PROPOSED DECISION

Claimant brings this claim against the Republic of Iraq (“Iraq”) alleging that Iraq held him hostage in violation of international law in August 1990. Because he has established that Iraq held him hostage for 6 days, he is entitled to an award of $180,000.

BACKGROUND AND BASIS OF THE PRESENT CLAIM

Claimant alleges that he was a six-year-old U.S. citizen living in Kuwait with his family when Iraq invaded the country on August 2, 1990. He asserts that, beginning with the invasion and for approximately six days thereafter, he and his family were forced to hide in constant fear of being captured by Iraqi authorities. He further claims that during this entire period, the Iraqi government in effect forcibly prevented him (and other U.S. nationals) from leaving Kuwait and did so with the express purpose of compelling the United States government to acquiesce to certain Iraqi government demands. On or around August 6, 1990, Claimant and his family drove towards Saudi Arabia in a car that was part of a convoy of vehicles carrying, among others, foreign nationals seeking to escape from Kuwait. After spending several hours traveling through the Kuwaiti desert, Claimant crossed the Kuwaiti-Saudi border on August 7, 1990.

Although Claimant was not among them, many of the U.S. nationals in Iraq and Kuwait at the time of the 1990-91 Iraqi occupation of Kuwait sued Iraq (and others) in federal court for, among other things, hostage-taking.¹ Those cases were pending when, in September 2010, the United States and Iraq concluded an en bloc (lump-sum) settlement agreement.² The Agreement, which entered into force in May 2011, covered a number of personal injury claims of U.S. nationals arising from acts of the former Iraqi regime occurring prior to October 7, 2004, including claims of personal injury caused by hostage-taking.³ Exercising its authority to distribute money from the settlement funds, the U.S. Department of State provided compensation to numerous individuals whose claims were covered by the Agreement, including some whom Iraq had allegedly taken hostage or unlawfully detained following Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

Under the International Claims Settlement Act of 1949 ("ICSA"), the Secretary of State has statutory authority to refer "a category of claims against a foreign government" to this Commission.⁴ The Secretary has delegated that authority to the State Department's Legal Adviser, who, by letter dated October 7, 2014, referred three categories of claims to this Commission for adjudication and certification.⁵ This was the State Department's second referral of claims to the Commission under the Claims Settlement Agreement, the first having been by letter dated November 14, 2012 (“2012 Referral” or “November 2012 Referral”).⁶

One category of claims from the 2014 Referral is applicable here. That category, known as Category A, consists of claims by U.S. nationals for hostage-taking¹ by Iraq² in violation of international law prior to October 7, 2004, provided that the claimant was not a plaintiff in pending litigation against Iraq for hostage taking³ at the time of the entry into force of the Claims Settlement Agreement and has not received compensation under the Claims Settlement Agreement from the U.S. Department of State. . . .

¹ For purposes of this referral, hostage-taking would include unlawful detention by Iraq that resulted in an inability to leave Iraq or Kuwait after Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2, 1990.

² For purposes of this referral, “Iraq” shall mean the Republic of Iraq, the Government of the Republic of Iraq, any agency or instrumentality of the Republic of Iraq, and any official, employee or agent of the Republic of Iraq acting within the scope of his or her office, employment or agency.

³ For purposes of this category, pending litigation against Iraq for hostage taking refers to the following matters: Acree v. Iraq, D.D.C. 02-cv-00632 and 06-cv-00723, Hill v. Iraq, D.D.C. 99-cv-03346, Vine v. Iraq, D.D.C. 01-cv-02674; Seyam (Islamic Society of Wichita) v. Iraq, D.D.C. 03-cv-00888; Simon v. Iraq, D.D.C. 03-cv-00691.

2014 Referral at ¶ 3.

⁶ Although the November 2012 Referral involved claims of U.S. nationals who were held hostage or unlawfully detained by Iraq, it did not involve hostage-taking claims per se. Rather, it consisted of certain claimants who had already received compensation under the Claims Settlement Agreement from the State Department for their hostage-taking claims, and it authorized the Commission to award additional compensation to those claimants, provided they could show, among other things, that they suffered a “serious personal injury” during their detention. The 2012 Referral expressly noted that the “payment already received by the claimant under the Claims Settlement Agreement compensated the claimant for his or her experience for the entire duration of the period in which the claimant was held hostage or was subject to unlawful detention and encompassed physical, mental, and emotional injuries generally associated with such captivity or detention.” Letter dated November 14, 2012, from the Honorable Harold Hongju Koh, Legal Adviser, Department of State, to the Honorable Timothy J. Feighery, Chairman, Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, at ¶3 n.3.

