretation of religious liberty over others. Such actions risk excluding millions of Americans whose beliefs differ from those favored by those in power.

The government should never be in the business of deciding which religious beliefs deserve special recognition or greater influence. True religious freedom means equal treatment under the lawnot government endorsement of one faith, one denomination, or one religious ideology.

Our nation's strength has always come from its religious diversity and the freedom of every individual to follow their own conscience. I urge the Commission to reject recommendations that blur the constitutional boundary between religion and government and instead reaffirm the First Amendment's protections for all Americans, regardless of their faith or lack of faith.

The Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause work together to safeguard both religious belief and individual liberty. Weakening one ultimately threatens the other. I respectfully ask that this report be substantially revised to reflect our nation's enduring commitment to religious neutrality, equal protection, and freedom of conscience for every citizen.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Budz <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:03:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David J Budz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kim House <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:04:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kim House. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Baker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:05:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Peter Baker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brenda Ervin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:05:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Brenda Ervin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Blubaugh <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:05:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Joseph Blubaugh. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Adrian Melendez-Figueroa <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:06:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Adrian Melendez Melendez-Figueroa. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jill Lacamu <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:06:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jill Lacamu. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lucia Hall <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:06:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Lucia K. B. Hall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Chinisci <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:07:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rick Chinisci. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stewart McGeachin <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:07:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stewart McGeachin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: MARK Guffey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:07:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is MARK Guffey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Quinn-Jacobs <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:08:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Quinn-Jacobs. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Doreen Smithwick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:08:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Doreen Smithwick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael King <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:08:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael King. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Barbara Hill <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:09:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Barbara Hill. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathleen Steffens <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:10:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kathleen Steffens. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gary Marche <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:11:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Gary Marche. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kenneth Blair <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:11:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kenneth Blair. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kristen Thomas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:11:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kristen Thomas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Emery <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:11:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Richard Emery. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Elledge <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:11:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Elledge. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Thomas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:11:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stephen Thomas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pamela Caraway <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:12:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Pamela Caraway. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Blood <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:12:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Blood. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Nist <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:12:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William L Nist. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tom Stavros <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:12:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Tom Stavros. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Tugwell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:13:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas Tugwell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Cook <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:13:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Steven Cook. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Tucker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:13:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Tucker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christopher Leighton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:14:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Christopher Leighton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nancy Romeo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:14:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nancy Romeo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leslie Newman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:15:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Leslie C Newman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rene Leonic <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:16:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rene Leonic. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda White <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:16:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda K White. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Ward <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:16:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Ward. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Cowles <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:17:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Cowles. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: "Rev. Russell Elleven DMin" <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:18:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rev. Russell Elleven DMin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Bastian <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:18:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel Bastian. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ken Skaggs <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:19:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ken Skaggs. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Licari <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:19:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles Licari. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jenna DiFeo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:19:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Jenna DiFeo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Mackintosh <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:19:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Mackintosh. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ivan Steen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:20:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Ivan Steen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Zak <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:21:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Zak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Martin Stone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:21:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Martin Stone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Lynch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:21:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rev. Eric R Lynch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dave Kinsey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:22:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dave Kinsey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chad Garrett <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:22:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chad Garrett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Howlett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:22:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James W. Howlett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karen Jones <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:23:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Karen Jones. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Matt Wessing <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:23:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Matt Wessing. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Keisling <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:23:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mark Keisling. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Art Goodwin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:25:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Art Goodwin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karen Shaver <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:25:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Karen Ann Shaver. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Speropulos <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:27:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas Speropulos. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carolyn Pierson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:27:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Carolyn Clark Pierson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patrick McCann <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:27:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Patrick McCann. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Litzell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:27:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles Litzell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Andrew Peach <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:28:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Andrew Peach. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dennis Arvanitis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:31:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dennis Arvanitis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Raymond Van Zant <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:33:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Raymond Van Zant. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bryan Everitt <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:33:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bryan Everitt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Waid Reynolds <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:33:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors any religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sue Sefscik <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:33:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Sue M Sefscik. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Deborah Sheffield <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:34:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Deborah Sheffield. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Holly Scrimsher <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:34:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Holly Scrimsher. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lisa Campbell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:35:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lisa Campbell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Josh Ticho <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:36:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Josh A Ticho. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Samuel Ballantine <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:39:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Samuel Ballantine. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Randy Murbach <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:39:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Randy Murbach. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Lancisero <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:39:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Peter Lancisero. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bartholomew Barker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:40:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bartholomew Barker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Denise Wills <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:40:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Denise Wills. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Donna Ascalon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:40:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Donna Ascalon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Skip Brinkley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:40:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Skip Brinkley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Unger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:40:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James M. Unger, Emeritus Professor of the Ohio State Univeristy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion in general or any religion in particular. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith, but those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence showing that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. It specifically calls for expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions; repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering; resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force by creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims; and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report tramples on the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report. Thank you.

