THE UNITED STATES' MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION TO TERMINATE A LEGACY ANTITRUST JUDGMENT

Plaintiff, United States of America ("United States"), respectfully submits this memorandum of law in support of its motion to terminate the legacy antitrust judgment in the above-captioned case pursuant to Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The judgment was entered by this Court in 1934 and is almost 86 years old. The United States has concluded that because of its age and changed circumstances since its entry, the judgment no longer serves to protect competition. The United States gave the public notice and the opportunity to comment on its intent to seek termination of the judgment; it received no comments opposing termination. For this and other reasons explained below, the United States requests that the judgment be terminated.

I. BACKGROUND

From 1890, when the antitrust laws were first enacted, until the late 1970s, the United States frequently sought entry of antitrust judgments whose terms never expired.¹ Such perpetual judgments were the norm until 1979, when the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice (“Antitrust Division”) adopted the practice of including a ten-year term limit in nearly all of its antitrust judgments. Perpetual judgments entered before the policy change, however, remain in effect indefinitely unless a court terminates them. Although a defendant may move a court to terminate a perpetual judgment, few defendants have done so. There are many possible reasons for this, including defendants may not have been willing to bear the costs and time resources to seek termination, defendants may have lost track of decades-old judgments, individual defendants may have passed away, or company defendants may have gone out of business. As a result, hundreds of these legacy judgments remain open on the dockets of courts around the country.

The Antitrust Division’s Judgment Termination Initiative seeks to review all of its outstanding perpetual antitrust judgments and, when appropriate, seek termination of legacy judgments. The Antitrust Division described the initiative in a statement published in the Federal Register.² In addition, the Antitrust Division established a website to keep the public informed of its efforts to terminate perpetual judgments that no longer serve to protect competition.³ The United States believes that outstanding perpetual antitrust judgments presumptively should be terminated; nevertheless, the Antitrust Division is examining each judgment to ensure that it is suitable for termination. The Antitrust Division is giving the public notice of—and the opportunity to comment on—its intention to seek termination of perpetual judgments.

² Department of Justice’s Initiative to Seek Termination of Legacy Antitrust Judgments, 83 Fed. Reg. 19,837 (May 4, 2018), <https://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/granule/FR-2018-05-04/2018-09461>.

In brief, the process the United States is following to determine whether to move to terminate a perpetual antitrust judgment is as follows:

- The Antitrust Division reviews each perpetual judgment to determine whether it no longer serves to protect competition such that termination would be appropriate.
- If the Antitrust Division determines a judgment is suitable for termination, it posts the case name and the judgment on its public Judgment Termination Initiative website, <https://www.justice.gov/atr/JudgmentTermination>.
- The public is given the opportunity to comment on each proposed termination within thirty days of the date the case name and judgment are posted to the public website.
- Following review of any public comments received, the Antitrust Division determines whether the judgment still warrants termination; if so, the United States moves to terminate it.

The United States followed this process for the above-captioned judgment.⁴

The remainder of this motion is organized as follows: Section II describes the Court's jurisdiction to terminate the judgment and the applicable legal standards for terminating the judgment. Section III demonstrates that perpetual judgments rarely serve to protect competition and that those that are more than ten years old presumptively should be terminated. Section III

⁴ The United States followed this process to move almost 80 other district courts to terminate legacy antitrust judgments. To date, 76 districts, including the Southern District of New York, have terminated legacy judgments upon motion, and no court has denied a motion to terminate. See infra.

also discusses specific circumstances justifying termination. Exhibit A attaches a copy of the judgment that the United States seeks to terminate with this motion. A proposed order terminating the judgment also accompanies this motion.

