Exemption 7(A)

Introduction

The first subpart of Exemption 7 of the Freedom of Information Act, Exemption 7(A), authorizes the withholding of "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that production of such law enforcement records or information . . . could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings."1 The Freedom of Information Reform Act of 1986, lessened the showing of harm originally required under this exemption from a demonstration that release "would interfere with" to a demonstration that release "could reasonably be expected to interfere with" enforcement proceedings.2 The courts have recognized repeatedly that the change in the language for this exemption effectively broadened its protection.3

Two-Part Test

---

3 See Manna v. DOJ, 51 F.3d 1158, 1164 n.5 (3d Cir. 1995) (stating that Congress amended statute to "relax significantly the standard for demonstrating interference"); Alyeska Pipeline Serv. v. EPA, 856 F.2d 309, 311 n.18 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (stating that lower court's reliance on pre-amendment version of Exemption 7(A) "does not impact upon [its] disposition" as it "required EPA to meet a higher standard than FOIA now demands"); Wright v. OSHA, 822 F.2d 642, 647 (7th Cir. 1987) (explaining that amended language creates broad protection); Curran v. DOJ, 813 F.2d 473, 474 n.1 (1st Cir. 1987) ("[T]he drift of the changes is to ease – rather than to increase – the government's burden in respect to Exemption 7(A)."); Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Wash. v. DOJ, 658 F. Supp. 2d 217, 225 (D.D.C. 2009) (noting that "Congress 'relaxed' the language of Exemption 7(A) in 1986," thus broadening its scope); In Def. of Animals v. HHS, No. 99-3024, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24975, at *9 (D.D.C. Sept. 28, 2001) (reiterating that "'could reasonably' . . . represents a relaxed standard; before 1986, the government had to show that disclosure 'would' interfere with law enforcement"); Gould Inc. v. GSA, 688 F. Supp. 689, 703 n.33 (D.D.C. 1988) (The "1986 amendments relaxed the standard of demonstrating interference with enforcement proceedings").
Exemption 7(A) requires a two-step analysis. First, there must be a "reasonable likelihood" of a pending or contemplated law enforcement proceeding. Second, release of the information must be reasonably expected to cause some articulable harm to that proceeding.\textsuperscript{6}

Duration

The Supreme Court has held that "the thrust of congressional concern" in enacting Exemption 7(A) was "to make clear that the Exemption did not endlessly protect material simply because it was in an investigatory file."\textsuperscript{7} Thus, as a general rule, Exemption 7(A) may only be invoked so long as the law enforcement proceeding involved remains \textsuperscript{6} See, e.g., Am. Civil Liberties Union of Mich. v. FBI, 734 F.3d 460, 468 (6th Cir. 2013) (holding that "[b]ecause the FBI has adequately shown that release of racial and ethnic demographic data is reasonably likely to interfere with ongoing investigations by revealing FBI priorities and analytic methods, the district court properly applied Exemption 7(A)"); Ctr. For Nat'l Sec. Studies v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 928 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (holding that "government's expectation that disclosure of the detainees' names would enable al Qaeda or other terrorist groups to map the course of the investigation and thus develop the means to impede it is reasonable"); Hammouda v. OIP, 920 F. Supp. 2d 16, 24 (D.D.C. 2013) (finding that defendant properly invoked Exemption 7(A) because disclosure of information would allow [the targets of the investigation] to elude detection or tamper with evidence"); Abuhouran v. Dep't of State, 843 F. Supp. 2d 73, 82 (D.D.C. 2012) (holding that defendant properly withheld notes which could hamper an ongoing law enforcement action"); Adionser v. DOJ, 811 F. Supp. 2d at 298 (defendant properly asserted Exemption 7(A) because disclosure of material would reveal the scope, direction, nature and pace of the investigation as well as reveal information that could harm the government's prosecution in the criminal appellate process"); Int'l Union of Elevator Const. Local 2 v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 804 F. Supp. 2d 828, 835 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (finding that agency has now provided specific and detailed descriptions of harm to ongoing investigation necessary to justify use of Exemption 7(A)).

---

\textsuperscript{7} NLRB v. Robbins Tire & Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 230 (1978); see Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Wash. v. DOJ, 746 F.3d 1082, 1097 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (holding that "Exemption 7(A) is temporal in nature" and "reliance on Exemption 7(A) may become outdated when the proceeding at issue comes to a close"); Solar Sources, Inc. v. United States, 142 F.3d 1033, 1037 (7th Cir. 1998) (holding that "Exemption 7(A) does not permit the Government to withhold all information merely because that information was compiled for law enforcement purposes"); Dickerson v. DOJ, 992 F.2d 1426, 1431 (6th Cir. 1993) (reiterating that when investigation is over and purpose of it expired, disclosure would no longer cause interference).
pending, or so long as an enforcement proceeding is fairly regarded as prospective or as preventative.