From: Kevin Trimble <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:41:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kevin Trimble. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Teri Tracey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:42:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Teri L Tracey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Polly Collins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:44:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Polly Collins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Todd Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:46:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Todd Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Garry Cobbum <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:46:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Garry Cobbum. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeanne Grant <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:47:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Jeanne Grant. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Cram <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:49:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rick Cram. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Klamer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:50:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael Michael B. Klamer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Adam Parker <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:50:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Adam Parker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christina Bailey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:51:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Christina Angel Bailey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Porter <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:51:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Porter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Buford Cummings <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:51:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Buford Cummings Jr.. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ken Wygant [PII]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [PII]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:52:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Ken Wygant. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Will <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:53:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Will. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ted Perzanowski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:54:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ted Perzanowski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce A Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:57:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bruce A Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lisa LeGette <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:57:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lisa LeGette. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jim May <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:58:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jim P May. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Milczakowski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:59:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Thomas Milczakowski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judy Giles <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 18:59:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Judy Giles. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kurt Moore <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:00:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kurt B. Moore. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: JacobGrosek <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:00:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jacob Grosek. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nicholas Shipman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:00:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Nicholas Shipman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Talbert <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:03:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Talbert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Lawrence <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:03:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Edward Lawrence. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Crews <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:03:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Patricia Crews. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Curt Simmons <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:04:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Curt Simmons. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Pickering <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:04:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert L Pickering. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Philip Carman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:06:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Philip Carman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: April Spivey <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:07:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. April Spivey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Angevine <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:08:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Eric Angevine. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Aiden Barnes <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:08:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Aiden Barnes. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Smith <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:08:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Smith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Frone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:08:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Frone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kevin Tierney <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:09:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kevin Tierney. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Susan Murawski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:10:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Susan Murawski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Howell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:11:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bill Howell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Klie <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:11:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles Klie. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gina Buono <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:12:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Gina Buono. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dale Smart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:13:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Dale Smart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jud Bruton <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:15:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jud Bruton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephanie Spina <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:15:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Stephanie Spina. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Karlis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:15:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Karlis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Phillip Nordstrom <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:15:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Phillip Nordstrom. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Brewer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:16:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard Brewer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Weber <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:16:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Mary Ellen Weber. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Deborah Aguilar-Hewitt <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:18:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Deborah Aguilar-Hewitt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Quinton Borchardt <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:18:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Quinton Borchardt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Corinne Brown <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:20:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Corinne Brown. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Zerner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:20:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Paul J Zerner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dawn GUERRA <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:23:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dawn M GUERRA. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Allan Goldman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:25:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Allan Goldman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Forrest Sporre <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:26:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Forrest Sporre. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Matthew York <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:27:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Matthew York. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tony Giardina <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:29:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tony Giardina. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Anthony LaRocca <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:29:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Anthony LaRocca. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Markowski <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:30:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Markowski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Lightfield <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:33:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mark Lightfield. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Ozinga <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:34:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brian Ozinga. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kristine Thorvilson <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:35:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kristine Thorvilson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judy Blackburn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:35:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Judy Blackburn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Roger Grace <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:35:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Roger Grace. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Janice Lehman <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:35:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Janice Lehman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marcia Tunik <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:35:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marcia Tunik. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Badger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:36:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Badger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lisa Badger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:36:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Lisa Badger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sheila Dillon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:38:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Sheila Liza Marie Dillon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michelle Townsley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:40:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michelle Townsley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen McGurl <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:40:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stephen McGurl. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laura Saylor <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:40:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Laura Saylor. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Stewart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:40:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rick Stewart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jessica Leza <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:41:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Jessica Diane Leza. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Szymanski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:41:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda Szymanski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Philip Morgan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:41:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Philip Morgan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: GT Golden <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:43:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. GT Golden. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Erin Cara <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:44:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Erin Cara. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Cluster <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:44:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Thomas Cluster. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Steele <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:45:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. William K Steele. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Baum <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:48:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Peter Baum. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Natter <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:49:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joseph Natter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Wilfred Lyon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:49:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Wilfred C Lyon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Gross <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:50:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rick Gross. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marnix van Ammers <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:51:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Marnix Alexander van Ammers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Elizabeth O'Brien <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:52:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Elizabeth O'Brien. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph LaBonte <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:53:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rev. Joseph LaBonte. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Gill <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:54:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Gill. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kelly Coveleski <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:54:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kelly Coveleski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Miller <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:57:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Miller. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Todd Russell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:59:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Todd Russell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Vanhorn [redacted]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [redacted]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:59:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Bill Vanhorn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Mills <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:59:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rick Mills. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Bredderman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 19:59:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Paul J Bredderman Sr. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Goodman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:02:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Goodman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Fly <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:03:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Fly. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Aaron Ferguson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:04:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Aaron W Ferguson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Josephine Black <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:05:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Josephine Black. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Shawn Kosior <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:05:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Shawn Kosior. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Myra Bennett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:06:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Myra Bennett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Timothy Salansky <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:07:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Timothy Salansky. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Russell Keating <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:08:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Russell Keating. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christine Reed-Fast <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:11:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Christine Reed-Fast. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joann Macey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:12:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joann Macey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: [redacted]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [redacted]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:13:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am an avid supporter of the Constitutional mandate separating Church and State. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Kunkel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:13:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chris Kunkel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Hayley Morgan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:14:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Hayley Morgan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Flores <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:15:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is George Flores. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jesse Hash <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:15:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jesse Hash. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Frank <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:17:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Frank. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Gould <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:17:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas John Gould. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Weber <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:18:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Weber. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Howard Cohen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:18:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Howard L Cohen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Danny Cramer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:19:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Danny Cramer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Randle <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:20:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joseph Randle. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Clamage <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:22:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Stephen Clamage. I am writing to express my opposition to the recently released draft report.