II. APPLICABLE LEGAL STANDARDS FOR TERMINATING THE JUDGMENT

This Court has jurisdiction and authority to terminate the judgment. The judgment provides that the Court retains jurisdiction. In addition, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure grant the Court authority to terminate the judgment. According to Rule 60(b)(5) and 60(b)(6), “[o]n motion and just terms, the court may relieve a party . . . from a final judgment . . . (5) [when] applying it prospectively is no longer equitable; or (6) for any other reason that justifies relief.”⁵ Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5)–(6); accord Frew ex rel. Frew v. Hawkins, 540 U.S. 431, 441 (2004) (explaining that Rule 60(b)(5) “encompasses the traditional power of a court of equity to modify its decree in light of changed circumstances” and that “district courts should apply a ‘flexible standard’ to the modification of consent decrees when a significant change in facts or law warrants their amendment”) (citation omitted); see also United States v. Eastman Kodak Co., 63 F.3d 95, 101 (2d Cir. 1995) (“[T]he power of a court to modify or terminate a consent decree is, at bottom, guided by equitable considerations.”).

⁵ Although the Tunney Act governs the procedures for judicial approval of consent decrees filed by the Antitrust Division, by its terms, it is not applicable to consent decree termination proceedings. Nevertheless, the Second Circuit has held that the Tunney Act can provide “useful guidance” to the court with respect to decree terminations. See United States v. American Cyanamid Co., 719 F.2d 558, 565 n.7 (2d Cir. 1983). The Tunney Act does not require a court to conduct an evidentiary hearing, 15 U.S.C. § 16(e)(2). As described in this memorandum, in light of the almost 86 years that have passed since this Court entered this final judgment and the changed circumstances since its entry, the United States does not believe that it is necessary for this Court to make an extensive inquiry into the facts of this final judgment in order to terminate it under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(5) or (b)(6).

Where, as here, the United States seeks to terminate an antitrust judgment, the court, exercising judicial supervision, should approve a decree termination when the United States has provided a reasonable explanation to support the conclusion that termination is consistent with the public interest. See United States v. International Business Machines Corp., 163 F.3d 737, 740 (2d Cir. 1998); United States v. Loew's, Inc., 783 F. Supp. 211, 213 (S.D.N.Y. 1992); United States v. Columbia Artists Mgmt., Inc., 662 F. Supp. 865, 869–70 (S.D.N.Y. 1987). See also United States v. Western Elec. Co., 900 F.2d 283, 307 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (a court should approve a termination “so long as the resulting array of rights and obligations is within the zone of settlements consonant with the public interest today”); United States v. Western Elec. Co., 993 F.2d 1572, 1576-77 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (under “deferential” public interest test, a court should accept a consensual termination of decree restrictions that the United States “reasonably regarded as advancing the public interest;” it is “not up to the court to reject an agreed-on change simply because the proposal diverge[s] from its view of the public interest;” rather, a court “may reject an uncontested termination only if it has exceptional confidence that adverse antitrust consequences will result.”).

The purposes behind the antitrust laws inform the meaning of the term “public interest.” Id. This Court’s “public interest determination must be based on the same analysis that [it] would use to evaluate the underlying violation” — whether the present marketplace “is such” that the antitrust violation alleged in the complaint would be unlikely to recur following the decree’s termination. IBM, 163 F.3d at 740.; see also United States v. American Cyanamid Co., 719 F.2d 558 (2d Cir. 1983). That evaluation necessarily is “forward-looking and probabilistic . . . focused on the likelihood of a potential future violation, rather than the mere possibility of a violation.” IBM, 163 F.3d at 742 (emphasis added). “[T]he Department of Justice has broad discretion in controlling government antitrust litigation”; thus, “[a]bsent a showing of corrupt failure of the government to discharge its duty, the Court, in making its public interest finding, should . . . carefully consider the explanations of the government. . . .” Loew’s, 783 F. Supp. at 214 (quoting United States v. Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., 1977–1 Trade Cas. ¶ 61,508 at 71,980, 1977 WL 4352 (W.D. Mo.1977)). “This Court may not substitute its opinion or views” for the government’s when “the government consents to the termination of a decree.” Id.

In that regard, if the government reasonably explains why there is “no current need for” a decree, termination would serve “the public interest” Id. at 213–14 (quoting N. Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 4 (1958)). In Loew’s, for example, the Court reasoned that “in view of the changed environment in which the [40-year-old] Judgment now operates, there is no persuasive reason for maintaining the Judgment and subjecting Loews to restrictions that do not bind other” market participants. Id. at 215.

