Exemption 7

Introduction

Exemption 7 of the Freedom of Information Act protects six distinct categories of law enforcement information from disclosure, specifically: "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information (A) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings, (B) would deprive a person of a right to a fair trial or an impartial adjudication, (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, (D) could reasonably be expected to disclose the identity of a confidential source, including a State, local, or foreign agency or authority or any private institution which furnished information on a confidential basis, and, in the case of a record or information compiled by a criminal law enforcement authority in the course of a criminal investigation, or by an agency conducting a lawful national security intelligence investigation, information furnished by a confidential source, (E) would disclose techniques and procedures for law enforcement investigations or prosecutions, or would disclose guidelines for law enforcement investigations or prosecutions if such disclosure could reasonably be expected to risk circumvention of the law, or (F) could reasonably be expected to endanger the life or physical safety of any individual."1

For any of these six categories of information to be protected, they must first satisfy the threshold of Exemption 7, which requires that the "records or information [be] compiled for law enforcement purposes."2 Federal agencies "must meet the threshold requirements of Exemption 7 before they may withhold requested documents on the basis of any of its subparts."3 The majority of the Exemption 7 subparts also require that

---

2 Id.; see also Pub. Emps. for Env't Resp. v. U.S. Section, Int'l Boundary & Water Comm'n, U.S.-Mex., 740 F.3d 195, 202-03 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (holding that "[t]o fall within Exemption 7, documents must first meet a threshold requirement: that the records were 'compiled for law enforcement purposes'").

3 Pratt v. Webster, 673 F.2d 408, 416 (D.C. Cir. 1982); see, e.g., Abramson v. FBI, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982) (explaining that requested record must have been compiled for law agencies demonstrate that disclosure "could reasonably be expected" to cause a harm that each subsection seeks to prevent, while Exemptions 7(B) and Exemption 7(E) require that agencies demonstrate that disclosure "would" cause the harm these subsections seek to prevent.\(^4\)

In making their determinations of threshold Exemption 7 applicability, courts have focused on the content and purpose for compiling the requested information.\(^5\) In the case of law enforcement agencies, courts have accorded the government varying degrees of deference when considering whether their particular records meet the threshold requirement of Exemption 7.\(^6\) Indeed, in recognizing the propriety of judicial deference,

\(^4\) 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7) (2018); Freedom of Information Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-570, § 1802, 100 Stat. 3207, 3207-48 (excepting Exemption 7(B) and part of Exemption 7(E), changing requirement that agency demonstrate that disclosure "would" cause harm each subsection seeks to prevent by substituting new standard that disclosure "could reasonably be expected to" cause the specified harms); see also DOJ v. Reps. Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 756 n.9 (1989) (recognizing that shift from "would constitute" standard to "could reasonably be expected to constitute" standard "represents a congressional effort to ease considerably a Federal law enforcement agency's burden in invoking [Exemption 7]"); Attorney General's Memorandum on the 1986 Amendments to the Freedom of Information Act (Dec. 1987) [hereinafter Attorney General's 1986 Amendments Memorandum].

\(^5\) See Abramson, 456 U.S. at 626 (explaining that "threshold requirement for qualifying under Exemption 7 turns on the purpose for which the document sought to be withheld was prepared"); Clemente v. FBI, 867 F.3d 111, 119 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (noting that "this circuit has long emphasized that the focus is on how and under what circumstances the requested files were compiled" (quoting Jefferson v. DOJ, 284 F.3d 172, 176-77 (D.C. Cir. 2002))); Living Rivers, Inc. v. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, 272 F. Supp. 2d 1313, 1318-20 (D. Utah 2003) (explaining that before determining if "dam inundation" maps created by the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Reclamation were withheld properly pursuant to either Exemption 7(E) or Exemption 7(F), agency first had to demonstrate that Exemption 7's threshold requirement was met).

\(^6\) See, e.g., ACLU of N. Cal. v. FBI, 881 F.3d 776, 779 (9th Cir. 2018) ("[L]aw enforcement agencies such as the FBI should be accorded special deference in an Exemption 7 determination."); Blackwell v. FBI, 646 F.3d 37, 40 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (declaring that FBI's the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in Center for National Security Studies v. DOJ\(^7\) observed that it was acting "in accord with several federal courts" that defer to the executive on decisions of national security.\(^8\) However, while acknowledging the role of deference, courts have opined that deference is not "blind acceptance" of the agency's position.\(^9\)

---

\(^3\) [Page dimensions: 612.0x792.0]

\(^7\) 331 F.3d 918, 932 (D.C. Cir. 2003).

\(^8\) Id. at 927-28; see, e.g., L.A. Times v. Dep't of the Army, 442 F. Supp. 2d 880, 896-99 (C.D. Cal. 2006) (finding that mixed-function agency was providing intelligence information "to aid the Army in fulfilling its mission in Iraq," which includes security and "maintenance of law and order"; adding that it is "well-established that the judiciary owes some measure of deference to the executive in cases implicating national security"); Edmonds v. FBI, 272 F. Supp. 2d 35, 55 (D.D.C. 2003) (stating that the Circuit Court recently chronicled in detail the 'weight of authority counseling deference . . . ' and concluded that the deference that has historically been given to the executive when it invokes FOIA Exemption 1 must be extended to Exemption 7(A) in cases like this one, where national security area issues are at risk" (quoting Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Stud. v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 927-28 (D.C. Cir. 2003))).

\(^9\) Friedman v. U.S. Secret Serv., 923 F. Supp. 2d 262, 283 (D.D.C. 2013) (noting that "deference does not amount to blind acceptance of the agency's assertions"); McRae v. DOJ, 869 F. Supp. 2d 151, 164 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that it is clear that claims by law enforcement agencies are entitled to deference, but "deference is not blind acceptance" and broad statements are insufficient); Shannahan v. IRS, 680 F. Supp. 2d 1270, 1275 (W.D. Wash. 2010) (stating that although agency's determination is entitled to deference, "the court nonetheless reviews the determination de novo" to satisfy itself that agency is correct), aff'd,
Records or Information

The threshold requirement for Exemption 7 has been modified by Congress twice since the enactment of the FOIA. The last amendments occurred with the passage of the 1986 FOIA amendments, which broadened the threshold of Exemption 7. Those amendments eliminated the requirement that the records be "investigatory" files and made Exemption 7 protection applicable to "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes." Thus, as a result of the 1986 FOIA amendments, records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, even if not actually investigatory, satisfy the exemption's threshold requirement.

Similarly, with the addition of "information," Exemption 7 protection is no longer limited to investigatory records, but rather encompasses information compiled for a law enforcement purpose. This expansive interpretation of Exemption 7 has been reinforced by judicial decisions interpreting the breadth of the term "law enforcement." For example, in New Orleans Workers’ Ctr. for Radical Just. v. ICE, No. 15-431, 2019 WL 1025864, at *57 (D.D.C. Mar. 4, 2019) (finding that while criminal law enforcement agency is ordinarily entitled to deference, information presented in Vaughn Index "failed to provide the Court with the information necessary for it to independently evaluate the [agency's] claim" that all records met threshold).

---

11 Pub. L. No. 99-570, § 1802, 100 Stat. at 3207-48; see also Jordan v. DOJ, 668 F.3d 1188, 1196-97 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (noting that "Congress modified Exemption 7" to broaden its scope by replacing word "files" with word "records" and deleting word "investigatory"); Abdelfattah v. DHS, 488 F.3d. 178, 184 (3d Cir. 2007) (explaining that "1986 FOIA amendments broadened the applicability of Exemption 7 by expressly removing the requirement that the records be 'investigatory'"); Tax Analysts, 294 F.3d at 79 (explaining that 1986 FOIA amendments deleted "any requirement" that information be investigatory and emphasizing that "legislative history makes it clear that Congress intended the amended exemption to protect both investigatory and non-investigatory materials, including law enforcement manuals and the like" (citing S. Rep. No. 98-221, at 23 (1983))).

12 See Attorney General’s 1986 Amendments Memorandum; see also Tax Analysts, 294 F.3d at 79 ("It is clear that, under the amended threshold of Exemption 7, an agency may seek to block the disclosure of internal agency materials relating to guidelines, techniques, sources, and procedures for law enforcement investigations and prosecutions, even when the materials have not been compiled in the course of a specific investigation.").
enforcement purpose regardless of how the information is maintained. This shifts the focus from the purpose for which the record itself is created to the content of the record itself.

Compiled

As discussed above, federal agencies must meet the Exemption 7 threshold, which requires the records or information to be "compiled for law enforcement purposes." The Supreme Court has ruled that an item of information originally compiled by an agency for a law enforcement purpose does not lose Exemption 7 protection merely because it is maintained in or recompiled into a non-law enforcement record.

Furthermore, the Supreme Court in 1990 resolved a conflict in lower court decisions by holding that information not initially obtained or generated for law enforcement purposes may still qualify under Exemption 7 if it is subsequently compiled for a valid law enforcement purpose at any time prior to "when the Government invokes the Exemption." Rejecting the distinction between documents originally compiled or 14 Id.; see also S. Rep. No. 98-221, at 23 (1983) (expansion meant "to ensure that sensitive law enforcement information is protected under Exemption 7 regardless of the particular format or record in which [it] is maintained").

---

16 See Abramson v. FBI, 456 U.S. 615, 631-32 (1982) ("We hold that information initially contained in a record made for law enforcement purposes continues to meet the threshold requirements of Exemption 7 where that recorded information is reproduced or summarized in a new document for a non-law-enforcement purpose."); see also Lesar v. DOJ, 636 F.2d 472, 487 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (holding that documents compiled from review of previous FBI surveillance meet threshold); Jordan v. DOJ, No. 07-02303, 2009 WL 2913223, at *9 (D. Colo. Sept. 8, 2009) (declaring that "records originally developed for law enforcement purposes and later recompiled into a document not used for law enforcement still qualify for withholding under the series of exemptions covered by § 552(b)(7)" (citing Abramson, 456 U.S. at 631-32)), aff’d, 668 F.3d 1188 (10th Cir. 2011); Assassination Archives & Rsch. Ctr. v. CIA, 903 F. Supp. 131, 132-33 (D.D.C. 1995) (finding that information from criminal investigations recompiled into administrative file to assist FBI in responding to Senate committee hearings "certainly satisfies" threshold requirement).