The First Amendment Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith (the Free Exercise clause). However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

See, for example, Jefferson's "wall of separation"; Adams's insistence that no one should be taxed "even thruppence" to support a religion to which he does not subscribe; Franklin's comment that a religion that cannot support itself must not be a good one.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Geri Moore <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:22:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Geri Moore. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ron Mittan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:23:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ron Mittan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dennis Coyier <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:23:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dennis Coyier. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nancy Groceman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:23:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Nancy Groceman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Saelon Renkes <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:26:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Saelon Renkes. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

I believe the Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, government should not sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Natalie Zett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:28:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Natalie Zett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Timothy Spurlin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:31:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Timothy Spurlin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Irene Komadina <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:32:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Irene Komadina. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nadine Thompson <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:34:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nadine Thompson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Sipp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:36:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joseph Sipp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect the Amendment I as written in the constitution. It begins, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, ...etc". Thank you.

From: Phil Monroe <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:36:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Phil Monroe. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Halasz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:38:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Halasz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeremy Arcond <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:39:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeremy Arcond. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Koppenhofer <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:39:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Koppenhofer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pat McClain <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:40:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Pat McClain. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Broring <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:41:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Broring. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Warnicke <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:44:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Warnicke. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brooke Traut <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:50:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brooke Traut. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian McCaskill <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:50:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brian McCaskill. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rob Schleifer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:52:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rob Schleifer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Beverly Bullock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:55:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Beverly Bullock. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marci Radin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:57:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Marci Radin. I live in the Denver, Colorado metro area, am politically active, and am a long time atheist.

I am writing to express my most intense opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Schene <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:58:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Schene. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:59:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeffrey Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Fred Koster <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 20:59:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Fred Koster. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Durand <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:00:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Patricia Durand. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dorothy Jayne <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:02:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Dorothy Jayne. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Walter Watson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:03:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Walter Watson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Douglas Tanner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:03:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Douglas Tanner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Diane Baumer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:05:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Diane Baumer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: T Augusta Gordon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:06:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Prof. T Augusta Augusta Gordon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Andrea Taroli <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:08:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Andrea Taroli. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Solomon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:08:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Commission,

My name is Mr. David Solomon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas McDonough <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:10:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas McDonough. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laurel Machin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:13:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Laurel Machin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Anna Christensen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:13:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Anna Christensen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Douglas Fitt <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:16:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Douglas Fitt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Rozman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:16:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard Gordon Rozman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rick Easton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:17:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rick Easton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sean Davis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:18:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sean Davis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Roger Hott <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:18:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Roger Glenn Hott. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gail Jacobs <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:19:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Gail Jacobs. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: S David Long <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:22:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is S David Long. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rodger Parsons <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:24:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rodger Parsons. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leland Schroeder <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:30:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Leland Schroeder. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: R H <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:34:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is R H. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rodger Parsons <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:34:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Religion does to belong iin government. The Constitution is clear. Please see that religion stays out of any influence in governmental affairs.

My name is Mr. Rodger Parsons. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chip Redding <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:40:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chip Redding. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leslie Vandenbos <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:41:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Leslie Vandenbos. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Hannes Ziegler <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:41:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Hannes Ziegler. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Diane Stenzel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:41:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Diane Stenzel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Kiel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:42:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is George Kiel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael F Peterson <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:42:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael F Peterson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lynn Longan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:44:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lynn Longan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Hosford <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:47:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steven Hosford. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Treubig <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:52:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. John Treubig. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dirk Beving <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:53:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dirk Beving. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Evelyn Howard <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:57:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Evelyn Virginia Howard. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nancy Poulo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:58:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Nancy Evelyn Poulo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Craig Stallone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 21:58:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rev. Craig Stallone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Miele <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:00:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is The Rt. Rev. John Miele. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Claire Alexander <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:01:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Claire Alexander. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Palmero [PII]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [PII]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:05:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Mary Kathleen Palmer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Roberson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:11:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steven Roberson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Timothy Clearman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:14:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Timothy Clearman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Palmer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:14:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Mary Palmer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Edelman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:15:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Edelman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Villa <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:17:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles William Villa. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Andrew Simonds <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:20:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Andrew Simonds. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Keller <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:22:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Keller. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Gadd [redacted]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [redacted]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:25:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

Our names are Charles Gadd and Lydia Lukahnovich. We are writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

Commission members should also refresh their knowledge of American history and read the Treaty of Tripoli, which was unanimously approved by the U.S. Senate on June 7, 1797 and signed by President John Adams on June 10th 1797. "As the Government of the United States of America is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion;..."