Given its jurisdiction and its authority, the Court may terminate a judgment for any reason that justifies relief, including that the judgment is no longer in the public interest and no longer serves its original purpose of protecting competition. This result is consistent with other courts’ actions across the country when analyzing Judgment Termination Initiative motions.

Seventy-six districts have terminated over 750 legacy judgments upon similar motion. The courts span all judicial districts and include other courts both within this District and within this Circuit. See, e.g., United States v. The Wool Institute, Inc., Case No. 1:20-mc-00029-LGS (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 29, 2020) (terminating one judgment); United States v. Robert E. Miller, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:20-mc-00020-GHW (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 14, 2020) (terminating one judgment); United States v. A. Schrader’s Son, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:19-mc-01438-PKC (E.D.N.Y. Jun. 24, 2019) (terminating 14 judgments); United States v. Alden Paper Co., et al.,

Case No. 1:19-mc-00015-DNH (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2019) (terminating five judgments); United States v. New Departure Manufacturing Co., et al., Case No. 1:19-mc-00016-LJV (W.D.N.Y. Jun. 11, 2019) (terminating 12 judgments); United States v. County National Bank of Bennington, et al., Case No. 5:19-mc-00032-gwc (D. Vt. Mar. 21, 2019) (terminating one judgment).

In reviewing legacy judgments that have been the subject of the United States’ motions to terminate, courts have found termination to be in the public interest for a variety of reasons, including the age of the judgment, defendant’s corporate status, changed circumstances over time in markets, and lack of need due to the judgment duplicating prohibitions established under current antitrust laws. See, e.g., United States v. The Wool Institute, Inc., Case No. 1:20-mc-00029-LGS (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 29, 2020 (terminating one judgment where the corporate defendant no longer existed, stating that applying it going forward was no longer equitable and that “terminating the antitrust judgment is consistent with the public interest”); United States v. Coal Dealers Association of California, et. al., Case No. 19-mc-80147-JST (N.D.CA. Jul. 19, 2019) (terminating 37 judgments because of their age, lack of need due to the judgments duplicating prohibitions under current antitrust laws, and changed circumstances. Specifically, the court noted, “Given that this motion seeks to terminate judgments entered between 120 and 32 years ago and that many of the affected entities no longer exist, the Court finds the government’s public comment initiative provided adequate notice under the circumstances” and that service was not necessary); United States v. Continental Grain Co., 1:70-CV-6733, 2019 WL 2323875 (E. D. Tex. May 30, 2019) (terminating judgment under FRCP 60(b)(5)); United States v. Kahn’s Bakery, Inc., et al., 3:75-cv-00106-RPM at *6 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 26, 2019) (terminating judgment because it “no longer serves to protect competition”); United States v. Virgin Islands Gift and

Fashion Shop Ass’n, Inc., et al., 3:69-cv-00295-CVG-RM at *5 (D.V.I. Jun. 11, 2019)

(terminating judgments, in part, because the prohibition on price fixing is duplicative of the antitrust laws and the representation by the United States that a corporate defendant no longer exists); United States v. Anheuser-Busch, et al., 1:60-cv-08906-KMM at *5 (S.D. Fla. Jul. 19, 2019) (terminating judgments, in part, because of the “changes in factual and legal landscape” since their entry). Exhibit B contains the orders specifically cited above. Termination of the final judgment in this case is warranted for similar reasons as in these cases.

III. ARGUMENT

This almost 86-year-old judgment no longer serves to protect competition, and it is in the public interest to terminate it. In the above-captioned case, the defendants were a trade association of milliners, which are women’s hat manufacturers. Under the provisions of the 1934 judgment, defendants were enjoined from conspiring to fix minimum prices for women’s hat reproductions, and from carrying out a similar conspiracy relating to the prices at which wholesale or retail milliners sell or resell women’s hat reproductions. Specifically, the defendants were enjoined from requiring the sale of women’s hat reproductions at not less than agreed minimum prices; selling or delivering labels to be affixed to women’s hat reproductions on the requirement that the purchasers of the reproductions resell them at minimum prices; and refusing to sell women’s hat reproductions or furnish labels to any person or corporation because the person or corporation resold the reproductions at prices other than those named by the defendant.