8 See, e.g., Van Bourg, Allen, Weinberg & Roger v. NLRB, 751 F.2d 982, 985 (9th Cir. 1985) (stating that documents from unfair labor practice are not protected by Exemption 7(A) when no claim is pending or contemplated); Barney v. IRS, 618 F.2d 1268, 1273-74 (8th Cir. 1980) (explaining that once enforcement proceedings are "either concluded or abandoned, exemption 7(A) will no longer apply"); Barrett v. DOJ, No. 09-2959, 2010 WL 4256366, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 2010) ("pending criminal investigation constitutes an 'enforcement proceeding.'"); Gray v. U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command, 742 F. Supp. 2d 68, 73 (D.D.C. 2010) (concluding that records compiled for pending administrative disciplinary action may fall within Exemption 7(A)); Blackwell v. FBI, 680 F. Supp. 2d 79, 94-5 (D.D.C. 2010), aff’d, 646 F.3d 37 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (FBI properly relied on Exemption 7(A) because disclosure of records would interfere with "pending FBI investigation"); Carter, Fullerton & Hayes, LLC v. FTC, 637 F. Supp. 2d 1, 10 (D.D.C. 2009) (holding that defendant correctly withheld material where it had shown that law enforcement investigation into state liquor control boards was pending).

9 See, e.g., Sussman v. U.S. Marshals Serv., 494 F.3d 1106, 1114 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (explaining that "enforcement proceedings need not be currently ongoing; it suffices for them to be 'reasonable anticipated'"); Boyd v. Criminal Div., DOJ, 475 F.3d 381, 386 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (stating that government’s identification of targets of investigation satisfies concrete prospective law enforcement proceeding requirement); Ctr. For Nat. Sec. Studies v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 926 (D.C. Cir. 2003) ("Exemption 7(A) does not require a presently pending 'enforcement proceeding;' [r]ather, . . . it is sufficient that the government’s ongoing September 11 terrorism investigation is likely to lead to such proceedings"); Manna v. DOJ, 51 F.3d 1158, 1165 (3d Cir. 1995) (ruling that when "prospective criminal or civil (or both) proceedings are contemplated," information is protected from disclosure); Stein v. SEC, 358 F. Supp. 3d 30, 34 (D.D.C. 2019) (finding that "[b]ecause the potential for interference remains even when a case is on appeal, the SEC is permitted to withhold law enforcement records 'until all reasonably foreseeable proceedings stemming from that investigation are closed'" (quoting Kay v. FCC, 976 F. Supp. 23, 38 (D.D.C. 1997))); Judicial Watch, Inc. v. DOJ, 282 F. Supp. 3d 242, 250 (D.D.C. 2017) (finding that "[u]ntil [the subject’s] appeal is fully exhausted, disclosure of investigative materials could be reasonably expected to interfere with whatever occurs going forward") (appeal pending); Owens v. DOJ, No. 04-1701, 2007 WL 778980, at *6 (D.D.C. Mar. 9, 2007) (finding that material properly withheld where law enforcement investigation into terrorist attacks in Africa are prospective); In Def. of Animals v. HHS, No. 99-3024, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24975, at *8 (D.D.C. Sept. 28, 2001) ("Previous USDA investigations of animal deaths at the Foundation resulted in formal charges . . . and there is no evidence that the agency would treat its most recent investigation differently."); Judicial Watch v. FBI, No. 00-745, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25732, at *16 (D.D.C. Apr. 20, 2001) (explaining that "[a]lthough no enforcement proceedings are currently pending, the FBI has represented that such proceedings may become necessary as the investigation progresses").

10 See, e.g., Ctr. for Nat’l Sec. Studies, 331 F.3d at 928 (determining that release of information at issue could allow terrorists to "more easily formulate or revise counter-efforts" and could be of "great use to al Qaeda in plotting future terrorist attacks"); Moorefield v. U.S. Secret Serv., 611 F.2d 1021, 1026 (5th Cir. 1980) (finding that material
Courts have found that Exemption 7(A) remains viable throughout the duration of long-term investigations.\textsuperscript{11} Indeed, even when an investigation is dormant, Exemption 7(A) has been held to be applicable if there is a concrete possibility that the investigation could lead to a "prospective law enforcement proceeding."\textsuperscript{12}
Courts have afforded protection under Exemption 7(A) despite the fact that discovery procedures may eventually allow access to certain records. Further, some courts have upheld the use of Exemption 7(A) even after documents have been disclosed in discovery. The D.C. Circuit has cautioned, however, that Exemption 7(A) does not permit the withholding of documents solely because they are protected by discovery rules and has required the agency to show interference with a law enforcement proceeding.\textsuperscript{15}

Types of Law Enforcement Proceedings

The types of "law enforcement proceedings" to which Exemption 7(A) may be applicable have been interpreted broadly by the courts; such proceedings have been held to include not only criminal actions,\textsuperscript{16} including those connected with terrorism and despite contention that records were produced in discovery in state case); Owens, 2007 WL 778980, at *5 (stating that "exemption claims" cannot be defeated "simply by pointing to a judicial proceeding in which some of the responsive documents may or could have been released").