17 John Doe Agency v. John Doe Corp., 493 U.S. 146, 153 (1989); accord Elec. Priv. Info. Ctr. v. DHS, 777 F.3d 518, 522 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (noting that "Exemption 7 requires that a document be created, gathered, or used by an agency for law enforcement purposes at some time before the agency invokes the exemption"); Lion Raisins v. USDA, 354 F.3d 1072, 1082 (9th Cir. 2004) ("Information need not have been originally compiled for law enforcement purposes in order to qualify for the 'law enforcement' exemption, so long as it was compiled for law enforcement at the time the FOIA request was made."), overruled on other grounds by Animal Legal Def. Fund v. FDA, 836 F.3d 987 (9th Cir. 2016); KTVY-TV v. United States, 919 F.2d 1465, 1469 (10th Cir. 1990) (per curiam) (applying John Doe Agency to hold that obtained for law enforcement purposes and those later assembled for such purposes, the Court held that the term "compiled" must be accorded its ordinary meaning – which includes "materials collected and assembled from various sources or other documents" – and found that the plain meaning of the statute contains "no requirement that the compilation be effected at a specific time."

information regarding personnel interview conducted before investigation commenced and later recompiled for law enforcement purposes satisfied Exemption 7 threshold); see also Sorin v. DOJ, 758 F. App’x 28, 32 (2d Cir. 2018) (per curiam) (concluding that interviews conducted by private law firm during internal investigation later referenced in prosecutorial memoranda were compiled for law enforcement purpose) (summary order), cert. denied, 139 S. Ct. 2674 (2019); CNN, Inc. v. FBI, Nos. 17-1167, 17-1175, 17-1189, 17-1212, 17-1830, 2018 WL 692921, at *70 (D.D.C. Feb. 2, 2018) (finding original intent behind compilation of records immaterial as documents were later "gathered" or "used" in investigation conducted by Special Counsel), remanded on other grounds, 2018 WL 3868760 (D.C. Cir. Aug. 8, 2018)).

Law Enforcement Purposes

The "law" to be enforced within the meaning of the term "law enforcement purposes" includes both civil and criminal statutes, as well as those statutes authorizing administrative (i.e., regulatory) proceedings. In addition to federal law

19 See, e.g., Pub. Emps. for Env't Resp. v. U.S. Sec'y, Int'l Boundary & Water Comm'n, U.S.-Mex., 740 F.3d 195, 203-04 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (finding that emergency action plans and inundation maps were compiled to enforce statutory duty to establish programs and policies to enhance dam safety for protection of human life and property and so met Exemption 7 threshold); Rugiero v. DOJ, 257 F.3d 534, 550 (6th Cir. 2001) (explaining that "Court has adopted a per se rule" that applies not only to criminal enforcement actions but "records compiled for civil enforcement purposes as well"); Rural Hous. All. v. USDA, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (holding that "character of the statute violated would rarely make a material distinction, because the law enforcement purposes . . . include both civil and criminal purposes"); Jordan v. DOJ, No. 07-02303, 2009 WL 2913223, at *9 (D. Colo. Sept. 8, 2009) ("Courts interpret 'law enforcement purposes' to include enforcement of both criminal and civil law."); aff'd, 668 F.3d 1188 (10th Cir. 2011); Faiella v. IRS, No. 05-238, 2006 WL 2040130, at *4 (D.N.H. July 20, 2006) (noting that there is no distinction between civil and criminal enforcement); Env't Prot. Servs. v. EPA, 364 F. Supp. 2d 575, 587 (N.D. W. Va. 2005) (reiterating that law enforcement standard includes "civil laws"); Martinez v. EEOC, No. 04-0391, 2004 WL 2359895, at *2 (W.D. Tex. Oct. 19, 2004) (restating that requirement of "law enforcement purpose" is satisfied by both criminal and civil laws); Jud. Watch, Inc. v. Rossotti, No. 01-2672, 2002 WL 31962775, at *6 (D. Md. Dec. 16, 2002) (ruling that letters written by citizens concerned about plaintiff's compliance with IRS laws were compiled for "civil law enforcement purposes"), aff'd sub nom. Jud. Watch, Inc. v. United States, 84 F. App'x 335 (4th Cir. 2004); Youngblood v. Comm'r, No. 99-9253, 2000 WL 852449, at *10 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 6, 2000) (holding that IRS "investigations or proceedings in the civil or criminal context" satisfy threshold).

20 See, e.g., Beard v. Espy, No. 94-16748, 1995 WL 792071, at *1 (9th Cir. Dec. 11, 1995) (unpublished disposition) (protecting complaint letter and notes compiled during criminal investigation involving USDA loans); Ortiz v. HHS, 70 F.3d 729, 730 (2d Cir. 1995) (holding that unsigned, unsolicited letter used to launch criminal investigation by SSA meets threshold for law enforcement purposes); Stanko v. BOP, 842 F. Supp. 2d 132, 138 (D.D.C. 2012) (finding that criminal investigation into inmate's threats of filing liens against BOP staff satisfies law enforcement requirement); Mavadia v. Caplinger, No. 95-3542, 1996 WL 592742, at *2 (E.D. La. Oct. 11, 1996) (finding that both civil and criminal investigations of possible violations of immigration laws satisfy threshold); Cappabianca v. Comm'r, U.S. Customs Serv., 847 F. Supp. 1558, 1565 (M.D. Fla. 1994) (stating that records of internal investigation focusing specifically on alleged acts that could result in civil or criminal sanctions were compiled for law enforcement purposes).

21 See, e.g., Jefferson v. DOJ, 284 F.3d 172, 178 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (reiterating that Exemption 7 "'covers investigatory files related to enforcement of all kinds of laws,' including those involving 'adjudicative proceedings'" such as those OPR conducts if such inquiries are for "violations of law" and not for "'oversight of the performance of duties" (quoting Rural Hous. All., 498 F.2d at 81 n.46)); Ctr. for Nat'l Pol'y Rev. on Race & Urban Issues v. Weinberger, 502 F.2d 370, 373 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (holding that administrative determination concerning

See Hopkinson v. Shillinger, 866 F.2d 1185, 1222 n.27 (10th Cir. 1989) (holding that Exemption 7 applies "to FBI laboratory tests conducted at the request of local law enforcement authorities"), overruled on other grounds by Sawyer v. Smith, 497 U.S. 227 (1990); Shaw v. FBI, 749 F.2d 58, 64 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (explaining that authorized federal investigation into commission of state crime constitutes valid criminal law enforcement investigation); see also Antonelli v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms & Explosives, No. 04-1180, 2005 WL 3276222, at *4 (D.D.C. Aug. 16, 2005) (declaring that records "compiled during the course of an investigation by a local police department, with ATF assistance," satisfy threshold); Palacio v. DOJ, No. 00-1564, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2198, at *16 (D.D.C. Feb. 11, 2002) (explaining that records of investigation conducted by city task force were "created or compiled" for law enforcement purposes and thus satisfy threshold), summary affirmance granted, No. 02-5247, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 1804 (D.C. Cir. Jan. 31, 2003); Wojtczak v. DOJ, 548 F. Supp. 143, 146-48 (E.D. Pa. 1982) ("This Court must therefore interpret the statute as written and concludes that Exemption 7 applies to all law enforcement records, federal, state, or local, that lie within the possession of the federal government.").

See, e.g., Bevis v. Dep't of State, 801 F.2d 1386, 1388 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (finding no distinction between foreign and domestic enforcement purposes in language of statute); Miller v. DOJ, 562 F. Supp. 2d 82, 117-18 (D.D.C. 2008) (reiterating that FBI records were compiled for law enforcement purposes because agency assisted foreign police; concluding that records located at Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs concerning events in foreign country met Courts have held that Exemption 7’s law enforcement purpose encompasses a wide variety of records and information. As such, records compiled as part of violent crime law enforcement purpose because office is charged with extraditing international fugitives as well as international evidence gathering; finding that DEA files pertaining to its foreign activity were compiled for law enforcement purposes because DEA is authorized to investigate trafficking in controlled substances, dangerous drugs, and precursor chemicals at interstate and international levels; Donovan v. FBI, 579 F. Supp. 1111, 1119-20 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) (stating that FBI investigation undertaken and laboratory tests performed in support of foreign government’s efforts to identify and prosecute perpetrators of crimes satisfy threshold, and reasoning that “refusing to apply Exemption 7 to foreign law enforcement might have the practical effect of interfering with cooperation and information sharing”), vacated on other grounds on motion for reconsideration, 579 F. Supp. 1124 (S.D.N.Y. 1984), appeal dismissed as moot, 751 F.2d 368 (2d Cir. 1984).