It is appropriate to terminate the judgment because it no longer serves its original purpose of protecting competition. The United States believes that the perpetual judgment presumptively should be terminated because its age alone suggests it no longer protects competition. Other reasons, however, also weigh in favor termination, including that all the defendants appear to no longer exist and the terms of the judgment merely prohibit that which the antitrust laws already prohibit. Under such circumstances, the Court may terminate the judgment pursuant to Rule 60(b)(5) or (b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

A. The Judgment Presumptively Should Be Terminated Because of Its Age

Permanent antitrust injunctions rarely serve to protect competition. The experience of the United States in enforcing the antitrust laws has shown that markets almost always evolve over time in response to competitive and technological changes. These changes may make the prohibitions of decades-old judgments either irrelevant to, or inconsistent with, competition. These considerations, among others, led the Antitrust Division in 1979 to establish its policy of generally including in each judgment a term automatically terminating the judgment after no more than ten years.⁶ This judgment—which is almost 86 years old—presumptively should be terminated for the reasons that led the Antitrust Division to adopt its 1979 policy of generally limiting judgments to a term of ten years.

B. The Judgment Is No Longer Needed to Protect Competition

In addition to age, other reasons weigh heavily in favor of terminating the judgment. Based on its examination, the Antitrust Division has determined that the judgment should be terminated for the following reasons:

- The judgment prohibits acts that the antitrust laws already prohibit, such as price fixing. As noted earlier the judgment in this case prohibited defendants from conspiring to monopolize the market for reproductions of women's hats through price fixing. These prohibitions amount to little more than an admonition that defendants must not violate the law. Absent such terms defendants still are deterred from violating the law by the possibility of imprisonment, significant criminal fines, and treble damages in private follow-on litigation; a mere admonition to not violate the law adds little additional deterrence.

- There appear to be no surviving defendants to this judgment. The Millinery Quality Guild changed its name to Millinery Creators Guild, but that organization disappeared from newspapers before 1960. Two of the defendants, Bonhotal Co. and Vogel Hat Co., went out of business before the decree was issued. Three other defendants—Cooper-Russell, Farrington & Evans, and E.H. Scherman & Co.—have no incorporation records and last appeared in newspapers during the late 1930s. Other defendants similarly have not appeared in public news reports for over 60 years. L.G. Meyerson, Inc. last appeared in a 1945 newspaper. Harry Solomons & Son last appeared in a newspaper in 1951. Dave Herstein Co. disappeared from newspaper records after 1953, and Vogue Hat Co. ceased New York advertising in 1948 and Chicago advertising in 1957. G. Howard Hodge, Inc. does not appear in a newspaper after the death of the company's founder in 1966. Serge was named as a d/b/a for Sergui F. Victor. There are no incorporation records for any company named Serge, and Mr. Victor passed away in 1969. See Declaration of Barry Creech. In addition to Mr. Victor, there were eight other individual defendants named in the judgment. Given that the judgment is almost 86 years old, it would be highly unlikely for any of the individual defendants to still be actively engaged in the relevant activities from the judgment.

Each of these reasons support the termination of this judgment.

C. There Has Been No Public Opposition to Termination

The United States has provided adequate notice to the public regarding its intent to seek termination of the judgment. On April 25, 2018, the Antitrust Division issued a press release announcing its efforts to review and terminate legacy antitrust judgments, and noting that it would begin its efforts by proposing to terminate judgments entered by the federal district courts in Washington, D.C., and Alexandria, Virginia.⁷ On June 7, 2019, the Antitrust Division listed the judgment in the above-captioned case on its public website, describing its intent to move to terminate the judgment.⁸ The notice identified each case, linked to the judgment, and invited public comment. In the above-captioned case, however, the Division received no comments concerning the judgment.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the United States believes termination of the judgment in the above-captioned case is appropriate, and respectfully requests that the Court enter an order terminating it.