\textsuperscript{15} North v. Walsh, 881 F.2d 1088, 1097, 1100 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (holding that the mere fact that defendants in related ongoing criminal proceedings might obtain documents through the FOIA that were ruled unavailable "through discovery, or at least might obtain the documents before [they] could obtain them through discovery," does not itself "constitute interference with a law enforcement proceeding"); see also Playboy Entm't, Inc. v. DOJ, 677 F.2d 931, 936 (D.C. Cir. 1982) ("[T]he issues in discovery proceeding and the issues in the context of a FOIA action are quite different. That for one reason or another a document may be exempt from discovery does not mean that it will be exempt from a demand under FOIA.").

\textsuperscript{16} See, e.g., Boyd v. DOJ, 475 F.3d 381, 386 (D.C. Cir. 2007) ("pending criminal investigation constitutes an 'enforcement proceeding'"); Manna v. DOJ, 51 F.3d at 1164-65 (finding that disclosure of prior criminal law enforcement proceedings involving requester's involvement in La Cosa Nostra "would interfere with prospective criminal" proceedings because prior information is relevant to contemplated prosecutions; thus, use of 7(A) was appropriate); Barrett v. DOJ, No. 09-2959, 2010 WL 4256366, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 2010) ("pending criminal investigation constitutes an 'enforcement proceeding'"); Van Bilderbeek v. DOJ, No 08-1931, 2010 WL 1049618, at *4-5 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 22, 2010) (explaining that Columbian government's allegation that requester was involved in international drug trade and money laundering created "plausible basis" for agency to open criminal investigation and upholding use of Exemption 7(A) because release of these documents would interfere with ongoing investigation); Delviscovo v. FBI, 903 F. Supp. 1, 3 (D.D.C. 1995) (finding that FBI "properly applied" Exemption 7(A) in ongoing criminal investigation of organized crime activities including narcotics, gambling, stolen property, and loan sharking), summary affirmance granted, No. 95-5388 (D.C. Cir. Jan. 24, 1997).
national security, but civil actions and regulatory proceedings as well. The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has held that the proceedings encompassed within Exemption 7(A) include "cases in which the agency has the initiative in bringing enforcement action and those . . . in which it must be prepared to respond to a third 17 See, e.g., Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 926-928 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (holding that disclosure of requested information was reasonably likely to interfere with terrorism investigation and finding use of Exemption 7(A) proper); Judicial Watch, Inc. v. DHS, 59 F. Supp. 3d 184, 193 (D.D.C. 2014) (holding that "DHS properly withheld . . . documents [because it] demonstrates that the information in question is part of an ongoing investigation into the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks"); Long v. DOJ, 479 F. Supp. 2d 23, 29 (D.D.C. 2007) (discussing "dilemma" in preserving "integrity of the Department's ongoing terrorism investigations without wholly undermining the purpose of the FOIA" and finding "appropriate balance" by permitting certain information to be redacted pursuant to Exemption 7(A)); Edmonds v. FBI, 272 F. Supp. 2d 35, 54-55 (D.D.C. 2003) (concluding that agency justified its withholding of records under Exemption 7(A) in case involving "national security issues").

18 See, e.g., Manna, 51 F.3d at 1165 (holding that disclosure would interfere with contemplated civil proceedings so that records were properly withheld pursuant to Exemption 7(A); Vento v. IRS, 714 F. Supp. 2d 137, 148 (D.D.C. 2010) (explaining that there is no distinction "in the law" between civil and criminal law enforcement and release of withheld information "could reasonably be expected to interfere" with ongoing investigation into requester's tax liability; thus, use of Exemption 7(A) proper); Faiella v. IRS, No 05-238, 2006 WL 2040130, *4 (D.N.H. July 20, 2000) (explaining that distinction between "the civil audit and the criminal investigation is not meaningful" because Exemption 7(A) is "applicable to investigation developed documents whether potentially civil or criminal in import" (quoting White v. IRS, 707 F.2d 897, 901 (6th Cir. 1983))); Judicial Watch v. Rossotti, 285 F. Supp. 2d 17, 29 (D.D.C. 2003) (concluding that "documents in question relate to an ongoing civil investigation by IRS and are exempt under Exemption 7(A)"). party's challenge." Enforcement proceedings in state courts and foreign courts have also been held to qualify for Exemption 7(A) protection. (For a further discussion of "law enforcement proceeding," see Exemption 7, above.)

Related Proceedings

Even after an underlying enforcement proceeding is closed, the continued use of Exemption 7(A) may be proper, provided that "related" proceedings are still pending.

---

20 Mapother v. DOJ, 3 F.3d 1533, 1540 (D.C. Cir. 1993).

22 See, e.g., Bevis v. Dep't of State, 801 F.2d 1386, 1388 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (stating that "language of the statute makes no distinction between foreign and domestic enforcement purposes" (citing Shaw, 749 F.2d at 64)).