See, e.g., Poitras v. DHS, 303 F. Supp. 3d 136, 154 (D.D.C. 2018) (rejecting plaintiff's claims that FBI investigation concerning potential involvement in "an ambush that resulted in the death of one American soldier and serious injury to several others" was only "conducted for intelligence gathering purposes"); Sharkey v. DOJ, No. 16-2672, 2018 WL 838678, at *7 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 13, 2018) (concluding that investigatory records concerning FBI investigation into insider trading and fraud complaints "clearly were compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Rojas-Vega v. ICE, 302 F. Supp. 3d 300, 309 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding records related to enforcement of immigration and naturalization laws met threshold); Evans v. BOP, No. 16-2274, 2018 WL 707427, at *4 (D.D.C. Feb. 5, 2018) (concluding that video footage of inmate assault met threshold), aff’d in part, vacated in part, remanded on other grounds, 951 F.3d 578 (D.C. Cir. 2020); Mount v. Nielsen, No. 16-2532, 2018 WL 707485, at *2 (D.D.C. Feb. 5, 2018) (finding records related to investigation into loss of agent’s credentials were compiled for law enforcement purpose); Shapiro v. DOJ, 239 F. Supp. 3d 100, 113-14 (D.D.C. 2017) (noting that while FBI had not established that all FOIA search slips are compiled for law enforcement purposes, because "absence of a record can reflect 'information' compiled by the agency just as much as the existence of a record," release of certain search slips "would risk disclosing information compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Higgins v. DOJ, 919 F. Supp. 2d 131, 146 (D.D.C. 2013) (finding that Secret Service records compiled as part of counterfeiting investigation satisfy law enforcement threshold); Vazquez v. DOJ, 887 F. Supp. 2d 114, 117 (D.D.C. 2012) (finding that records maintained in FBI’s National Crime Information Center are compiled for law enforcement purposes), aff’d, No. 13-5197, 2013 WL 6818207 (D.C. Cir. 2013); Anderson v. BOP, 806 F. Supp. 2d 121, 126-27 (D.D.C. 2011) (finding statutory duty to manage federal correctional institutions satisfies threshold where, after incident at prison, "BOP determines that it is necessary to transfer an inmate to prevent future violence"); Johnson v. DOJ, No. 06-1248, 2007 WL 3408458, at *3 (E.D. Wis. Nov. 14, 2007) (noting that statements "taken in preparation for a criminal prosecution" were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Balderrama v. DHS, No. 04-1617, 2006 WL 886778, at *1, *7-9 (D.D.C. Mar. 30, 2006) (explaining that "Pre-Sentencing Investigation Reports," which are routinely prepared for all convicted felons during prosecution process, are part of law enforcement file and thus satisfy law enforcement requirement); Ray v. FBI, 441 F. Supp. 2d 27, 33-34 (D.D.C. 2006) (determining that documents generated by FBI efforts to prevent distribution of pornography, combat insurance fraud, and battle drug trafficking meet law enforcement threshold); Antonelli v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms & Explosives, No.
investigations\textsuperscript{25} or drug trafficking investigations,\textsuperscript{26} including records pertaining to the use of informants,\textsuperscript{27} have been found to meet Exemption 7's threshold. Furthermore,

\begin{footnotesize}
\begin{itemize}
  \item See Clemente v. FBI, 867 F.3d 111, 120 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (holding that records regarding RICO organized crime investigation satisfied law enforcement purposes threshold); Roth v. DOJ, 642 F.3d 1161, 1173 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (finding that request for information about "real killers" is confirmation that requester sought information "compiled for law enforcement purposes"); see also Holt v. DOJ, 734 F. Supp. 2d 28, 41 (D.D.C. 2010) (holding that records maintained in criminal case file pertaining to prosecution for murder and firearms violations were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Baez v. FBI, 443 F. Supp. 2d 717, 724 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (declaring that "there is no question" that documents pertaining to "investigation of crimes," including murder, were compiled for law enforcement purposes).
  \item See, e.g., Roberts v. FBI, 845 F. Supp. 2d 96, 103 (D.D.C. 2012) (stating that it "is apparent from the nature of plaintiff's FOIA request that the information he seeks was compiled for law enforcement purposes, namely, the criminal prosecution of plaintiff" for drug and organized crime offenses); Skinner v. DOJ, 744 F. Supp. 2d 185, 207 (D.D.C. 2010) (declaring that joint investigation into drug production and distribution "easily meets exemption 7's threshold requirement").
  \item See Clemente, 867 F.3d at 120 (finding that records regarding FBI's monitoring of organized crime informant were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Robinson v. At'ty Gen. of the U.S., 534 F. Supp. 2d 72, 81 (D.D.C. 2008) (explaining that "it is clear" that records pertaining to "alleged confidential informants and information they provided . . . would have been compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Hogan v. Huff, No. 00-6753, 2002 WL 1359722, at *11 (S.D.N.Y. June 21, 2002) (explaining that records concerning "information provided by a confidential source" satisfy Exemption 7's threshold).
\end{itemize}
\end{footnotesize}
records compiled as part of investigations into non-violent illegal activity have been found to satisfy the threshold,\(^\text{28}\) as have records used in efforts to prevent wrongful activity.\(^\text{29}\)

\(^{28}\) See, e.g., Sorin v. DOJ, 758 F. App’x 28, 32 (2d Cir. 2018) (per curiam) (agreeing that investigation into scheme to backdate options met threshold) (summary order), cert. denied, 139 S. Ct. 2674 (2019); Humane Soc’y Int’l v. U.S. Fish & Wildlife Serv., 394 F. Supp. 3d 67, 75 (D.D.C. 2019) (finding records held in Law Enforcement Management database had "rational nexus" to agency’s "duty to enforce laws governing the import and export of wildlife products"): Humane Soc’y v. U.S. V. Animal & Plant Health Inspection Serv., 386 F. Supp. 3d 34, 48-49 (D.D.C. 2019) (noting that while agency’s "inspection reports are routinized oversight not necessarily related to an investigation of alleged wrongdoing...they may nonetheless qualify as law enforcement records" as "there is a ‘rational nexus’ between the reports and the [agency’s] law enforcement duties"); Butler v. U.S. Dep’t of Lab., 316 F. Supp. 3d 330, 336 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding that records regarding OSHA investigation of workplace safety violations in wake of accident were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Concepcion v. U.S. Customs & Border Prot., 907 F. Supp. 2d 133, 140-41 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that passenger activity reports compiled as part of agency’s mission to secure borders of U.S. by collecting and reviewing travel information satisfies law enforcement threshold), aff’d per curiam, 550 F. App’x 1 (D.C. Cir. 2013); Ameren Mo. v. EPA, 897 F. Supp. 2d 802, 813 (E.D. Mo. 2012) (finding that records compiled as result of "statutory responsibility" to enforce Clean Air Act were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Miller v. DOJ, 872 F. Supp. 2d 12, 25 (D.D.C. 2012) (agreeing that documents created for extradition proceedings were compiled for law enforcement); Gerstein v. CIA, No. 06-4643, 2011 WL 89337, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2011) (holding that documents compiled in "OPR investigation into potentially illegal release of information" satisfy law enforcement threshold); Faiella, 2006 WL 2040130, at *4 (observing that "an IRS audit is a law enforcement activity"); Small v. IRS, 820 F. Supp. 163, 166 (D.N.J. 1992) (agreeing that IRS audit guidelines satisfy threshold).

\(^{29}\) See, e.g., Sack v. DOD, 823 F.3d 687, 694 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (finding that records concerning government’s use of polygraphs for background investigations and for evaluation of credibility of witnesses and criminal defendants satisfies preventative law enforcement purpose (quoting Milner v. Dep’t of the Navy, 562 U.S. 562, 582-83 (2011) (Alito, J., concurring))); Elec. Priv. Info. Ctr., 777 F.3d at 522-23 (holding that protocol for shutdown of wireless networks "was created to prevent crime and keep people safe, which qualify[es] as [a] law enforcement purpose"); Pub. Emps. for Env’t Resp., 740 F.3d at 203-04 (finding that prevention of terror attacks is valid preventative law enforcement purpose (quoting Milner, 562 U.S. at 582-83), Alito, J., concurring)); Behar v. DHS, 403 F. Supp. 3d 240, 248 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) (concluding that records compiled by Secret Service as part of protective duties "satisfied" threshold); Allen v. BOP, No. 16-0708, 2019 WL 498864, at *5 (D.D.C. Feb. 8, 2019) (explaining that "BOP engages in a law enforcement function when it takes steps to detect or prevent criminal conduct by an inmate"); Pinson v. DOJ, 313 F. Supp. 3d 88, 114 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding threshold met for records concerning how BOP "monitors and maintains the health and safety of its inmates and staff"); reconsideration denied by 396 F. Supp. 3d 66 (2019); ACLU v. DOJ, No. 11-2553, 2012 WL 4660515, at *8, *10 (D.N.J. Oct. 2, 2012) (finding that maps of New Jersey, "used as a tool by special agents to pinpoint areas of concern, by analysts to establish areas of focus and by the field office to allocate resources" to gather intelligence necessary to prevent crime and terrorist activity by extremist groups, satisfy law enforcement threshold); Vazquez, 887 F.2d at 117 (explaining that National Crime
Additionally, courts have found the threshold satisfied for non-investigatory records provided they involve a law enforcement purpose,\textsuperscript{30} such as law enforcement Information Center’s databases store information to support law enforcement, to warn of potential danger, and to promote exchange of information, and thus are "compiled for law enforcement purposes"); \textit{Banks v. DOJ,} 757 F. Supp. 2d 13, 17 (D.D.C. 2010) (stating that BOP's mission includes protecting society and victims; thus, "records compiled in order to effect notice to crime victims" are compiled for law enforcement purpose); \textit{Thomas v. DOJ,} No. 04-112, 2006 WL 722141, at *2 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 15, 2006) (reiterating that inmate telephone calls are monitored "to preserve the security of the institution and to protect the public" and that recordings thus satisfy law enforcement requirement), aff'd, 260 F. App'x 677 (5th Cir. 2007); \textit{Pendergrass v. DOJ,} No. 04-112, 2005 WL 1378724, at *4 (D.D.C. June 7, 2005) (explaining that prisons monitor and record telephone calls in order "to preserve the security and orderly management of the institution and to protect the public"; consequently, recordings are "functional equivalent of law enforcement records"); see also \textit{Milner,} 562 U.S. at 582 (Alito, J., concurring) (explaining that "law enforcement includes not just the investigation and prosecution of offenses that have already been committed, but also proactive steps designed to prevent criminal activity and to maintain security").

\textsuperscript{30} See, e.g., \textit{Karantsalis v. DOJ,} 635 F.3d 497, 502 (11th Cir. 2011) (explaining that "it is clear the booking photographs were compiled for law enforcement purposes" because Marshals Service is "tasked" with receipt, processing, and transportation of prisoners, and photographs "were taken pursuant to this duty"); \textit{Wash. Post Co. v. Special Inspector Gen. for Afg. Reconstr.,} No. 18-2622, 2020 WL 5530308, at *11 (D.D.C. Sept. 15, 2020) (finding that while information-gathering program of law enforcement agency was "not necessarily operating in pursuit of a criminal investigation," threshold was met as program did "help serve the law enforcement goals of the agency as a whole"); \textit{Sluss v. DOJ,} No. 17-00064, 2019 WL 2493447, at *6 (D.D.C. June 14, 2019) (concluding that records concerning international prisoner transfer request met threshold as "determinations concerning an individual offender's rehabilitation and reintegration into society, which includes weighing public safety. . . . fall within the heartland of law enforcement duties and responsibilities"); \textit{Griffin v. EOUA,} 774 F. Supp. 2d 322, 326 (D.D.C. 2011) (finding "Individual Custody/Detention Report" satisfies threshold because it was compiled to assist Marshals Service in carrying out its responsibilities for execution of federal arrest warrants, housing, transportation, and safekeeping of federal prisoners); see also Attorney General’s 1986 Amendments Memorandum.
manuals, but have denied protection when the agency failed to establish a sufficient connection between the records and any law enforcement function.

