Rod, below is an excerpt from an email that Gene Porter (Crim Chief working group chair) sent to his group this evening. I thought you may be interested in his unsolicited observation:

In closing, I want to share a thought with all of you that has been permeating my mind for some time now. I'm not trying to be anything other than 100% sincere when I say this, but I am more enthusiastic about being part of DOJ now than ever before. Under this AG and DAG, and embodied in this AGAC, there is a commitment to collaboration, cooperation, and communication between Main Justice and the USAO community unlike anything I have ever seen. I see it. I suspect you may see it too. You may have wounds or scars from past encounters with Main Justice that you are holding onto. I get it. I am not without those myself. But I hope you believe me when I say that there is a real attempt being made to break down the old "us vs. them" approach. Our voice is being heard and welcomed. We have more opportunity for input than ever before. If that is a message that resonates with you, I hope you will share it with the people in your office and your circuit. It feels good to be seen as part of "the team" and I hope we continue to reflect grace, collaboration, cooperation, and communication in all our interactions with the folks we deal with at Main Justice