23 Al-Turki v. DOJ, 175 F. Supp. 3d 1153, 1192 (D. Colo. 2016) (finding that "the documents at issue, while not directly related to an ongoing investigation, contain information that is intertwined with or related to other ongoing investigations"); see also, e.g., Cucci v. DEA, 871 F. Supp. 508, 512 (D.D.C. 1994) (finding protection proper when information pertains to "multiple intermingled investigations and not just the terminated investigation" of subject).
This includes situations when charges are pending against additional defendants or when additional charges are pending against the original defendant.

Additionally, Exemption 7(A) has been held proper when there is a motion for a new trial, appeal of the court's action, or a collateral attack on conviction. Exemption

---

24 See Solar Sources, Inc. v. United States, 142 F.3d 1033, 1040 (7th Cir. 1998) (explaining that although government has "closed" its cases against certain defendants by obtaining plea agreements and convictions, withholding is proper because information "compiled against them is part of the information" in ongoing cases against other targets); New England Med. Ctr. Hosp. v. NLRB, 548 F.2d 377, 385-86 (1st Cir. 1976) (finding Exemption 7(A) applicable when "closed file is essentially contemporary with, and closely related to, the pending open case" against another defendant; applicability of exemption does not hinge on "open" or "closed" label agency places on file); Watters v. DOJ, No. 10-270, 2013 WL 4482968, at *13 (N.D. Okla. Aug. 20, 2013) (determining that because subject's file contains information on third party of interest who is in fugitive status, "information was properly withheld" pursuant to Exemption 7(A)); DeMartino v. FBI, 577 F. Supp. 2d 178, 182 (D.D.C. 2008) (explaining that case remains open and pending because co-defendant is "scheduled to be retried" and "other unindicted co-conspirators" remain at large); Hidalgo v. FBI, 541 F. Supp. 2d 250, 256 (D.D.C. 2008) (finding "although [plaintiff was] convicted long ago . . . ongoing search for – and possible future trials of – indicted and unindicted fugitives satisfies" standard); Cucci v. DEA, 871 F. Supp. 508, 512 (D.D.C. 1994) (finding protection proper when information pertains to "multiple intermingled investigations and not just the terminated investigation" of subject).

25 See Pinnavaia v. FBI, No. 04-5115, 2004 WL 2348155, at *1 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 19, 2004) (explaining that although FBI San Diego Field Office's investigation was closed, its New York Field Office records were part of investigatory files for separate, ongoing investigation, so use of Exemption 7(A) therefore was proper), summary affirmance granted, No. 04-5115, 2004 WL 2348155, at *1 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 19, 2004); Int'l Union of Elevator Constr. Local 2 v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 804 F. Supp. 2d 828, 836 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (explaining that material responsive to request was originally compiled for civil investigations that are now closed, but material is being used in current criminal investigation, thus properly withheld under Exemption 7(A) because "release could reasonably be expected to interfere with the current investigation"); Seized Prop. Recovery, Corp. v. Customs and Border Prot., 502 F. Supp. 2d 50, 62 (D.D.C Aug. 17, 2007) (explaining that while underlying forfeiture proceedings have ended, possibility of different [] investigations, separate and apart from investigation attendant to seizure satisfies standard); Cudzich v. ICE, 886 F. Supp. 101, 106-07 (D.D.C. 1995) (holding that while INS investigation is complete, parts of file "containing information pertaining to pending investigations of other law enforcement agencies" are properly withheld); Kuffel v. BOP, 882 F. Supp. 1116, 1126 (D.D.C. 1995) (ruling that Exemption 7(A) remains applicable when inmate has criminal prosecutions pending in other cases).

26 See, e.g., Johnson v. FBI, 118 F. Supp. 3d 784, 792 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (explaining that "logic suggests that the existence of a pending motion under § 2255 makes it reasonably foreseeable that an enforcement proceeding (i.e., a new trial) will take place, leading to the expectation that Exemption 7(A) may apply to protect materials whose release could reasonably be expected to interfere with that new trial"); Adionser v. DOJ, 811 F. Supp. 2d 284, 298 (D.D.C. 2011) ("For purposes of Exemption 7(A), a pending appeal of a criminal
7(A) has also been upheld when there are related civil proceedings, and when an investigation has been terminated, but an agency retains oversight or some other continuing enforcement-related responsibility.