Furthermore, while courts grant agencies wide latitude in defining their law enforcement purposes, they have denied protection under Exemption 7 when the agency did not adequately demonstrate that the records were compiled as part of the agencies' stated law enforcement purposes and duties; or the records existed independently of the 31 See Tax Analysts v. IRS, 294 F.3d 71, 79 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (explaining that "legislative history makes it clear that Congress intended the amended exemption to protect both investigatory and non-investigatory materials, including law enforcement manuals and the like"); see also PHE, Inc. v. DOJ, 983 F.2d 248, 249, 251 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (holding portions of FBI’s Manual of Investigative Operations and Guidelines properly withheld pursuant to Exemption 7(E)); Sussman v. U.S. Marshals Serv., No. 03-610, 2005 WL 3213912, at *9 (D.D.C. Oct. 13, 2005) (finding that "administrative and operational guidelines and procedures" that are used to investigate threats against federal court employees satisfy law enforcement requirement), motion for summary affirmance granted in pertinent part, 494 F.3d 1106 (D.C. Cir. 2007); Church of Scientology Int’l v. IRS, 845 F. Supp. 714, 723 (C.D. Cal. 1993) (concluding that parts of IRS Law Enforcement Manual were exempt from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 7(E)).

---

32 See, e.g., Bartko v. DOJ, 808 F.3d 51, 66 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (rejecting assertion that internal employee discipline records were compiled for law enforcement purpose as responsibilities of agency lay closer to "internal agency monitoring' end of the spectrum" and remanding to determine if Exemption 6 applies); Am. Ctr. for L. & Just. v. DOJ, 334 F. Supp. 3d 13, 19 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding that FBI failed to connect email discussing scheduling of meeting with law enforcement purpose), appeal dismissed, No. 18-5309, 2019 WL 10892222 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 8, 2019); Pubian v. EOUSA, No. 18-172, 2018 WL 5923917, at *4 (D.D.C. Nov. 13, 2018) (concluding "it strains credulity to suggest that the information compiled about grand-jury dates over a decade after it was impaneled and discharged created in response to FOIA request" was compiled for law enforcement purpose); ACLU v. DOE, 320 F. Supp. 3d 270, 276-77 (D. Mass. 2018) (rejecting argument that attempt to collect student loan debt is law enforcement activity as default borrower cannot be penalized criminally or civilly); Henderson v. DOJ, 157 F. Supp. 3d 42, 49-50 (D.D.C. 2016) (denying Exemption 7 protection to stenographic expense records related to criminal case because connection of such records to any law enforcement purpose "is highly attenuated"); Kubik v. BOP, No. 10-6078, 2011 WL 2619538, at *10 (D. Or. July 1, 2011) (explaining that because BOP failed to connect records of inmate’s "transfer, his behavior issues and the riot" to violations of law, these documents were not created for law enforcement purpose); Raher v. BOP, No. 09-526, 2011 WL 2014875, at *9 (D. Or. May 24, 2011) (finding that although disclosure of information pertaining to security electronics, security inspection system and staffing vulnerabilities raise security concerns with respect to BOP’s custodial functions, agency had not explained how withheld documents pertain to law enforcement functions); Maydak v. DOJ, 254 F. Supp. 2d 23, 38 (D.D.C. 2003) (finding that BOP failed to satisfy law enforcement threshold for records in its Inmate Central Records System, which it described as concerning day-to-day activities and events occurring during inmates' confinement).

33 See, e.g., Pratt v. Webster, 673 F.2d 408, 420-21 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (reiterating that Exemption 7 is not intended to "include investigatory activities wholly unrelated to law enforcement agencies’ legislated functions of preventing risks to the national security and violations of the criminal laws and of apprehending those who do violate the laws”); Knight First Amendment Inst. at Columbia Univ. v. DHS, 407 F. Supp. 3d 334, 351-52 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) (finding threshold not met as agency's "descriptions suggest the withheld information was compiled less for law enforcement purposes and more to facilitate the 'generalized snooping of individuals' lives'") (quoting Long v. ICE, 149 F. Supp. 3d 39, 50 (D.D.C. 2015)), reconsideration denied sub nom. Knight First Amendment Inst. at Columbia Univ. v. DHS, No. 17-7572, 2020 WL 5512540 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2020) (appeal pending); Am. Ctr. for L. & Just., 334 F. Supp. 3d at 18 (concluding that agency failed to meet "burden of making a connection between the email and an enforcement proceeding"), appeal dismissed, No. 18-5309, 2019 WL 10892222 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 8, 2019); ACLU, 320 F. Supp. 3d at 277 (concluding that "debt collection activities fall outside the scope of" Exemption 7); N.Y. Legal Assistance Grp. v. Dep’t of Educ., No. 15-3818, 2017 WL 2973976, at *9 (S.D.N.Y. July 12, 2017) (determining that records concerning agency efforts to prevent violations of terms of student loan contracts were not compiled for law enforcement purposes because student loan defaults constitute breach of contract rather than violation of law); Henderson, 157 F. Supp. 3d at 49-50 (finding that while stenographic expense records related to plaintiff's criminal prosecution, the connection to any law enforcement purpose is "highly attenuated" and did not satisfy Exemption 7 threshold); Rosenfeld v. DOJ, No. 07-3240, 2012 WL 710186, at *3-4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 5, 2012) (finding that agency's assertion that document generated in 1975 shows subject’s connection to Communist Party is "wholly unbelievable" and "does not constitute a sufficient law enforcement purpose"); Grandison v. DOJ, 600 F. Supp. 2d 103, 113 (D.D.C. 2009) (rejecting agency’s attempt to tie deposition transcripts and interrogatories pertaining to current Federal Torts Claim Act lawsuit to underlying murder conviction; stating that information pertaining to tort claim was not "compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Cawthon v. DOJ, No. 05-0567, 2006 WL 581250, at *4 (D.D.C. Mar. 9, 2006) (explaining that malpractice records for two BOP doctors "appear to come from personnel records" and therefore do not meet Exemption 7’s law enforcement threshold); Leadership Conference on C.R. v. Gonzales, 404 F. Supp. 2d 246, 257 (D.D.C. 2005) (finding "no evidence that the paralegal names and work numbers appearing in communications related to monitoring federal elections were "compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Maydak v. DOJ, 362 F. Supp. 2d 316, 321-23 (D.D.C. 2005) (concluding that psychological test maintained in BOP files, documents pertaining to accidents and injuries sustained in recreation department at prison, law library logs and list of staff names and titles of prison employees were not compiled for law enforcement purposes); Phillips v. ICE, 385 F. Supp. 2d 296, 306 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (finding law enforcement requirement not met for report involving immigration status of two former military officials from El Salvador accused of atrocities, because report "was prepared for Congress"); Taylor v. DOJ, 257 F. Supp. 2d 101, 108 (D.D.C. 2003) (reiterating that investigations must be "within the agency's law enforcement authority" (quoting Whittle v. Moschella, 756 F. Supp. 589, 593 (D.D.C. 1991))).
stated law enforcement purpose;\textsuperscript{34} or the connection to law enforcement was pretextual;\textsuperscript{35} or the associated investigation was conducted for an improper purpose.\textsuperscript{36} Accordingly,

\textsuperscript{34} See, e.g., Lardner \textit{v. DOJ}, No. 09-5337, 398 F. App’x 609, 611 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (discussing that there is "a distinction between the list of the names of persons denied a pardon or commutation of sentence" and records compiled as part of Office of the Pardon Attorney’s investigation, and finding that list of names "exists independently" and is "unrelated to any law enforcement investigation"); Shapiro \textit{v. DOJ}, 153 F. Supp. 3d 253, 272 (D.D.C. 2016) (rejecting FBI’s reliance on Exemption 7 threshold to encompass entirety of large number of FOIA request search slips because while search slips often contain law enforcement information, they are compiled for FOIA request processing purposes rather than for law enforcement purposes, and thereby do not always contain law enforcement information).

\textsuperscript{35} See ACLU of N. Cal. \textit{v. FBI}, 881 F.3d 776, 779 (9th Cir. 2018) (observing that Ninth Circuit precedents "rest on the premise" that Exemption 7 cannot be used as pretext to protect records unrelated to agency’s law enforcement duties); Quinon \textit{v. FBI}, 86 F.3d 1222, 1228-29 (D.C. Cir. 1996) (explaining that agency’s connection between target and asserted law enforcement duty cannot be pretextual or wholly unbelievable); Rosenfeld \textit{v. DOJ}, 57 F.3d 803, 808-09 (9th Cir. 1995) (finding no law enforcement purpose when "documents all support a conclusion that . . . any asserted purpose for compiling these documents was pretextual"); Samahon \textit{v. FBI}, 40 F. Supp. 3d 498, 524-25 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (noting that Third Circuit requires nexus between records and "legitimate law enforcement concern" to differentiate between investigations predicated upon legitimate security concerns or suspected criminal conduct, and investigations conducted for pretextual purposes).