On October 23, 2014, the Commission published notice in the Federal Register announcing the commencement of the second Iraq Claims Program pursuant to the ICSA and the 2014 Referral.⁷

On November 2, 2015, the Commission received from Claimant a completed Statement of Claim seeking compensation under Category A of the 2014 Referral, together with exhibits supporting the elements of his claim.

DISCUSSION

Jurisdiction

This Commission's authority to hear claims is limited to the category of claims referred to it by the United States Department of State.⁸ The Commission's jurisdiction under the "Category A" paragraph of the 2014 Referral is limited to claims for hostage-taking of (1) "U.S. nationals," provided that the claimant (2) was not a plaintiff in any litigation against Iraq for hostage taking pending on May 22, 2011 (the "Pending Litigation"), and (3) has not received compensation under the Claims Settlement Agreement from the Department of State. 2014 Referral at ¶ 3.

Nationality

This claims program is limited to claims of "U.S. nationals." Here, that means a claimant must have been a national of the United States when the claim arose and continuously thereafter until May 22, 2011, the date the Agreement entered into force.⁹ Claimant satisfies the nationality requirement. Claimant has provided a copy of a Consular Report of Birth Abroad issued by the U.S. Department of State, which shows that he was a U.S. national at the time of the alleged hostage-taking (August 1990). He has also provided a copy of his current U.S. passport, which expires in July 2025 and establishes that he remained a U.S. national through the effective date of the Claims Settlement Agreement.

No Pending Litigation

Additionally, Category A states that the claimant may not have been a plaintiff in any of the so-called Pending Litigation cases at the time of the entry into force of the Claims Settlement Agreement.¹⁰ Footnote 3 of the 2014 Referral specifically lists the Pending Litigation cases for purposes of the Referral. Claimant has averred, and the pleadings in the cases cited in footnote 3 confirm, that he was not a plaintiff in any of those Pending Litigation cases. The Commission thus finds that Claimant has also satisfied this element of his claim.

No Compensation under the Claims Settlement Agreement from the Department of State

The Claimant also satisfies the final jurisdictional requirement. Claimant has stated that he has not “received any compensation under the Claims Settlement Agreement from the Department of State.” Further, we have no evidence that the State Department has provided him any compensation under the Claims Settlement Agreement. Therefore, Claimant meets this element of his claim.

In summary, this claim is within the Commission’s jurisdiction pursuant to the 2014 Referral and is entitled to adjudication on the merits.

¹⁰ The Agreement entered into force on May 22, 2011. See Claims Settlement Agreement, art. IX.

Merits

Factual Allegations

Claimant states that Iraq held him hostage from August 2, 1990, until August 7, 1990, a total of six days. Claimant alleges that he was six years old and living in Kuwait with his family when Iraq invaded the country on August 2, 1990. He further alleges that he and his family attempted to escape to Saudi Arabia on the day of the invasion but were turned back at the Saudi border by Iraqi soldiers who instructed them to return to Kuwait City. They did so, and when there hid inside his grandmother's residence for approximately five days. On or around August 6, 1990, they again drove towards Saudi Arabia, this time as part of a convoy of vehicles carrying others seeking to escape from Kuwait. After spending several hours traveling through the Kuwaiti desert, Claimant and his family crossed the Kuwaiti-Saudi border on August 7, 1990.

Supporting Evidence

Claimant has supported his claim with, among other things, his sworn Statement of Claim and a copy of his mother's U.S. passport, which contains a Kuwaiti residency visa dated March 9, 1986, a Kuwaiti entry stamp dated February 7, 1990, Saudi entry and transit stamps dated August 7, 1990, a Saudi exit stamp dated August 8, 1990, a partially legible United Arab Emirates entry stamp that appears to have been issued on August 8, 1990,¹¹ and several Omani entry and exit stamps over the course of the nine months after August 7, 1990, several of which include adjacent handwritten annotations stating that she was accompanied by her husband at that time. These include a partially legible entry stamp that was issued on the ninth day of some month in 1990, a corresponding exit stamp dated ¹¹ In previous submissions to the Commission, Claimant's counsel has characterized this stamp as an entry stamp to the United Arab Emirates dated August 8, 1990, but now contends that the stamp was issued on August 9, 1990.