---

conviction qualifies as an ongoing law enforcement proceeding."); King v. DOJ, No. 08-1555, 2009 WL 2951124, *6 (D.D.C. Sept. 9, 2009) ("This Court has previously applied FOIA exemption (b)(7)(A) to post-conviction motions to vacate a sentence. . . . Accordingly, [requester] cannot prevail on his argument that materials related to his § 2255 motion fall outside the scope of FOIA exemption (b)(7)(A).")); James v. U.S. Secret Serv., No. 06-1951, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 52554, at *12 (D.D.C. July 23, 2007) (finding that "pending appeal of a criminal conviction qualifies as an ongoing or prospective law enforcement proceeding" and adding that disclosure could "harm the government's prosecution of Plaintiff's appeal"); DeMartino, 577 F. Supp. 2d at 182 (concluding that "law enforcement proceeding has not concluded" because criminal conviction is not final); Kidder v. FBI, 517 F. Supp. 2d 17, 27 (D.D.C. 2007) (reiterating that "pending appeal of a criminal conviction qualifies as a pending or prospective law enforcement proceeding for purposes of Exemption 7(A)"); Kansi v. DOJ, 11 F. Supp. 2d 42, 44 (D.D.C. 1998) (explaining that "potential for interference . . . that drives the 7(A) exemption . . . exists at least until plaintiff’s conviction is final"; thus, plaintiff's pending motion for new trial is pending law enforcement proceeding for purposes of FOIA; Pons v. U.S. Customs Serv., No. 93-2094, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6084, at *14 (D.D.C. Apr. 23, 1998) (ruling that disclosure of information not used in plaintiff's prior trials could "interfere with another law enforcement proceeding").

27 See Cozen O'Connor v. U.S. Dep't of Treasury, 570 F. Supp. 2d 749, 783 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (holding that agency "is entitled to invoke protection" even for documents "developed in preparation" for case against two entities that now no longer exist; noting that documents in those cases "would necessarily" discuss information developed during the investigation process and affect a pending delisting proceeding); Watkins Motor Lines, Inc. v. EEOC, No. 05-1065, 2006 WL 905518, at *5-6 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 7, 2006) (declaring that requested withdrawal of charge of discrimination "does not mean that there is no prospective law enforcement proceeding," because EEOC may pursue its own civil action; so requirement of harm for Exemption 7(A) is satisfied).

28 See, e.g., Judicial Watch, Inc. v. DHS, 59 F. Supp. 3d 184, 194 (D.D.C. 2014) (holding that even though the subject of the request is deceased, Exemption 7(A) applies to the ongoing investigation into the 9-11 terrorist attacks, which may lead to future law enforcement proceedings); Injex Indus. v. NLRB, 699 F. Supp. 1417, 1419-20 (N.D. Cal. 1986); Erb v. DOJ, 572 F. Supp. 954, 955-56 (W.D. Mich. 1983) (finding withholding of FBI report of its investigation proper in situation where press release stated that investigation was "concluded 'for the time being'" and investigation reopened subsequently); ABC Home Health Servs. v. HHS, 548 F. Supp. 555, 556, 559 (N.D. Ga. 1982) (explaining that "exemption is designed to protect contemplated proceedings, not particular allegations," thus holding documents protected when "final settlement" was subject to reevaluation for at least three years because "further proceedings are not foreclosed by the settlement"). But see, e.g., Phila. Newspapers, Inc. v. HHS, 69 F. Supp. 2d 63, 66-67 (D.D.C. 1999) (finding that release of audit statistics and details of settlement from closed investigation of one hospital would not interfere with possible future settlements with other institutions when none were being investigated).
Generalized Showing of Harm

To fall within the protection of Exemption 7(A), courts have held that it is sufficient for an agency to make a generalized showing that release of the records would interfere with enforcement proceedings.\(^29\) Indeed, courts have found that publicly revealing too many details about an ongoing investigation could jeopardize the investigation.\(^30\) While generalized showings of harm are accepted, courts have also cautioned that the exemption does not permit "blanket" withholding.\(^31\) The Court of Appeals for the District of \(^{29}\) See, e.g., Lazardis v. Dep't of State, 934 F. Supp. 2d 21, 37 (D.D.C. Mar. 27, 2013) ("Under exemption 7(A) the government is not required to make a specific factual showing with respect to each withheld document that disclosure would actually interfere with a particular enforcement proceeding;"); "Rather, federal courts may make generic determinations that [disclosure of certain kind of records] would generally "interfere with enforcement proceedings" (citing Barney v. IRS, 618 F.2d 1268, 1273 (8th Cir. 1980)); Cuban v. SEC, 744 F. Supp. 2d 60, 86-87 (D.D.C. 2010), on reconsideration in part, 795 F. Supp. 2d 43 (D.D.C. 2011) (noting that agency "describes generally how disclosure of each category could cause harm to the defendant's investigatory interests," explaining that "extensive specificity is not required for Exemption 7(A)," and holding that agency "described in sufficient detail . . . the harm that could befal l the agency if these records are prematurely released"); Kay v. FTC, 976 F. Supp. 23, 39 (D.D.C. 1997) (stating that agency "need not establish that witness intimidation is certain to occur, only that it is a possibility"); Pully v. IRS, 939 F. Supp. 429, 436 (E.D. Va. 1996) ("All that is required is an objective showing that interference could reasonably occur as the result of the documents' disclosure."); Wichlacz v. U.S. Dep't of Interior, 938 F. Supp. 325, 331 (E.D. Va. 1996) (holding that "particularized showing of interference is not required; rather, the government may justify nondisclosure in a generic fashion"), aff'd, 114 F.3d 1178 (4th Cir. 1997) (unpublished table decision); Alveska Pipeline Serv. v. EPA, No. 86-2176, 1987 WL 17071, at *2-3 (D.D.C. Sept. 9, 1987) (explaining that government need not "show that intimidation will certainly result," but that it must "show that the possibility of witness intimidation exists"), aff'd, 856 F.2d 309 (D.C. Cir. 1988)).