\textsuperscript{36} See, e.g., Shaw \textit{v. FBI}, 749 F.2d 58, 63 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (stating that "mere existence of a plausible criminal investigatory reason to investigate would not protect the files of an inquiry explicitly conducted . . . for purposes of harassment"); Weissman \textit{v. CIA}, 565 F.2d 692, 696 (D.C. Cir. 1977) (ruling that CIA’s actions were unauthorized; thus, "law-enforcement exemption is accordingly unavailable"); Samahon, 40 F. Supp. 3d at 524-25 (rejecting Exemption 7 protection for records regarding FBI investigation of private citizen because investigation was conducted as personal favor to President Johnson rather than out of legitimate concern for President’s safety); Rosenfeld, 2010 WL 3448517, at *10 (explaining that while investigation of specific individuals who advocated violent overthrow of government might be conducted for legitimate law enforcement purpose, investigation of mere association with Communist Party is not for legitimate law enforcement purpose); Rosenfeld \textit{v. DOJ}, 761 F. Supp. 1440, 1445-48 (N.D. Cal. 1991) (explaining that FBI investigation of Free Speech Movement "was begun in good faith and with a plausible basis," but ceased to have "colorable claim [of rationality] as the evidence accumulated" and became "a case of routine monitoring . . . for intelligence purposes"); holding that date at which FBI’s initial law enforcement-related suspicions were "demonstrably unfounded" was "cut-off point for the scope of a law enforcement purpose" under Exemption 7), aff’d in pertinent part, rev’d in part & remanded, 57 F.3d 803 (9th Cir. 1995); cf. Clemente \textit{v. FBI}, 867 F.3d 111, 120 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (observing that even if government records were provided to informant to allow him to engage in illegal activities, those records could still have been compiled for law enforcement purposes); Carter, Fullerton & Hayes \textit{v. FTC}, 637 F. Supp. 2d 1, 9 (D.D.C. 2009) (stating that contrary to assertion that investigation was not within agency’s authority, FTC courts require some detail as to the law enforcement purpose behind the compilation of the requested records. Finally, there is no requirement that the matter culminate in actual administrative, civil or criminal enforcement.

Standards for Demonstrating Law Enforcement Threshold Met

When determining whether a record was "compiled for law enforcement purposes" under Exemption 7, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has generally distinguished between agencies which have as their principal function the enforcement of 37 See, e.g., Am. Ctr. for L. & Just., 334 F. Supp. 3d at 18-19 (finding insufficient broad statements not connecting records with specific enforcement proceedings); Parker v. EOUSA, 852 F. Supp. 2d 1, 11 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that to satisfy threshold agency "must actually provide evidence" that records were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Raher, 2011 WL 2014875, at *10 (stating that agency "has submitted nothing to explain why withheld documents pertain to law enforcement functions"); Schoenman v. FBI, 575 F. Supp. 2d 136, 162 (D.D.C. 2008) (finding that mere statement that agency document "inherently relates to a law enforcement purpose will not suffice"); Miller v. DOJ, 562 F. Supp. 2d 82, 118 (D.D.C. 2008) (finding that agency "neither explains adequately the manner and circumstances under which the telegrams were compiled nor links these telegrams to any enforcement proceeding"); United Am. Fin. v. Potter, 531 F. Supp. 2d 29, 45-46 (D.D.C. 2008) (describing agency’s explanation as "fall[ing] far short of establishing" that records were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Antonelli v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms & Explosives, No. 04-1180, 2006 WL 3147675, at *1 (D.D.C. Nov. 1, 2006) (explaining that although records pertained to bombing of residence, initially BOP proffered no evidence from which the Court could find for them on threshold requirement; however, subsequent BOP submissions established that record was compiled as part of investigation into prisoner's escape plans, satisfying law enforcement threshold).

38 See, e.g., Jordan v. DOJ, 668 F.3d 1188, 1193 (10th Cir. 2011) (explaining that FOIA "statute refers to 'law enforcement purposes,' not 'law enforcement proceedings,' and it does not mention anything about enforcing a sanction" except Exemption 7(A) "which describes one of the six possible harms to law enforcement purposes, [thus n]o 'enforcement proceeding' is necessary 'to satisfy the law enforcement purpose criterion'" (quoting Pratt, 673 F.2d at 421)); Ortiz v. HHS, 70 F.3d 729, 730 (2d Cir. 1995) (holding that unsigned, unsolicited letter used to launch criminal investigation by SSA meets threshold for law enforcement purposes, although no charges filed against target); Ctr. for Nat'l Pol'y Rev. on Race & Urban Issues v. Weinberger, 502 F.2d 370, 373 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (explaining that likelihood of "adjudication is not the decisive determinant of whether a file has been compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Nat’l Whistleblower Ctr. v. HHS, 849 F. Supp. 2d 13, 27-28 (D.D.C. 2012) ("It is of no moment that both investigations resulted in findings of no misconduct and that no sanctions were ultimately imposed by OIG."); Berger v. IRS, 487 F. Supp. 2d 482, 489, 500 (D.N.J. 2007) (finding that records compiled during IRS civil and criminal tax investigations satisfy threshold even though "[n]o charges were ever brought against Plaintiff as a result of these investigations"), aff’d on other grounds, 288 F. App’x 829 (3d Cir. 2008).
criminal law and those agencies which have both law enforcement and administrative functions.39

For those agencies whose principal function is criminal law enforcement, the D.C. Circuit has established a "less exacting" standard.40 The D.C. Circuit applies this "less exacting" standard by using a "rational nexus" test.41 This two-part threshold test, which was broadened by the 1986 FOIA amendments to include non-investigatory records,42 requires courts to determine (1) whether the agency's activities that give rise to the documents sought are related to the enforcement of federal laws or to the maintenance of national security; and (2) whether the nexus between the activities and one of the agency's law enforcement duties is based on information sufficient to support at least a colorable claim of rationality.43 The Third and Ninth Circuits also apply the rational nexus test to 39 See, e.g., Birch v. USPS, 803 F.2d 1206, 1209 (D.C. Cir. 1986) ("At the onset, it is important to distinguish an agency serving principally the cause of criminal law enforcement from one having [a mixture] of law enforcement and administrative functions."); Pratt, 673 F.2d at 416 (explaining that "[w]hile FOIA makes no distinction on its face between agencies whose principal function is criminal law enforcement and agencies with both law enforcement and administrative functions, it would be unnecessarily wooden to treat both groups identically"); cf. Raher, 2011 WL 2014875, at *8 (describing difference between law enforcement agency and mixed-function agency); Sakamoto v. EPA, 443 F. Supp. 2d 1182, 1194 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (noting difference between agencies with clear law enforcement mandate and agencies with mixed function as to requirements to establish law enforcement purpose).

40 Pratt, 673 F.2d at 418 (describing "less exacting judicial scrutiny" of criminal law enforcement agency).

41 Id.

42 See, e.g., Tax Analysts v. IRS, 294 F.3d 71, 79 (D.C. Cir. 2002) ("It is clear that, under the amended threshold of Exemption 7, an agency may seek to block the disclosure of internal agency materials relating to guidelines, techniques, sources, and procedures for law enforcement investigations and prosecutions, even when the materials have not been compiled in the course of a specific investigation."); Keys v. DOJ, 830 F.2d 337, 340 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (reaffirming usage of Pratt test in light of 1986 amendments, noting that "Pratt requires simply that the nexus between the agency's activity (under the old scheme, an 'investigation') and its law enforcement duties 'must be based on information sufficient to support at least "a colorable claim" of its rationality'.").

43 Pratt, 673 F.2d at 420-21; see, e.g., Blackwell v. FBI, 646 F.3d 37, 40 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (reiterating that to "show that the disputed documents were 'compiled for law enforcement purposes,' the FBI need only 'establish a rational nexus between the investigation and one of the agency's law enforcement duties and a connection between an individual or incident and a possible security risk or violation of federal law'" (quoting Campbell v. DOJ, 164 F.3d 20, 32 (D.C. Cir. 1998))); Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Stud. v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 926 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (holding that declarations must establish (1) rational nexus between investigation and one of agency's law enforcement duties and (2) connection between individual or incident and a possible security risk or violation of federal law); King v. DOJ, 830 F.2d 210, 229-30 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (stating that "agency must establish that its investigatory activities are law enforcement agencies to determine whether the records at issue meet Exemption 7's threshold. Both Circuits have specifically clarified the scope of the rational nexus test to reflect the 1986 FOIA Amendments.

Other circuits, by comparison, specifically the First, Second, and Eighth, apply an even more deferential standard for criminal law enforcement agencies by using a per se rule, which qualifies all "investigative" records of criminal law enforcement agencies for protection under Exemption 7. The Tenth Circuit has clarified that in light of the 1986 realistically based on a legitimate concern . . . and have a rational connection to the object of the agency's investigation'' (quoting Pratt, 673 F.2d at 421).

44 See, e.g., ACLU of N. Cal. v. FBI, 881 F.3d 776, 778 (9th Cir. 2018) (applying "rational nexus" test to FBI records while clarifying that this test does not require law enforcement agencies to connect such records to specific investigations or to enforcement of specific statutes); Rosenfeld v. DOJ, 57 F.3d 803, 808 (9th Cir. 1995) (explaining that because FBI has "clear law enforcement mandate," government "'need only establish a rational nexus between enforcement of a federal law and the document for which [a law enforcement] exemption is claimed'" (quoting Church of Scientology v. U.S. Dep't of Army, 611 F.2d 738, 748 (9th Cir. 1979))); Council on Am.-Islamic Rels. v. FBI, 749 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1117-18 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (reiterating that agencies with clear law enforcement purpose need only establish rational nexus between their law enforcement duties and document as they "need only be held to a minimal showing"); Gordon v. FBI, 388 F. Supp. 2d 1028, 1035 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (stating that FBI "'need only establish a rational nexus'" (quoting Rosenfeld, 57 F.3d at 808)).

45 See ACLU of N. Cal., 881 F.3d at 779-81 (noting that 1986 FOIA amendments were intended to resolve any doubt that Exemption 7 can encompass law enforcement manuals and other non-investigatory records); Abdelfattah v. DHS, 488 F.3d 178, 184-85 (3d Cir. 2007) (modifying Third Circuit's earlier standard by emphasizing that while 1986 FOIA amendments "broadened the applicability of Exemption 7 by expressly removing the requirement that the records be 'investigatory,' . . . amendments did not affect that portion of the Pratt test which requires a 'nexus'" and thus, use of modified "two-prong 'rational nexus' test" is proper); see also Samahon v. FBI, 40 F. Supp. 3d 498, 522 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (observing that to satisfy Exemption 7 threshold, agency must demonstrate rational nexus between records and "legitimate law enforcement concern"); Finkel v. U.S. Dep't of Lab., No. 05-5525, 2007 WL 1963163, at *10 (D.N.J. June 29, 2007) (explaining that while Third Circuit clarified rational nexus test to reflect 1986 FOIA amendments, agency must still demonstrate that relationship between its authority to enforce statute or regulation and activity giving rise to requested documents is based upon information sufficient to support at least colorable claim of rationality).