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jane Stewart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:29:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Jane A Stewart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Spaniol <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:32:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Patricia Spaniol. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Lindquist <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:35:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott Lindquist. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Myers <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:35:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeffrey Myers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kenneth Rowe <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:42:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kenneth Rowe. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The USA government should not favor or disfavors any religion. Every American is free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this fact, while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Jakupcak <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:43:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Jakupcak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Brazeal <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:47:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Brazeal. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Fagan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:52:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Veltkamp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:53:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Veltkamp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tad Wiser <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:54:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Tad Wiser. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: "John B. Lizak" <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:57:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. John B. Lizak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Spencer Warner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 22:59:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Spencer Warner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: jon Chlebeck <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:01:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. jon Chlebeck. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Fredricks <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:02:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Michael William Fredricks. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Guenther <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:03:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James Guenther. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Badolato <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:03:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Badolato. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Downing <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:04:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mary Downing. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Larry Wallace <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:11:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Larry Wallace. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jay Kobielusz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:12:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jay Kobielusz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Elizabeth Levy <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:18:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Elizabeth Levy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jacqueline Siegel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:18:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jacqueline Siegel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Terry Scheckwitz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:22:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Terry Scheckwitz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Justin Malick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:26:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Justin Malick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dawn Hendry <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:30:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Dawn Hendry. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Beverly Fogarty <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:33:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Beverly Fogarty. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Frederick Michel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:34:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Frederick Michel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jennifer Young <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:36:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jennifer Young. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mustapha Benhabiles <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:38:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mustapha Benhabiles. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nina French <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:44:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nina French. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Suzanne Mooney <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:46:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Suzanne Mooney. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dayle Severns <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:50:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dayle Severns. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Finkelstein <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:51:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Steven Finkelstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Rogers <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Tue, 07 Jul 2026 23:58:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. George Rogers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Shaun Melvin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:08:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Shaun Melvin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tommy Wilde <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:09:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tommy Wilde. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: George Rogers <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:13:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. George Rogers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: [redacted]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [redacted]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:14:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am opposed to the recently released draft report.

Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith.

The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn and does not acknowledge the writings of Framers intentionally separating religious beliefs from the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom:

1) It calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles.
2) It expands governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions.
3) It repeals the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering.
4) It resurrects the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force.
5) It creates new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims.
6) It encourages judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty.

The moto of these United States is: E pluribus unum.

This report steps all over freedom of belief of all Americans. Please withdraw this report to respect our written and ratified constitution.

Thank you.

From: Bill Stewart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:15:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bill Stewart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kenneth Nahigian <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:19:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kenneth E Nahigian. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lisa Tillinghast <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:22:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lisa Tillinghast. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: bruce ericson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:24:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. bruce A ericson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laurel Hines <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:39:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Laurel L Hines. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Will Beatty <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:40:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Will Beatty. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gary McDonald <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:43:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Gary Allen McDonald. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ron Bravenec <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:45:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ron Bravenec. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Jarvis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:46:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Jarvis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Howard Johnson <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:47:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Howard L. Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Beverly <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:47:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Beverly. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Matthew Weinburke <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 00:52:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Matthew Weinburke. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael House <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 01:07:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael House, and I am a citizen, a constituent, an atheist, and a science-based secular humanist values voter. As such, I hereby call on the Commission to immediately withdraw its recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the deceptive failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. These proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I accordingly call on you to immediately withdraw this report and instead respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Bellingar <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 01:14:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Bellingar. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Jo Stirling <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 01:24:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mary Jo Stirling. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Virgene Link-New <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 01:27:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Virgene Link-New. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Bushman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 01:36:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Robert Bushman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Epps <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 01:54:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bill Epps. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Abele <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 02:02:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chris Abele. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Wehn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 02:08:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard A Wehn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Colin Melville <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 02:29:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Colin Melville. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cheryl Eames <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 03:20:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Cheryl Eames. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marco van Vugt <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 04:13:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marco van Vugt. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Cabell <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 04:15:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Cabell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Granroth <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 04:19:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Eric Granroth. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Gingerich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 04:44:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Gingerich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Amber Tedrow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 04:54:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Amber Tedrow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Terry Nillissen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 05:30:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Terry Nillissen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Furman Hendrickson <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 05:36:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Furman Hendrickson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dale Gennett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:04:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dale F Gennett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Russ Beauchemin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:10:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Russ Beauchemin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sheena Pantha <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:28:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sheena Pantha. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lisa McGinnis <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:34:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lisa McGinnis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Erik Dorfler <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:37:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Erik Dorfler. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Micaela Evans <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:38:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Micaela Evans. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Valerie Poirier <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:43:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Valerie Poirier. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jud Staller <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:51:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Jud Staller. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Sullivan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:52:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Joseph S. Sullivan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David White <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:54:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David White. I oppose the Religious Liberty Commissions Draft Report and want you to protect the Separation of Church and State

The Religious Liberty Commissions recently released draft report is a dangerous attempt to dismantle the constitutional separation of church and state. Rather than protecting true religious freedom, this document serves as a partisan advocacy tool designed to advance a narrow, exclusive Christian nationalist agenda at the expense of our nation's foundational commitment to religious pluralism.

At its core, the report relies on the false premise that separating religion and government is somehow hostile to faith. In reality, the Establishment Clause exists precisely to protect everyone's freedom of conscience by ensuring the government never favors one belief system over another. By pushing to expand state-sponsored religion in public schools, repeal the Johnson Amendment to allow tax-exempt churches to engage in partisan politics, and prioritize preferred religious claims while stripping recognition from over 180 minority faiths and nonreligious groups in the military, these recommendations threaten to deeply entangle the government with religion.

We must reject this attempt to compromise equal treatment for all believers and nonbelievers alike. We urge the administration to abandon these divisive proposals and uphold the constitutional principles that safeguard true liberty for every American.