November 1, 1990, and several entry and exit stamps for Oman in November and December 1990, and February, March, and April of 1991. Claimant has also submitted a copy of some of the pages from his sister's Kuwaiti passport at the time, which contains a stamp of certification and attestation from the Kuwaiti Embassy in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, dated August 9, 1990, and a similar stamp from the Kuwaiti Embassy in Muscat, Oman, dated September 2, 1990; declarations from him and his mother that describe the circumstances of his alleged detention and ultimate departure from Kuwait; and three declarations from family friends that refer to his presence in Kuwait during the period of the alleged hostage taking. The first declaration is from a family friend who states that he escaped from Kuwait to Saudi Arabia in a convoy of cars that included a vehicle carrying Claimant and his family on August 7, 1990. The second declaration is from another friend, who claims that she spoke with Claimant's mother on the telephone soon after Claimant's mother and her children arrived in Oman on August 9, 1990, and that, during that conversation, Claimant's mother recounted the details of Claimant's family's escape from Kuwait and journey to Oman. The third declaration is from another family friend, who asserts that she was in Kuwait in the middle of June 1990, and visited Claimant and his family in their residence at that time. This friend has also submitted a copy of her U.S. passport valid in 1990, which contains a Kuwaiti entry visa that was issued on February 21, 1988, and an Iraqi exit stamp dated September 12, 1990.

Additionally, Claimant has submitted a number of documents that provide background about the broader geopolitical situation during the First Gulf War in 1990-91, including some that relate specifically to the circumstances faced by U.S. nationals in Iraq and Kuwait at the time. These documents include statements from U.S. and Iraqi officials, resolutions of the United Nations Security Council, newspaper articles, a report from Amnesty International on human rights violations committed by Iraq in 1990, unclassified cables and a memorandum from the U.S. Department of State, and affidavits submitted in two lawsuits brought by other U.S. nationals who were also in Kuwait or Iraq during the First Gulf War.

Legal Standard

To make out a substantive claim under Category A of the 2014 Referral, a claimant must show that (1) Iraq was engaged in an armed conflict and (2) during that conflict, Iraq took the claimant hostage.¹² The Commission has previously held that, to establish a hostage-taking claim, a claimant must show that Iraq (a) seized or detained the claimant and (b) threatened the claimant with death, injury, or continued detention (c) in order to compel a third party, such as the United States government, to do or abstain from doing any act as an explicit or implicit condition for the claimant's release.¹³ A claimant can establish the first element of this standard by showing that the Iraqi government confined the claimant to a particular location or locations within Iraq or Kuwait, or prohibited the claimant from leaving Iraq and/or Kuwait.¹⁴

Application of Standard to this Claim

(1) Armed Conflict: Claimant alleges that Iraq took him hostage in Kuwait on August 2, 1990, and held him hostage for six days, until August 7, 1990, when he escaped to Saudi Arabia. In its first decision awarding compensation for hostage-taking under the 2014 Referral, the Commission held that during this entire period, Iraq was engaged in an armed conflict with Kuwait.¹⁵ Thus, Claimant satisfies this element of the standard.

¹² See Claim No. IRQ-II-161, Decision No. IRQ-II-003, at 16. An estate claimant would of course need to make this showing as to its decedent.

¹³ See id. at 17-20.

¹⁴ See id. at 17.

¹⁵ See id. at 16-17.

(2) Hostage-taking: To satisfy the hostage-taking requirement of Category A of the 2014 Referral, Claimant must show that Iraq (a) seized or detained him and (b) threatened him with death, injury, or continued detention (c) in order to compel a third party, such as the United States government, to do or abstain from doing any act as an explicit or implicit condition for his release. Claimant satisfies this standard for the six-day period from August 2, 1990, to August 7, 1990.

(a) Detention/deprivation of freedom: For purposes of analyzing Claimant's allegations of having been detained, the Commission must first determine whether Claimant has carried his burden to prove that he was in Kuwait for the period between August 2, 1990, and the date Claimant asserts that he escaped to Saudi Arabia—August 7, 1990.

Claimant has submitted evidence sufficient to establish that he was in Kuwait during this period. The documentary evidence establishes that Claimant's mother and sister were both in Kuwait from August 2, 1990, to August 7, 1990.¹⁶ Combined with the fact that Claimant was a six-year old child at the time and could plausibly have been with his mother at this time, this documentary evidence provides some support for Claimant's allegation that he was in Kuwait during this period. The documentary evidence in the record includes Claimant's mother's U.S. passport establishing that his mother was in Kuwait from August 2, 1990, to August 7, 1990, when she entered Saudi Arabia.¹⁷ The documentary evidence also establishes that Claimant's three-year old sister was in Kuwait with his mother during the same period. Claimant's sister's passport shows that she was in the United Arab Emirates on August 9, 1990, and was in Oman on September 2, 1990.

¹⁶ See Claim No. IRQ-II-164, Decision No. IRQ-II-055; Claim No. IRQ-II-176, Decision No. IRQ-II-237.

¹⁷ See also Claim No. IRQ-II-164, Decision No. IRQ-II-055.