46 See First Circuit: Curran v. DOJ, 813 F.2d 473, 475 (1st Cir. 1987) (holding that investigatory records of law enforcement agencies are "inherently" compiled for law enforcement purposes); Irons v. Bell, 596 F.2d 468, 474-76 (1st Cir. 1979) (holding that "investigatory records of law enforcement agencies are inherently records compiled for 'law enforcement purposes' within the meaning of Exemption 7"); Second Circuit: Halpern v. FBI, 181 F.3d 279, 296 (2d Cir. 1999) (applying rule that when records are compiled in course of law enforcement investigation, purpose of investigation is not subject to review by court); Ferguson v. FBI, 957 F.2d 1059, 1070 (2d Cir. 1992) (finding that there is "no room for [a]
Amendments, the per se standard applies to both investigatory and non-investigatory records compiled by an agency whose primary function is law enforcement. The Sixth Circuit appears to have adopted that approach as well. Notably, despite the Second Circuit's endorsement of the per se standard, in several recent decisions, the District Court for the Southern District of New York has applied a standard that appears to more district court's inquiry into whether the FBI's asserted law enforcement purpose was legitimate); Peltier v. FBI, No. 03-905S, 2005 WL 735964, at *14 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2005) (explaining that "legitimacy of the investigation is immaterial [because] the rule in this Circuit is that the Government need only show that the records were compiled by a law enforcement agency in the course of a criminal investigation"); Eighth Circuit: Kuehnert v. FBI, 620 F.2d 662, 666 (8th Cir. 1980) (discussing and applying per se standard of First Circuit to determine that FBI need not show law enforcement purpose of particular investigation as precondition to invoking Exemption 7).

47 Jordan v. DOJ, 668 F.3d 1188, 1197 (10th Cir. 2011) (concluding that "the per se rule is the proper approach," and adding that "although the development of the per se rule was based, at least in part, on Exemption 7's former use of the term 'investigatory records,' the deletion of the word 'investigatory' from the statute in 1986 broadened the scope of the exemption"); see also Living Rivers, Inc. v. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, 272 F. Supp. 2d 1313, 1319 (D. Utah 2003) (noting that "standard for establishing a law enforcement purpose" is "lower [for per se law enforcement agency] than it is for . . . mixed-function agency").

48 See Rugiero v. DOJ, 257 F.3d 534, 550 (6th Cir. 2001) ("This court has adopted a per se rule under which any documents compiled by a law enforcement agency fall within the first part of the section 552(b)(7)."); see also Detroit Free Press, Inc. v. DOJ, 73 F.3d 93, 96 (6th Cir. 1996) (holding that "mug shots" are created for law enforcement purpose, and applying per se rule adopted previously in Sixth Circuit), overruled on other grounds by Detroit Free Press, Inc. v. DOJ, 829 F.3d 478 (6th Cir. 2016); Jones v. FBI, 41 F.3d 238, 245 (6th Cir. 1994) (noting that First, Second, and Eighth Circuits have adopted per se rule and then adopting it in Sixth Circuit by explaining that "per se rule comports more fully with the policies Congress enacted in FOIA" and "concern about overbroad withholding should . . . be addressed by proper scrutiny of the claimed exemptions").
closely align with the rational nexus test. The Eleventh Circuit has so far declined to expressly adopt either test.

By contrast, courts have held that an agency whose functions are "mixed" has a higher standard to satisfy in that it has to show that the records at issue involved the 49 See, e.g., Freedom of Press Found. v. DOJ, No. 17-9343, 2020 WL 5992282, at *10 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 9, 2020) (reviewing applicability of FBI's Exemption (7)(E) withholdings under rational nexus test); Gonzalez v. USCIS, 475 F. Supp. 3d 334, 350 (S.D.N.Y. 2020) (finding law enforcement agencies met threshold under rational nexus test); Behar v. DHS, 403 F. Supp. 3d 240, 247-48 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) (reviewing declaration submitted by Secret Service under rational nexus test); Knight First Amendment Inst. at Columbia Univ. v. DHS, 407 F. Supp. 3d 334, 350-51 (S.D.N.Y. 2019) (explaining that "just because ICE is the Executive Branch's designated immigration enforcement arm does not mean ICE compiles all its documents for law enforcement purposes," and finding that "the Court is unaware of the rational nexus ICE attempts to make between a memo regarding social media practices and the perceived threats of immigration"), reconsideration denied sub nom. No. 17-7572, 2020 WL 5512540 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2020) (appeal pending); Brennan Ctr. for Just. at N.Y. Univ. Sch. of Law v. DHS, 331 F. Supp. 3d 74, 97 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) (noting that because "an agency must establish a rational nexus between the agency's activity in compiling the documents and its law enforcement duties[. . . .] from this premise, it follows a fortiori that information may hold a rational nexus to law enforcement even though it does not relate to a particular investigation or prosecution"); N.Y. Times Co. v. DOJ, No. 14-03776, 2016 WL 5946711, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 18, 2016) (finding report on counterterrorism investigation properly withheld as "[i]nformation is compiled for law enforcement purposes where the 'withheld record has a rational nexus to the agency's law-enforcement duties, including the prevention of terrorism and unlawful immigration'") (citing Bishop v. DHS, 45 F. Supp. 3d 380, 387 (S.D.N.Y. 2014)).

---

50 See Arenberg v. DEA, 849 F.2d 579, 581 (11th Cir. 1988) (declining to adopt either per se or rational nexus test, but suggesting that courts should be "hesitant" to reexamine law enforcement agency's decision to investigate if there is plausible basis for agency's decision). But see Van Bilderbeek v. DOJ, No. 08-1931, 2010 WL 1049618, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 22, 2010) (stating that "[t]o establish a law enforcement purpose, [an agency's] declarations must establish (1) 'a rational nexus between the investigation and one of the agency's law enforcement duties;' and (2) 'a connection between an individual or incident and a possible security risk or violation of federal law'" (quoting Ctr. for Nat'l. Sec. Stud. v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 926 (D.C. Cir. 2003))), aff'd, 416 F. App'x 9 (11th Cir. 2011).

51 See, e.g., Tax Analysts v. IRS, 294 F.3d 71, 77 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (noting that IRS is "mixed-function agency, subject to an exacting standard when it comes to the threshold requirement of Exemption 7"); Pratt v. Webster, 673 F.2d 408, 416, 418 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (noting "more exacting scrutiny of Exemption 7 claims by agencies whose principal function is not law enforcement"); Raher v. BOP, No. 09-526, 2011 WL 2014875, at *7 (D. Or. May 24, 2011) (stating that agencies having mixed function have higher standard); United Am. Fin. v. Potter, 531 F. Supp. 2d 29, 46 (D.D.C. 2008) (explaining that "this Circuit's admonition mandates that courts give thoughtful consideration to whether mixed-function agencies satisfy law enforcement purpose); Move, O'Brien, O'Rourke, Hogan & Pickert v. Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp., No. 02-126, 2003 WL 21146674, at *17 (M.D. Fla. May 13, 2003) (reiterating that enforcement of a statute or regulation within its authority and that the records were compiled for law enforcement purposes.52 However, at times courts have found that such a law enforcement purpose is apparent from the circumstances surrounding the documents at issue.53 agency "with mixed law enforcement and non-law enforcement functions requires the Court to consider the purpose of the investigation and to determine whether the information was gathered as part of an inquiry about a potential violation of the law, rather than in the course of the agency's administrative function of overseeing compliance with its rules and regulations"), rev'd and remanded on other grounds, 376 F.3d 1270 (11th Cir. 2004).

52 See, e.g., Cooper Cameron Corp. v. Dep't of Lab., 280 F.3d 539, 545 (5th Cir. 2002) (finding that because OSHA acted pursuant to its statutory mandate to inspect workplaces, question employees, and cite employers regarding safety and health regulations, records were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Lewis v. IRS, 823 F.2d 375, 379 (9th Cir. 1987) (holding that threshold met when the IRS "had a purpose falling within its sphere of enforcement authority in compiling particular documents"); Birch v. USPS, 803 F.2d 1206, 1210-11 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (explaining that threshold was met because "Postal Service has statutory authority to investigate and enforce laws regarding use of mails and other postal matters"); Ameren Mo. v. EPA, 897 F. Supp. 2d 802, 813 (E.D. Mo. 2012) (finding data and calculations from power plant emissions were compiled for law enforcement purpose because agency has "statutory responsibility" under Clean Air Act for "enforcement of those laws and regulations"); Am. Ctr. for L. & Just. v. DOJ, 334 F. Supp. 3d 13, 18 (D.D.C. 2018) (concluding that agency failed to "make a specific statement" as to law enforcement purpose behind record, nor was one "obvious from the face" of document), appeal dismissed, No. 18-5309, 2019 WL 10892222 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 8, 2019); Laws.' Comm. for C.R. v. U.S. Dep't of the Treasury, No. 07-2590, 2008 WL 4482855, at *11 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2008) (finding threshold satisfied when agency's purpose for compiling petitions filed by individuals acknowledging and possibly challenging placement on Specially Designated Nationals list "is in conjunction with the administration of its sanction-based list programs"); Stanley v. U.S. Dep't of the Treasury, No. 06-072, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49737, at *8-9 (N.D. Ind. July 9, 2007) (finding threshold satisfied because "records arose from an investigation related to the enforcement of the tax laws, and the investigation was part and parcel of [agency's] law enforcement duties"); Finkel v. U.S. Dep't of Lab., No. 05-5525, 2007 WL 1963163, at *10 (D.N.J. June 29, 2007) (finding records were compiled for law enforcement purpose "because they were collected in the course of OSHA acting pursuant to its statutory authority" to inspect, question, and cite businesses regarding safety and health regulations"); L.A. Times v. Dep't of the Army, 442 F. Supp. 2d 880, 898 (C.D. Cal. 2006) (explaining that mixed-function agency must demonstrate purpose falling within its sphere of enforcement authority in compiling records).