Sincerely,
David

From: Elizabeth Cosgrove <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 06:56:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Elizabeth Cosgrove. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Lynch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:00:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Lynch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Cantilli <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:05:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. John Cantilli. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Winston Reed <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:06:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Winston Reed. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Janet Hoover <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:06:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Janet Hoover. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Barnett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:09:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Daniel Barnett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Coenen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:10:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott Coenen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Mogelefsky <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:16:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Stephen Mogelefsky. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alfred Vawter <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:18:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Alfred Vawter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kim White <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:20:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kim White. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Slezak <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:23:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James Slezak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leslie Cregar <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:25:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Leslie Cregar. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Peter Stone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:26:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Peter Stone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Holly Downing <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:28:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Holly Downing. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. The report ignores the long held understood truth that religion and government must remain separate if either is to fulfill its critical job: promote the civic and political life of citizens on the part of government and promote our spiritual life on the part of religion - however that reveals itself with out government interference either way. The recent Committee report fails to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

The reports recommendations call for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Harvey Colston <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:29:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Harvey Richard Colston. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Arlen Zinn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:31:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Arlen Zinn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joan Reisman-Brill <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:32:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Joan Reisman-Brill. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Lively <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:33:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mark Lively. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ann Davis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:34:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ann Davis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ken Ayres <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:40:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ken Ayres. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Durkin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:49:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Paul Durkin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dean Adams <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:50:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dean P Adams. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dave Marsh <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:51:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dave Marsh. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Allison <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:52:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Chris W Allison. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sharon Wells <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:53:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sharon Wells. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Helen Fosgate <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:55:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Helen Fosgate. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Monaghan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:55:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mary Monaghan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Theresa Evans <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:56:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Theresa Evans. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kevin Judd <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 07:59:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Kevin Judd. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Ventrilio <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:06:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Ventrilio. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nina Castellon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:08:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nina Castellon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Amanda Parks <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:10:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Amanda Parks. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kelley Keisch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:13:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Kelley L Keisch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Louise Luedtke <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:17:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Louise Luedtke. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Ingersoll <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:22:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeffrey M Ingersoll. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Heidi Juhl <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:23:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Heidi Juhl. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robyn Rich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:23:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Robyn Rich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jody Beighley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:24:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jody Beighley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Carrell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:25:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Patricia Carrell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Buzan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:28:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William A Buzan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Keith Shannon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:29:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Keith Shannon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Breon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:29:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Breon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leah Laurange <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:36:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Leah Laurange. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christopher Watson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:41:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Christopher Watson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judith Smith <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:44:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Judith Louise Smith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Johnson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:46:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Daniel Johnson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lewis Foerster <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:49:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lewis Foerster. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Megin Wolf <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:51:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Megin Wolf. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Costello <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 08:55:37 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James V. Costello. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Contursi <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:01:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Paul Contursi. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mc Schoenberg <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:03:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is M Schoenberg. I am writing to express my firm OPPOSITION to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. This BASIC PRINCIPLE is what makes us different than countries like Iran and Russia. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights DO NOT authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Louis Womble <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:06:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Louis Womble. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Zachary Van Stanley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:06:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Zachary Van Stanley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judy Fraunfelder <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:06:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Judy Fraunfelder. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kendra Totilo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:07:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kendra Totilo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Louis Lipp <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:12:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Louis E Lipp. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Al Porterfield <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:13:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Al Porterfield. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nigel Giraudier <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:14:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nigel Giraudier. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ralph Mann <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:14:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ralph Mann. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan Vogel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:15:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dan E. Vogel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Swimley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:15:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Thomas Swimley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Arelis Van Breda <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:19:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Arelis Van Breda. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cynthia Moore <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:20:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Cynthia Moore. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Deb Schene <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:23:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Deb Schene. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce Armstrong <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:31:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Bruce Armstrong. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Harney <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:39:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brian Harney. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marianne Arini <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:42:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Marianne Arini. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Williams <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:43:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Stephen Williams. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Crqpo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:46:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Crqpo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Todd Peissig <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:50:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Todd A Peissig. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Roxanne Lindgren <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:51:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Roxanne Lindgren. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Monica Cannaley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:54:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Monica Cannaley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Mettner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 09:56:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel L Mettner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Susan Pace <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:02:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Susan Pace. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Anderson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:02:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John P Anderson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Catherine Green <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:02:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Catherine Green. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Camille Stuart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:03:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Camille Stuart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Louwaerts <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:05:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel Louwaerts. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carolyn Frawley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:09:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Carolyn Frawley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chris Ball <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:09:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chris Ball. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kayla Downing <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:09:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Kayla Downing. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jerry Robbins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:12:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jerry Robbins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Perras <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:14:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Richard Perras. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nancy Woodle <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:15:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Nancy Woodle. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Van Fleet <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:15:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Van Fleet. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan Barski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:20:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dan Barski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Beckham <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:20:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stephen R Beckham. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Matthew Lavin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:20:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Matthew T Lavin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jennifer Wall <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:23:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jennifer Wall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carol Brock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:26:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Carol Brock. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jack Gill <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:28:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jack Gill. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Henderson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:31:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mark Henderson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Donald Ledbetter <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:33:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is SGT Donald Ledbetter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cas Szostak <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:37:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Cas Szostak. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carl Wiggins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:37:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Carl Wiggins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Roger Dumas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:43:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Roger Dumas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Cardamone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:47:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Cardamone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. I recommends removing the Johnson Taken, which prevents religious institutions from receiving 501(c)(3) status, even if they preach politics; this would make religious vulnerable to the highest bidder. Together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Kaye <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:51:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael Kaye. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judith Robertson <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:52:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Judith Robertson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Consolino <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:58:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael J Consolino. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michaeal Bell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 10:58:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michaeal Bell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael JOnes <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:04:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Jones. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark St Clair <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:05:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mark St Clair. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dirceu Fumagalli <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:05:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dirceu Fumagalli. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Barry Fahrer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:07:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Barry M Fahrer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Donna Dillihay <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:08:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Donna Dillihay. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government does not favor a particular religion.