Claimant's mother's passport contains evidence that Claimant's mother entered the United Arab Emirates on August 8, 1990, (and could plausibly have been in the United Arab Emirates on August 9, 1990)¹⁸ and spent a great deal of time in Oman during the fall of 1990 (and thus could plausibly have been in Oman on September 2, 1990). Moreover, several of the Oman stamps in Claimant's mother's passport indicate that Claimant's mother and father were together as they entered and left Oman, a fact that would suggest that Claimant, as a six-year child, was not likely to be elsewhere as his parents crossed international borders.

Claimant's assertion that he was in Kuwait from August 2, 1990, to August 7, 1990, is also supported by the testimonial evidence in the record. This includes the declaration of a non-interested party in Kuwait at the time who testified that she saw Claimant and his family in Kuwait in June 1990.¹⁹ It also includes the declaration of a second non-interested party who testified that he was in the convoy of cars with Claimant and his family as it escaped from Kuwait to Saudi Arabia on August 7, 1990. We thus conclude that Claimant has established that he was in Kuwait from August 2, 1990, to August 7, 1990. Claimant's time in Kuwait following the Iraqi invasion thus falls in the period between the Iraqi invasion on August 2, 1990, and the Iraqi government's formal closing of the borders on August 9, 1990.²⁰

During this entire period, Iraq confined Claimant to Kuwait by threatening all U.S. nationals with immediate seizure and forcible detention.²¹ Although some foreign nationals did manage to leave Kuwait and/or Iraq prior to August 7, 1990,²² Claimant could not reasonably be expected to have escaped any earlier than he did.²³ Iraqi authorities were forcibly detaining foreign nationals (including U.S. nationals) in Kuwait, relocating many to Baghdad against their will.²⁴ Claimant and his family understandably had, as the United Nations Compensation Commission has put it, a “manifestly well-founded fear” of being killed or forcibly detained if they had made any earlier attempt to leave the country.²⁵ Indeed, the facts suggest that they risked their lives to attempt to leave when they did. The Commission has previously recognized that for the purposes of the legal standard applicable here, putting Claimant and his family in this situation in effect amounts to detention.²⁶ Iraq thus detained Claimant from August 2, 1990, to August 7, 1990.

¹⁸ It does not matter for our purposes here whether Claimant's mother's United Arab Emirates entry stamp was issued on August 8, 1990, or on August 9, 1990. Either date would support the conclusion that she was in that country on August 9, 1990, at the same time that Claimant's passport was stamped, and nothing in her passport indicates that she was elsewhere at that time.

(b) Threat: In its first decision awarding compensation for hostage-taking under the 2014 Referral, the Commission determined that the Iraqi government threatened U.S. nationals in Kuwait and Iraq numerous times with continued detention.²⁷ Both Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and the Speaker of Iraq’s National Assembly Saadi Mahdi made clear that American nationals (as well as those from numerous other countries) would not have been permitted to leave Kuwait and/or Iraq at the time Claimant escaped from Kuwait.²⁸ Claimant has thus established that Iraq threatened to continue to detain him.²⁹

²⁹ While we determine that these statements apply to Claimant and other similarly situated U.S. nationals who were prevented from leaving Iraq or Kuwait after the invasion, we do not make any findings as to whether they also apply to U.S. nationals with diplomatic status: Iraqi officials made specific representations about the ability of diplomatic and consular staff members with U.S. nationality (and their relatives) to leave Iraq and Kuwait throughout the crisis. See In Iraq: ‘We Have A Problem’ Iraq Holds

(c) Third party coercion: The Commission has previously held that Iraq detained all U.S. nationals in Kuwait or Iraq at the time and threatened them with continued detention in order to compel the United States government to act in certain ways as an explicit and/or implicit condition for their release.³⁰ Iraq itself stated that it sought three things from the United States government before it would release the detained U.S. nationals; it wanted the United States (i) not to attack Iraq, (ii) to withdraw its troops from Saudi Arabia; and/or (iii) to end the economic embargo imposed on Iraq.³¹ Indeed, the U.S. government itself understood Iraq's actions to be hostage-taking.³²

In sum, this claim meets the standard for hostage-taking within the meaning of the 2014 Referral. Iraq held Claimant hostage in violation of international law for a period of six days, and Claimant is thus entitled to compensation.

COMPENSATION

Having concluded that the present claim is compensable, the Commission must next determine the appropriate amount of compensation.

In its first decision awarding compensation for hostage-taking under the 2014 Referral, the Commission held that successful claimants should be awarded compensation in the amount of $150,000 plus an additional $5,000 for each day the claimant was in captivity.³³ Therefore, for the six days Iraq held Claimant hostage, he is entitled to an award of $180,000, which is $150,000 plus (6 x $5,000). This amount constitutes the