\(^{30}\) Int'l Union of Elevator Constr. Local 2 v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 747 F. Supp. 2d 976, 982 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (explaining that agency need only provide enough information to permit court to review its claims that disclosure "could compromise" investigation; thus, compelling production of Vaughn index could effectively defeat very purpose of Exemption 7(A)); Cuban, 744 F. Supp. 2d at 86 (D.D.C. 2010) (stating that "extensive specificity" is not required where such detail would undermine the precise reason for nondisclosure); Blackwell v. FBI, 680 F. Supp. 2d 79, 94 (D.D.C. 2010) (explaining that agency "need not submit declarations that reveal the exact nature and purpose of its investigations in order to satisfy FOIA-exemption 7(A)").

Columbia Circuit has held that an agency must show how disclosure of the records would interfere with an enforcement proceeding.32

Types of Interference

The Supreme Court has held that Congress intended that Exemption 7(A) apply "whenever the government's case in court . . . would be harmed by the premature release of evidence or information," or when disclosure would impede any necessary investigation prior to the enforcement proceeding.\(^{34}\)

\(^{33}\) NLRB v. Robbins Tire & Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 232 (1978) (holding that NLRB had established interference with its unfair labor practice enforcement proceeding by showing that release of witness statements would create greater potential for witness intimidation and could deter cooperation); see, e.g., Ctr. for Nat’l Sec. Studies v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 929 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (reasoning that requested list of names "could be of great use" by terrorists in "intimidating witnesses"); Solar Sources, Inc. v. United States, 142 F.3d 1033, 1039 (7th Cir. 1998) (stating that disclosure could result in "chilling and intimidation of witnesses"); Mapother v. DOJ, 3 F.3d 1533, 1543 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (holding that release of prosecutor’s index of all documents he deems relevant would provide "critical insights into [government’s] legal thinking and strategy"); Barney v. IRS, 618 F.2d 1268, 1273 (8th Cir. 1980) (reiterating that one primary purpose of Exemption 7(A) was to prevent harm to government’s case in court (citing Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 224-25); Fox News v. SEC, No. 09-2641, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 98232, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 14, 2010) (noting that disclosure could prematurely provide "information on litigation strategy"); Radcliffe v. IRS, 536 F. Supp. 2d 423, 437-38 (S.D.N.Y. 2008) (explaining that agency's "declaration is sufficiently specific" to establish harm should matter proceed to trial and reiterating that one primary purpose of Exemption 7(A) was to "prevent harm [to] the Government's case in court by not allowing litigants earlier or greater access;" and to prevent "prematurely revealing the government's case" (quoting Barney, 618 F.2d at 1273)); Stolt-Nielsen Trans. Grp., Ltd. v. DOJ, 480 F. Supp. 2d 166, 180 (D.D.C. 2007) (noting that release of information "would provide potential witnesses with insights into the Division's strategy and the strength of its position"), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 534 F. 3d 728, 733-34 (D.C. Cir. 2008); Faella v. IRS, No. 05-238, 2006 WL 2040130, at *3 (D.N.H. July 20, 2006) (stating that "disclosing information under active consideration" could undermine any future prosecution by "prematurely disclosing the government's potential theories, issues, and evidentiary requirements"); Envtl. Prot. Servs. v. EPA, 364 F. Supp. 2d 575, 588 (N.D. W. Va. 2005) (explaining that disclosure "would prematurely reveal the EPA's case"); Judicial Watch, Inc. v. DOJ, 102 F. Supp. 6, 19-20 (D.D.C. 2000) (reiterating that prematurely disclosing documents related to witnesses could result in witness tampering or intimidation and could discourage continued cooperation); Cujas v. IRS, No. 97-00741, 1998 WL 419999, at *4 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 15, 1998) (finding that release of information would "alert" plaintiff to scope and direction of case, thus interfering with agency's case, because "suspected violator with advance access to the government's case could construct defenses" (quoting Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 241), aff’d, 162 F.3d 1154 (4th Cir. 1998) (unpublished table decision); Anderson v. U.S. Dep’t of Treasury, No. 98-1112, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20877, at *10 (W.D. Tenn. Mar. 24, 1999) (finding that disclosure allows "possibility of witness intimidation" and interference with proceedings); McErlean v. DOJ, No. 97-7831, 1999 WL 791680, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 1999) (finding that release of memoranda would reveal substance of information gathered and thus interfere with pending deportation case); Kansi v. DOJ, 11 F. Supp. 2d 42, 44 (D.D.C. 1998) (holding that disclosure provides "potential for interference with witnesses and highly sensitive evidence"); Anderson v. USPS, 7 F. Supp. 2d 583, 586 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (explaining that release "would expose actual or prospective witnesses to undue influence or retaliation"), aff’d, 187 F.3d 625 (3d Cir. 1999) (unpublished table decision); Wichlacz, 938 F. Supp. at 331 (finding Independent Counsel "justified in concluding that there are substantial risks of witnesses intimidation or harassment [and] reduced witness cooperation" in investigation which remains active and ongoing); Holbrook v. IRS, 914 F. Supp. 314, 316 (S.D. Iowa 1996) (releasing information might permit targets of pending investigation to "tamper with or intimidate potential witnesses"); Dow Jones & Co. v. DOJ, 880 F. Supp. 145, 150 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (disclosing "statements by interviewees . . . might affect the testimony or statements of other witnesses and could severely hamper the Independent Counsel's ability to elicit untainted testimony.")., vacated on other grounds, 907 F. Supp. 79 (S.D.N.Y. 1995). But see Goodrich Corp. v. EPA, 593 F. Supp. 2d 184, 193-94 (D.D.C. 2009) (limiting harm to investigatory interference and stating that "litigation advantage is not the kind of harm Exemption 7(A) is intended to guard against").