Among other proposals, this report calls for governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering.

This will not only cause issues for non-Christian religions, as the report authors likely think. History has shown that it will spark Christian religious wars that will not end well.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Patricia Marino <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:14:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Patricia H. Marino. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Heather Tachna <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:16:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Heather Tachna. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Steven Weinberg <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:17:34 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Steven Weinberg. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Catherine LeMay-Brown <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:19:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Catherine LeMay-Brown. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Nazarete <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:25:51 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Nazarete. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Wesely Snyder <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:26:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Wesely C Snyder. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Maureen LeVesque <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:30:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Maureen LeVesque. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Constance Tull <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:35:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Constance Tull. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daryl Strom <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:38:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Daryl Strom. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lawrence Tanner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:40:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Lawrence Tanner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Cole <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:43:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mark Cole. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Hancock <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:47:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David A Hancock. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Wiegman <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:47:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brian Wiegman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bob Bauman <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:49:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bob Bauman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Wilson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 11:50:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Wilson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: almi oppman <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:00:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. almi E oppman. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Doerig <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:00:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Doerig. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Eric Langhout <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:02:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Eric Langhout. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sally Gearhart <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:03:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sally Gearhart. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alan Harper <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:03:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Alan Harper. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Buyerso PII
To: Religious Liberty Commission PII
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:08:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Buyers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Nolley <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:16:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. David Nolley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Reis <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:16:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linda Reis. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike. I believe that we are not truly free Americans if we cannot be free to decide if religion in any form is ours to choose.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Bratton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:19:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Robert Bratton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Snook <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:22:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. John B Snook. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marvin Lehto <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:31:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marvin Lehto. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joanne D'Unger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:36:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joanne D'Unger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Al Tino <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:41:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Al Tino. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jared Boyd <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:43:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jared Boyd. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Hall <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:50:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott Hall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sabra Kuykendall <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 12:52:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sabra Kuykendall. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leah Gilliam <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:13:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sister Leah Gilliam. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rolf Swanson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:17:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Rolf Swanson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Conrad Gleich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:20:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Conrad Gleich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chad Kildow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:36:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Chad Kildow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joe Sokolinsky <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:37:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Joe Sokolinsky. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephanie Benner <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:37:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Stephanie Benner. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jennifer Stites <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:38:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jennifer Stites. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: "Linda C. Prause" <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:43:46 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Linda Curtiss. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lawrence Josephs <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:53:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Lawrence Josephs. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dennis Williams <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 13:58:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dennis L. Williams. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marie Brunstein <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:01:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marie Brunstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kari Anderson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:01:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Kari Anderson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stan Fogg <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:09:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Stan Fogg. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Celeste Knowles <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:12:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Celeste Knowles. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paul Mareel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:22:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Paul Mareel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pamela Morisse <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:24:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Pamela Morisse. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: KK Garland <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:25:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is KK Garland. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Helen Love <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:25:39 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Helen Love. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Lechner-Riehle <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:31:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jeff Lechner-Riehle. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Hal Scherzer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:43:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Hal Scherzer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Arthur Perez <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:46:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Arthur Perez. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Piccinni <[PII]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[PII]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:51:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. William Michael Piccinni. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeff Hebert <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 14:52:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeff Hebert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rebcca Leas <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:04:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Rebcca Rutt Leas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Donna Russell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:05:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Donna Russell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Leslie Hinterberger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:11:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Leslie Hinterberger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Carl Wheaton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:14:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Carl Wheaton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kilowatt Bonomolo <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:15:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kilowatt Bonomolo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce Bernstein <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:29:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bruce Bernstein. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

It's time to stop the madness, which you have been enabling!

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Udo Schmidt-Sinns <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:31:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Udo Schmidt-Sinns. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael McWeeny <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:34:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael McWeeny. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Teresa Wright <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 15:52:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Teresa Wright. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Watson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 16:36:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Joseph A Watson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Marc Leveque <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 16:37:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Marc Leveque. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tim & Beth Tarkington <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 16:40:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