53 See Houser v. Church, No. 16-1142, 2020 WL 5518214, at *14 (D.D.C. Sept. 14, 2020) (noting that "[a]lthough the IRS's supporting declarations devote no appreciable attention to the agency's law enforcement functions, it is apparent from the plaintiff's criminal convictions, the language of the plaintiff's FOIA request, and the nature of responsive records sought by the plaintiff that the IRS was engaged in law enforcement activities" when conducting its investigation); McRae v. DOJ, 869 F. Supp. 2d 151, 164 (D.D.C. 2012) (finding law enforcement purpose "apparent from plain language of plaintiff's FOIA requests and his criminal history" despite agency failing to "affirmatively link[] the relevant Further, the D.C. Circuit has explained that the standard in "this circuit has long emphasized that the focus is on how and under what circumstances the requested files were compiled" and whether the records relate to anything that can fairly be characterized as an enforcement proceeding, adding that if the activity "is for a possible violation of law, then the inquiry is for law enforcement purposes." Thus, the phrase "law enforcement purpose" has been interpreted broadly by courts in assessing whether records compiled by agencies with mixed functions satisfy Exemption 7’s threshold, especially, for example, when records are used by mixed-function agencies in furtherance of their duties to prevent violence and safeguard the public.

records and an investigation of plaintiff’s activities" to its law enforcement authority”); see also Abdeljabbar v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms, 74 F. Supp. 3d 158, 178 (D.D.C. 2014) (finding that "[i]n light of the substance of the plaintiff’s FOIA request, demanding 'all investigative material' regarding his prosecution" agency sufficiently demonstrated rational nexus existed); Roberts v. FBI, 845 F. Supp. 2d 96, 103 (D.D.C. 2012) ("It is apparent from the nature of plaintiff’s FOIA request that the information he seeks was compiled for law enforcement purposes, namely, the criminal prosecution of plaintiff.").

54 Jefferson v. DOJ, 284 F.3d 172, 176-77 (D.C. Cir. 2002); see also, e.g., Miller v. DOJ, 872 F. Supp. 2d 12, 24-25 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that focus is on circumstances of compilation and whether records relate to enforcement proceeding (citing Jefferson 284 F.3d at 176-77)); Rural Hous. All. v. USDA, 498 F.2d 73, 82 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (explaining that purpose of investigatory files is critical factor in establishing law enforcement threshold); Pub. Emps. for Env’t Resp. v. U.S. Sec’y, Int’l Boundary & Water Comm’n, 839 F. Supp. 2d 304, 324 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that in "assessing whether records were compiled for law enforcement purposes, the 'focus is on how and under what circumstances the requested files were compiled, and whether the files sought relate to anything that can fairly be characterized as an enforcement proceeding'" (quoting Jefferson, 284 F.3d at 176-77)), aff’d in pertinent part & rev’d on other grounds, 740 F.3d 195 (D.C. Cir. 2014).

55 See, e.g., Miller, 872 F. Supp. 2d at 24-25 (finding State Department records satisfy law enforcement threshold because records were created to facilitate agency’s extradition of fugitive felon wanted in investigation for violent crimes); Pub. Emps. for Env’t Resp., 839 F. Supp. 2d at 311, 324-26 (explaining that mixed-function agency is responsible for "boundary and water treaties" as well as federal programs, policies, and guidelines on dam safety, and finding that emergency action plans and inundation maps were compiled for law enforcement purposes given potential for threats against dams, "harm to public safety," and agency’s activities related to dam safety), aff’d in pertinent part & rev’d on other grounds, 740 F.3d 195 (D.C. Cir. 2014); Ruston v. DOJ, No. 06-0224, 2007 WL 809698, at *4 (D.D.C. Mar. 15, 2007) (finding that psychological evaluations were compiled for law enforcement purposes because prison staff "used those records" to determine inmate’s competency to stand trial for threatening federal official); L.A. Times, 442 F. Supp. 2d at 898 (stating that mixed-function component’s database falls within cognizable law enforcement mandate because it was compiled to "improve intelligence information that will enhance security" in Iraq); Living Rivers, Inc. v. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, 272 F. Supp. 2d 1313, 1318-20 (D. Utah 2003) (explaining that while standard for establishing law enforcement purpose is high for mixed-function agency, here, inundation maps were directly related to agency’s statutory mandate
"Background security investigations by governmental units which have authority to conduct such functions" have been held by the courts to meet the threshold test under Exemption 7. Further, personnel investigations of government employees have also been found to have been compiled for law enforcement purposes if they focus on "specific and potentially unlawful activity by particular employees" of a civil or criminal nature.

57 See, e.g., Sack v. DOD, 823 F.3d 687, 694 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (finding that records concerning government's use of polygraphs for background investigations are compiled for law enforcement purposes); Morley v. CIA, 508 F.3d 1108, 1128-29 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (determining that "[b]ackground investigations conducted to assess an applicant’s qualification . . . inherently relate to law enforcement"); Mittleman v. OPM, 76 F.3d 1240, 1241-43 (D.C. Cir. 1996) (finding OPM background investigation satisfied threshold); Rosenfeld v. DOJ, 57 F.3d 803, 809 (9th Cir. 1995) (declaring that "FBI government appointment investigations" satisfy threshold); Wolk v. United States, No. 04-832, 2005 WL 465382, at *4 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2005) (concluding that "enforcement" encompasses conducting a "security background check" by reasoning that "'enforcement of the law fairly includes not merely the detection and punishment of violations of law but their prevention'" (quoting Miller v. United States, 630 F. Supp. 347, 349 (E.D.N.Y. 1986))).

58 Stern v. FBI, 737 F.2d 84, 89 (D.C. Cir. 1984); see, e.g., Perlman v. DOJ, 312 F.3d 100, 105 (2d Cir. 2002) (finding investigation into allegations of preferential treatment and undue access and influence in INS Investor Visa Program satisfied law enforcement threshold because inquiry focused on possible violations of law and whether particular employee committed acts that could subject that employee to criminal or civil penalties), cert. granted, vacated, and remanded on other grounds, 541 U.S. 970 (2004), aff’d, 380 F.3d 110 (2nd Cir. 2004); Kimberlin v. DOJ, 139 F.3d 944, 947-48 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (concluding that investigation "to discover" whether employee had violated "any law" satisfied threshold when it "focused upon a specific, potentially illegal release of information by a particular, identified official"); Strang v. U.S. Arms Control & Disarmament Agency, 864 F.2d 859, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (characterizing agency investigation into particular employee's violation of national security laws as law enforcement); Mueller v. Dep't of the Air Force, 63 F. Supp. 2d 738, 742 (E.D. Va. 1999) (holding that investigation into prosecutorial misconduct was for law enforcement purposes because "'agency investigation of its own employees is for law enforcement purposes . . . if it focuses directly on specifically alleged illegal acts, illegal acts of a particular identified official, acts which could, if proved, result in civil or criminal sanctions'" (quoting Stern, 737 F.2d at 89)); Hayes v. U.S. Dep’t of Lab., No. 96-1149, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14120, at *11-12 (S.D. Ala. June 19, 1998) (magistrate's recommendation) (explaining that records of "internal agency investigations are considered to be compiled for 'law enforcement purposes' when the investigations focus on specifically alleged acts, which,
Indeed, courts have stressed repeatedly the difference between the two general categories of files on employees that "government agencies compile: (1) files in connection with government oversight of the performance of duties by agency employees, and (2) files in connection with investigations that focus directly on specific alleged illegal acts which could result in civil or criminal sanction."\(^{59}\) Thus, the law enforcement threshold of Exemption 7 has been found to be satisfied when agencies demonstrate that they are focusing on an alleged illegal act,\(^{60}\) rather than merely supervising their \(^{59}\) Jefferson, 284 F.3d at 176-77 (citing Rural Hous. All. v. USDA, 498 F.2d 73, 81 (D.C. Cir. 1974)); see, e.g., Bartko v. DOJ, 898 F.3d 51, 66 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (noting absence of an evidentiary record produced by OPR to support a finding that all OPR records regarding [an] AUSA are law enforcement records" and finding threshold not met when no showing that investigations could result in civil or criminal penalties (quoting Jefferson, 284 F.3d at 179)); Patterson v. IRS, 56 F.3d 832, 837-38 (7th Cir. 1995) (declaring that agency must "distinguish between internal investigations conducted for law enforcement purposes and general agency monitoring" (quoting Stern, 737 F.2d at 89)); Stern, 737 F.2d at 89 (dictum) (repeating that "it is necessary to distinguish between those investigations conducted 'for a law enforcement purpose' and those in which an agency, acting as the employer, simply supervises its own employees"); Rural Hous. All., 498 F.2d at 81 (distinguishing between agency oversight of performance of employees and investigations focusing on specific illegal acts of employees); Nat'l Whistleblower Ctr. v. HHS, 849 F. Supp. 2d 13, 27-28 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that because records at issue "were compiled to investigate allegations that specific individuals at FDA had engaged in specific acts that could constitute violations of criminal and civil laws," rather than "a case involving personnel files maintained in the ordinary course of monitoring employees' performance," that records were compiled for law enforcement purposes); MacLean v. U.S. Dep't of the Army, No. 05-1519, 2007 WL 935604, at *8 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 6, 2007) (explaining critical distinction between investigation of particular employee for particular violation of law and customary surveillance of performance of duties); Fine v. DOE, 823 F. Supp. 888, 907-08 (D.N.M. 1993) (explaining difference between investigation of specific allegations that could result in sanctions and routine oversight).