34 See, e.g., Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 224 (finding that "Congress recognized that law enforcement agencies had legitimate needs to keep certain records confidential, lest the agencies be hindered in their investigations"); ACLU of Mich. v. FBI, 734 F.3d 460, 466 (6th Cir. 2013) (explaining that release of demographic data "directly reveals a targeting priority, and indirectly reveals the methodologies and data used to make that selection"); thus withholding proper because disclosure could interfere in investigation by revealing "selection process," leads, and scope; Shannahan v. IRS, 672 F.3d 1142, 1150 (9th Cir. 2012) (reiterating standards to establish interference in tax enforcement proceedings and holding use of Exemption 7(A) proper where agency-explained harm to ongoing investigation by showing that release could reveal identity of confidential informants and thus hinder other individuals from cooperating, violate terms of an international agreement, and expose scope of investigation); Lynch v. Dep't of the Treasury, 210 F.3d 384, at *2 (9th Cir. 2000) (unpublished table decision) (stating that agency declarations "made clear" that release of records could harm "efforts at corroborating witness statements . . . alert potential suspects . . . [and] interfere with surveillance"); Solar Sources, Inc. v. United States, 142 F.3d 1033, 1039 (7th Cir. 1998) (stating that disclosure could interfere by revealing "scope and nature" of investigation); Performance Coal v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 847 F. Supp. 2d 6, 16 (D.D.C. 2012) (agreeing with agency that disclosure could permit interference with ongoing criminal investigation by giving important information to potential witnesses or defendants); Lowy v. IRS, No. 10-00767, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34168, *41 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2011) (accepting agency declarations that release "would impair" ongoing tax law enforcement proceedings by revealing direction of investigation); Int'l Union of Elevator Const. Local 2 v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 804 F. Supp. 2d 828, 833 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (recognizing that law enforcement agencies have "legitimate needs to keep certain records confidential, lest the agencies be hindered in their investigations or placed at a disadvantage" when presenting case (quoting Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 224)); Amnesty Int'l v. CIA, 728 F. Supp. 2d 479, 526-27 (S.D.N.Y. 2010) (finding that disclosure of information in open investigations would reveal what individuals and activities were under investigation, what evidence had been collected, and compromise confidentiality of investigation; such disclosures were ""precisely the kind of interference that Congress . . . want[ed] to protect against"" (quoting Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 247)); Azmy v. DOD, 562 F. Supp. 2d 590, 605 (S.D.N.Y. 2008) (explaining that disclosure of "names of individuals and organizations of ongoing law enforcement interest" could reasonably be expected to interfere with investigation because "subjects of the Government's interest would likely attempt to conceal their activities"); Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash. v. Nat'l Indian Gaming Comm'n, 467 F. Supp. 2d 40, 52 (D.D.C. 2006) (finding that release of records regarding alleged misuse of tribal gaming revenues during investigation could allow targets to ascertain direction of investigations, to identify potential charges to be brought, and to expose state and nature of current
Courts have also ruled that interference has been established when disclosure of the records could prevent the government from obtaining information in the future.35