We are Tim & Beth Tarkington. We are writing to express our firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephen Johns <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 17:07:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stephen Johns. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Forsythe <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 17:10:15 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Forsythe. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Catherine Moreno <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 17:11:21 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Catherine Moreno. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pierre-Paul Villafafila <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 17:17:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Pierre-Paul Villafafila. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Elfield <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 17:27:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mark Elfield. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thelma Noble <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 17:40:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Thelma J Noble. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Mathias <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 18:15:44 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brian Mathias. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pamela Leverett <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 18:30:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Pamela C Leverett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kali Key <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 18:36:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kali Key. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Victor Caputi <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 18:44:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Victor Caputi. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: "Janice C. Brehm" <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 19:04:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Janice C. Brehm. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Josh Griffith <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 19:07:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Josh Griffith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rebecca Hannaford <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 19:32:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rebecca Hannaford. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Joseph Bustamante <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 19:49:57 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Joseph Bustamante. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Klakovich <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 20:10:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Michael Klakovich. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sandra Lynden <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 20:55:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sandra Lynden. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Barbara Sabo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 20:59:06 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Barbara Sabo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathryn Palm <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 21:21:29 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kathryn Palm. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffery Myers <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 21:31:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jeffery Myers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Diana Kolaski <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 21:43:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mx. Diana Kolaski. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ted Spetnagel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 21:59:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ted Spetnagel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Elizabeth Herbert <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 22:04:00 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Elizabeth R. R Herbert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Sabo <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 22:15:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Sabo. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jackie Hoke <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 22:32:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Jackie Anne Hoke. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: "Mr. James" <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 22:53:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dylan J. James. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Walter Buitrago <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 22:53:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Walter Buitrago. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: "George J. Robinson" <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:01:53 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. George J. J. Robinson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: DR Spencer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:05:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. DR R Spencer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Margaret Heery <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:11:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Margaret Heery. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alexander Dewitt <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:33:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Alexander Dewitt, an elected member of Bay City, MI's City Commission. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sharon Stephens <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:40:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sharon Stephens. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Barry Schrader <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:43:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Barry Schrader. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Thomas <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:55:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Thomas. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dave Devlin <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 08 Jul 2026 23:56:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dave Devlin. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jason/Clarence Robertson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 00:46:49 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jason/Clarence Robertson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Timothy Cook <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 04:00:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Timothy Cook. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bryan Williams <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 04:06:31 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bryan Williams. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lauren Fox <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 05:54:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lauren Fox. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Ford <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 06:50:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Ford. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Carey <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 07:16:04 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John Carey. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Louis Pettini <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 07:29:02 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Louis M. Pettini. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Stephanie Campbell <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 07:49:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Stephanie Campbell. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jack Church <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 08:42:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Jack Church. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Henry Metz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 08:44:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Henry Metz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Richard Story <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 08:49:13 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Richard Story. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Traci Chance <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 08:59:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Traci Chance. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lisa D'Andrea <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 09:03:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lisa D'Andrea. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Krause <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 09:36:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is SSgt David Krause. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Martin Phelps <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 09:51:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Martin Phelps. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dale Dove <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 09:57:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dale Dove. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kathryn Bohm <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 10:03:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Kathryn Bohm. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: [redacted]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [redacted]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 10:25:19 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report. As an atheist with friends of many different religions, I find this unconstitutional draft report to be anti-American and shameful.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. Or to NOT HAVE ONE. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. People are paying attention.

From: Kayce Hodos <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 10:55:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kayce Hodos. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights.

From: Lawrence Ribnick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 11:09:14 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lawrence Ribnick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ona Porter <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 11:35:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ona Porter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sheri Chiantelli <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 12:06:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sheri Chiantelli. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mary Straus <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 12:10:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mary Straus. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rob Atkinson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 12:20:24 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rob Atkinson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Gary Helba <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 12:39:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Gary Helba. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karen Gilbert <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 13:11:08 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Karen Gilbert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Diane Duy <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 13:48:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Diane L Duy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Keith Free <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 14:23:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Keith Free. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sherry Hubert <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 14:39:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Sherry Hubert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lance Lubach <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 14:40:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Lance Lubach. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dorian May <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 14:53:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Dorian May. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Gallagher <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 14:58:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Gallagher. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michelle Wallace <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 15:07:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michelle Wallace. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kent Niere <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 15:14:32 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kent Niere. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Washburn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 15:51:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Thomas Washburn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sonia Noemi Cross <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 15:52:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Sonia Noemi Noemi Cross. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Geraldine Thorn <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 16:27:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Geraldine Thorn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Denise Murphy <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 18:21:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Denise Christine Murphy. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Natalie Zett <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 19:00:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Natalie Zett. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kelley Michael <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 21:39:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Kelley. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Hank Adamczyk <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 21:55:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Hank Adamczyk. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Julian West <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 23:15:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Julian West. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Thomas Arkins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 09 Jul 2026 23:16:28 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Thomas Arkins. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Alex Macdonald <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 01:48:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Alex Macdonald. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Sarah Sheridan <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 07:53:59 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Sarah Sheridan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Tom McHale <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 09:17:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Tom McHale. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Welty <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 09:24:33 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Mark Welty. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Pigeon <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 09:26:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. John Richard Pigeon. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Daniel Tedrick <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 12:03:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Daniel C Tedrick. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bruce Barlow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 12:24:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bruce Barlow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Efrain Medina <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 12:57:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Efrain Medina. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ilea Schneider <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 13:00:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Ilea Schneider. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Robert Rashkow <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 14:22:42 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Robert Rashkow. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brian Starcher <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 14:34:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brian Starcher. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cal and Beth Huizenga <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 14:49:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Cal and Beth Huizenga. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: John Frank <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 15:53:40 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is John C Frank. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Brent Ulbert <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 16:08:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Brent Ulbert. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Rob Lundgren <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 17:00:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Rob Lundgren. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Miller <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 17:56:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. James Miller. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jesse Smith <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 19:19:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Jesse Smith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Galen Blake <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 19:24:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Galen Blake. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: James Wojcik <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 20:05:11 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is James Wojcik. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Melanie Lamb <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 20:07:05 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Melanie Lamb. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jean Ryan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 20:20:38 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Jean T Ryan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Pat Rorabaugh <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 20:41:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Pat Rorabaugh. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Karen Zamel <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Fri, 10 Jul 2026 22:36:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Karen Zamel. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Colleen Foraker <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 02:01:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Colleen Foraker. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christian Call <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 08:02:54 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Christian Call. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Wilkins <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 08:45:43 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Wilkins. I am writing to express my opposition to the recently released draft report.