---

\(^{60}\) See, e.g., Clemente v. FBI, 867 F.3d 111, 120 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (rejecting claim that FBI's observation of informant activities constituted mere monitoring of employee where FBI was using informant to investigate alleged illegal acts by criminal enterprise); Jefferson v. DOJ, 168 F. App’x 448, 449-50 (D.C. Cir. 2005) (affirming district court's ruling that law enforcement threshold is met by investigation concerning Department of Justice attorney accused of failing to comply with court order); Wonders v. McHugh, No. 111130, 2012 WL 3962750, at *5 (D.D.C. Sept. 11, 2012) (noting that investigation into ethical violation of misrepresentation "was not limited to determining whether there was a violation of an internal agency policy or regulation" but rather involved investigation that could have resulted in civil sanctions); Nat'l Whistleblower Ctr., 849 F. Supp. 2d at 27-28 (stating that records compiled to investigate allegations that specific employees wrongfully disclosed information satisfied law enforcement threshold); McCann v. HHS, 828 F. Supp. 2d 317, 323-24 (D.D.C. 2011) (stating that law enforcement requirement is met by investigation of health care provider for HIPAA violations); Gerstein v. CIA, No. 06-4643, 2011 WL 89337, at *2 employees for performance of their assigned duties, which does not satisfy Exemption 7’s threshold.61

(N.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2011) (finding that records compiled in OPR investigation into release of information by certain agency officials were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Williams v. Comm’r of Internal Revenue, No. 08-522, 2010 WL 5058505, at *2 (M.D. La. Dec. 3, 2010) (explaining that records compiled in response to allegations of misconduct regarding enforcement of tax laws by IRS employees are part of agency’s law enforcement duties and are thus compiled for law enforcement purposes), aff’d, 449 F. App’x 327 (5th Cir. 2011); Stanley v. Dep’t of Treasury, No. 06-072, 2007 WL 2025212, at *1, *3 (N.D. Ind. July 9, 2007) (finding that “records relating to the investigation of a complaint” against IRS employee for "fraud and intimidation" were compiled for law enforcement purposes because such records "arose from an investigation related to the enforcement of the tax laws, and [such] investigation[s are] part and parcel of [] law enforcement duties”); MacLean, 2007 WL 935604, at *8 (determining that "evidence is sufficient to show that the requested investigation-related documents did not arise from an 'internal audit' or 'customary surveillance' but instead arose from 'specifically alleged illegal acts’"; thus, information was compiled for law enforcement purposes (citing Kimberlin, 139 F.3d at 947-48)); O’Keefe v. DOD, 463 F. Supp. 2d 317, 320, 324 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) (finding that report detailing investigation of complaint alleging misconduct by commanding officers on multiple occasions was compiled for law enforcement purposes); Sakamoto v. EPA, 443 F. Supp. 2d 1182, 1194-96 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (finding that records compiled as part of internal investigation into complaints of discrimination made against specific agency employees were compiled for law enforcement purposes); Herrick’s Customs & Int’l Trade Newsl. v. U.S. Customs & Border Prot., No. 04-00377, 2006 WL 1826185, at *6 (D.D.C. June 30, 2006) (discussing law enforcement threshold for portion of government manual that concerns "employee oversight and internal affairs," and explaining that information at issue satisfies standard because it pertains to "tampering with and theft of evidence and illegal contraband," actions that "violate[] the law”); Trentadue v. Integrity Comm., No. 03-339, 2006 WL 1184636, at *5 (D. Utah May 2, 2006) (finding threshold met for documents prepared during investigation into allegations of misconduct by federal employees surrounding death of requester's brother), rev’d & remanded on other grounds, 501 F.3d 1215 (10th Cir. 2007); Dohse v. Potter, No. 04-355, 2006 WL 379901, at *1, *7 (D. Neb. Feb. 15, 2006) (ruling that investigation by U.S. Postal Service of independent contractor for "interpersonal conflicts," including "alleged threats to postal personnel," satisfies law enforcement threshold); Jud. Watch v. U.S. Dep’t of Com., 337 F. Supp. 2d 146, 179 (D.D.C. 2004) (finding that investigations of certain agency personnel for possible violations of campaign finance laws and trade mission improprieties qualify as law enforcement).

61 See, e.g., Bartko, 898 F.3d at 66 (concluding that investigations into employee disciplinary matters were not conducted with "an eye toward law-enforcement proceedings"); Parker v. EOUSA, 852 F. Supp. 2d 1, 11-12 (D.D.C. 2012) (explaining that records created by agency acting as employer and supervising its employees do not satisfy law enforcement threshold); Nat’l Whistleblower Ctr., 849 F. Supp. 2d at 27 (observing that personnel files maintained in ordinary course of monitoring employees' performances do not satisfy law enforcement threshold); Coleman v. Lappin, No. 06-2255, 2007 WL 1983835, at *3 (D.D.C. July 3, 2007) (stating that "nothing in the BOP’s motion and supporting documents establishes that the disciplinary records pertaining to a former BOP employee are law enforcement records"); Wood v. FBI, 312 F. Supp. 2d 328, 345 (D. Conn. 2004) (reiterating that "investigation
To meet the threshold, agencies must provide the court with sufficient detail as to the law enforcement purpose of their actions that gave rise to the documents.62

National Security and Law Enforcement Purpose

Courts have also recognized that "law enforcement" within the meaning of Exemption 7 can extend beyond the traditional realms of civil and criminal proceedings and into the realms of national security and homeland security-related government activities.63 For example, in 2003, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia conducted by a federal agency for the purpose of determining whether to discipline employees for activity which does not constitute a violation of law is not for law enforcement purposes under Exemption 7” (quoting Stern, 737 F.2d at 90), aff’d in part & rev’d in part on other grounds, 432 F.3d 78 (2d Cir. 2005); Varville v. Rubin, No. 96-00629, 1998 WL 681438, at *14 (D. Conn. Aug. 18, 1998) (explaining that threshold was not met by report discussing possible ethical violations and prohibited personnel practices because inquiry "more closely resembles an employer supervising its employees than an investigation for law enforcement purposes").

62 See Bartko, 898 F.3d at 66 (concluding that agency’s "bare-bones declaration" was not "even in the ballpark" of demonstrating threshold was met, and noting that agency "bears the burden of showing on a case-by-case basis that any requested records were actually compiled for law-enforcement, rather than employment-supervision purposes”); Parker, 852 F. Supp. 2d at 11 (explaining that in order to evaluate whether particular disciplinary records meet law enforcement threshold, agency "must actually provide evidence that the disciplinary investigation focused on illegal activity which could result in civil or criminal sanctions"); Cotton v. Adams, 798 F. Supp. 22, 25 (D.D.C. 1992) (stating that Court cannot infer law enforcement purpose); see also Patterson, 56 F.3d at 837-38 (stating that "it is not completely obvious" from IRS's "vague and unsubstantiated" explanation that its investigation of employee was for law enforcement purpose); Coleman v. Lappin, 535 F. Supp. 2d 96, 98 (D.D.C. 2008) (explaining that "vague and general references" to BOP Program Statement do not establish law enforcement purpose).

63 See, e.g., Milner v. Dep’t of the Navy, 562 U.S. 562, 582-83 (2011) (Alito, J., concurring) (explaining that steps "to prevent terrorism surely fulfill "law enforcement purposes"’"); Elec. Priv. Info. Ctr. v. DHS, 777 F.3d 518, 523 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (finding that protocol for shutdown of cellular networks during critical emergencies such as terror attacks was compiled for law enforcement purpose); Ctr. for Nat’l. Sec. Stud. v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 926 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (finding law enforcement threshold met for records compiled in course of investigation into "breach of this nation’s security"); Strang, 864 F.2d at 862 (explaining that law enforcement is not limited to criminal law enforcement; "rather, we read the term as encompassing the enforcement of national security laws as well"); Pratt v. Webster, 673 F.2d 408, 421 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (explaining that "to pass the FOIA Exemption 7 threshold," agencies must establish that activities are based on concern that "federal laws have been or may be violated or that national security may be breached"); Bloche v. DOD, 414 F. Supp. 3d 6, 33 (D.D.C. 2019) (finding that records concerning reevaluation of policies related to interrogation of detainees compiled by the Naval Criminal Investigative Service, whose mission "centers on matters of counterterrorism and national security," met threshold); Gordon v. FBI, 388 F. Supp. 2d
Circuit explained that the names of post-9/11 detainees found on documents that traditionally have been public were properly withheld because they were compiled for the law enforcement purpose of pursuing a "violation of federal law as well as a breach of national security." 64

1028, 1036 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (extending law enforcement threshold to include memoranda and e-mail messages created by FBI in its handling of various aviation "watch lists" created to "protect the American flying public from terrorists"); Coastal Delivery Corp. v. U.S. Customs Serv., 272 F. Supp. 2d 958, 960, 963 (C.D. Cal. 2003) (explaining that agency uses charts containing number of examinations performed at seaports to evaluate its border security responsibilities; thus, such information is compiled for law enforcement purpose and satisfies Exemption 7's threshold).

64 Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Stud., 331 F.3d at 929 ("While the name of any individual detainee may appear innocuous or trivial, it could be of great use to al Qaeda in plotting future terrorist attacks or intimidating witnesses in the present investigation."); see also Pub. Emps. for Env't Resp. v. U.S. Section, Int'l Boundary & Water Comm'n, U.S.-Mex., 740 F.3d 195, 203-04 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (finding that preventing terror attacks constitutes law enforcement purpose, and protecting emergency action plans and dam inundation maps); L.A. Times v. Dep't of the Army, 442 F. Supp. 2d 880, 898 (C.D. Cal. 2006) (ruling that incident reports from private security contractors in Iraq meet law enforcement threshold because purpose is to improve intelligence information, thus enhancing security); Living Rivers, Inc. v. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, 272 F. Supp. 2d 1313, 1319-21 (D. Utah 2003) (explaining that agency has "statutory law enforcement mandate" to maintain law and order and to protect persons and property; its use of "inundation maps" to carry out its mandate satisfies Exemption 7's threshold); Coastal Delivery. 272 F. Supp. 2d at 963-65 (finding law enforcement purpose because agency has mandate to protect commerce and borders, and noting that "[w]hile it is true that knowing the rate of examination at different ports may not be the best way to avoid detection when smuggling contraband," argument that "smugglers could not and would not use the information . . . is unpersuasive").