I see nothing in the report that protects the right of non-believers to be free of government-supported coercion. To the contrary, the report encourages all sorts of practices, such as prayer in public schools and government meetings, that disfavor secular people.

The report assumes, without discussion, the supposed positive benefits of religion to society, without mention of its many problems, for example it's frequent hostility to scientific knowledge.

I urge that this report be rejected.

From: Anne Maertz <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 10:24:07 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Anne Maertz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Cynthia England Fairchild <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 11:33:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Cynthia England Fairchild. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Leeson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 12:58:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Mark Leeson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Dan Jacobson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 13:24:01 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Dan Jacobson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christina Schanda <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 13:58:45 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Christina M Schanda. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christina Schanda <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 14:32:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Christina Schanda. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linda Lanz <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 14:52:18 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Linda Lanz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Scott Buxton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 17:44:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Scott Buxton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Welsh <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sat, 11 Jul 2026 23:48:58 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is David Welsh. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Judith Prinz <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 00:38:03 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Judith Ann Prinz. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Charles Butto <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 07:36:47 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Charles Butto. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Chad Bunch <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 10:54:16 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Chad Bunch. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: linda Crumpton <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 11:54:41 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. linda Crumpton. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Mark Rylance <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 13:58:26 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mark Rylance. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Audra Rose <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 14:10:30 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Audra Rose. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Kurt Sjolander Sr <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 15:31:09 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Kurt Sjolander Sr. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Bill Bonneyo[redacted]
To: Religious Liberty Commission [redacted]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 16:33:17 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Bill Bonney. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: David Rossiter <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 18:57:36 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. David Rossiter. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laurence Holland <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 20:17:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Laurence Holland. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Laura Rea <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 21:54:55 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Laura Rea. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights.

Hypochristians SUCK!🖕!

Thank you.

From: Todd Larsen <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 22:02:35 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Todd Larsen. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Jeffrey Kramer <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Sun, 12 Jul 2026 22:37:10 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Dr. Jeffrey Kramer. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Stone <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Mon, 13 Jul 2026 08:51:50 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Stone. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Michael Fones <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Mon, 13 Jul 2026 09:38:27 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Michael Fones. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Edward Ciaccio <PII>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <PII>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Mon, 13 Jul 2026 15:24:56 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Edward Ciaccio. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Linden Skjeie <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Mon, 13 Jul 2026 17:52:23 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Linden Skjeie. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Christopher Rojahn-King <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Mon, 13 Jul 2026 20:40:12 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Christopher Rojahn. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Nolton Paul Sensat <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Mon, 13 Jul 2026 21:29:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Nolton Paul Sensat. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Ruth Sheehan <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 15 Jul 2026 00:06:48 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ruth Sheehan. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Paxton Robinson <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 15 Jul 2026 11:52:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mr. Paxton Robinson. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Lauren Adasiak Cocilova <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 15 Jul 2026 15:17:22 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Lauren Adasiak Adasiak Cocilova. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: Renee Smith <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Wed, 15 Jul 2026 19:03:25 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Mrs. Renee Smith. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: CLOTILDE TAMERS <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 16 Jul 2026 15:36:52 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is Ms. Clotilde Tamers. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.

From: William Swiger <[redacted]>
To: Religious Liberty Commission <[redacted]>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] PUBLIC COMMENT - [YOUR NAME]
Date: Thu, 16 Jul 2026 18:44:20 -0400
Importance: Normal

Dear members of the Religious Liberty Commission,

My name is William Swiger. I am writing to express my firm opposition to the recently released draft report.

The Establishment Clause protects religious liberty by ensuring that the government neither favors nor disfavors religion. Every American remains free to pray, worship and speak about their faith. However, those individual rights do not authorize the government to sponsor religious observances or use its authority to promote one faith over others. The report ignores this critical distinction at every turn, dismissing the longstanding understanding of the Establishment Clause while failing to acknowledge the overwhelming historical evidence that the Framers intentionally supported a broad separation between religion and the government.

Many of the reports recommendations would further entangle the government with religion rather than protecting religious freedom. Among other proposals, it calls for abandoning longstanding First Amendment principles, expanding governmental promotion of religion in public schools and other public institutions, repealing the Johnson Amendment so that tax-exempt churches can engage in partisan electioneering, resurrecting the failed 2018 Religious Liberty Task Force and creating new hotlines dedicated to advancing preferred religious claims, and encouraging judicial appointments based on a particular ideological vision of religious liberty. Taken together, these proposals threaten the constitutional commitment to religious pluralism and equal treatment for believers and nonbelievers alike.

This report steps all over the freedom of conscience for all Americans, regardless of their belief or lack thereof. I ask that you withdraw this report to respect our First Amendment rights. Thank you.