35 See, e.g., Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies, 331 F.3d at 930 (recognizing that witnesses "would be less likely to cooperate" and that a "potential witness or informant may be much less likely to come forward and cooperate with the investigation if he believes his name will be made public"); Alyeska Pipeline Serv. v. EPA, 856 F.2d 309, 311 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (ruling that disclosure might identify who had provided documents and would "thereby subject them to potential reprisals and deter them from providing further information"); Loeff, Cabrasher, Heimann & Bernstein v. DOJ, 697 F. Supp. 2d 79, 85 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (reiterating that "D.C. Circuit has previously held" that withholding of information about investigation was proper where disclosure could provide details about "[p]articular types of allegedly illegal activities being investigated" including "names of potential witnesses, who would then be 'less likely to cooperate'" (quoting Alyeska Pipeline Serv., 856 F. 2d at 312 ); EDUCAP, Inc. v. IRS, No. 07-2106, 2009 WL 416428, at *6 (D.D.C. Feb. 18, 2009) (explaining that agency's "expressed concern that release of the interview notes could deter potential witnesses from providing information is sufficient" to show interference); Stolt-Nielsen, 480 F. Supp. 2d at 180 (finding that "release of this information would . . . chill necessary investigative communications with foreign governments, and have a chilling effect on amnesty applications"); Watkins Motor Lines, Inc. v. EEOC, No. 05-1065, 2006 WL 905518, at *8-9
Additionally, courts have found that the exemption has been properly invoked when release would hinder an agency's ability to control or shape investigations\(^{36}\) or

(M.D. Fla. Apr. 7, 2006) (accepting agency’s enumerations of specific harms, including harm that release could prevent agency from obtaining information in the future, or make it more difficult to obtain from reluctant witnesses, by showing "that disclosure of these documents could reasonably be expected to interfere" (citing Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 241-42)); Kay, 976 F. Supp. at 38-39 (finding potential for "witness intimidation and discouragement of future witness cooperation" in ongoing investigation of alleged violation of FCC’s rules); Wichlacz, 938 F. Supp. at 331 (reducing cooperation of potential witnesses when they learn of disclosure, thus interfering with ongoing investigation); Kay v. FCC, 867 F. Supp. 11, 19 (D.D.C. 1994) (explaining that witness "intimidation would likely dissuade informants from cooperating with the investigation as it proceeds"); Manna v. DOJ, 815 F. Supp. 798, 808 (D.N.J. 1993) (disclosing FBI reports could result in chilling effect on potential witnesses), aff’d, 51 F.3d 1158, 1165 (3rd Cir. 1995) (finding "equally persuasive the district court’s concern for persons who have assisted or will assist law enforcement personnel"); Gould, 688 F. Supp. at 703 (disclosing information would have chilling effect on sources who are employees of requester).

would enable targets of investigations to elude detection\textsuperscript{37} or to suppress or fabricate evidence.\textsuperscript{38}

\textsuperscript{37} See, e.g., Agrama v. IRS, No. 17-5270, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 11560, at *7 (D.C. Cir. Apr. 19, 2019) (finding that withheld records might "'reveal the scope and direction of the investigation and could allow the target to destroy or alter evidence, fabricate fraudulent alibis, and intimidate witnesses'" (quoting North v. Walsh, 881 F.2d 1088, 1097, 279 U.S. App. D.C. 373 (D.C. Cir. 1989))); ACLU v. FBI, 734 F.3d 460, 466 (6th Cir. 2013) (holding that "release of ["racial and ethnic demographic data"] may reveal what leads the FBI is pursuing and the scope of those investigations, permitting groups to change their behavior and avoid scrutiny"); Moorefield v. U.S. Secret Serv., 611 F.2d 1021, 1026 (5th Cir. 1980) (explaining that disclosure of requested information would enable targets "to elude the scrutiny of the [Secret Service]"); Leopold v. DOJ, 301 F. Supp. 3d 13, 29 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding 7(A) Glomar permissible because confirmation through response to plaintiffs' FOIA request "'could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings,' . . . because disclosure 'would tip off subjects and persons of investigative interest, thus giving them the opportunity to take defensive actions to conceal their criminal activities, elude detection, and suppress and/or fabricate evidence'" (quoting agency declaration)); Buzzfeed, Inc. v. DOJ, 344 F. Supp. 3d 396, 404 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding that acknowledging existence of responsive records would "would enable individuals involved in criminal activity to track planes, learn where the FBI is conducting an investigation, and alter their behavior to avoid detection or interrupt or impede ongoing law enforcement investigations" and "denying the existence of records could signal to criminals that certain planes are not FBI planes and certain routes are free from FBI surveillance"); Mantilla v. Dept. of State, No. 12-21109, 2013 WL 424433, *6 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 1, 2013) (holding that release of information concerning ongoing DEA investigations would allow "individuals and/or entities, who are of investigative interest to [the] DEA, [to] use the information to develop alibis, create fictitious defenses, or intimidate, harass, or harm potential witnesses"); Council of Am.-Islamic Relations v. FBI, 749 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1118 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (accepting agency's assertion that release could enable targets to evade detection); Azmy, 562 F. Supp 2d at 605 (stating that disclosure could enable targets to "conceal their activities"); Mendoza v. DEA, No. 06-0591, 2006 WL 3734365, at *4 (D.D.C. Dec. 20, 2006) (reiterating that disclosure could assist fugitives and other targets to avoid apprehension and to develop false alibis), aff'd, No. 07-5006, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22175, at *2 (D.C. Cir. Sept. 14, 2007).

\textsuperscript{38} See, e.g., Juarez v. DOJ, 518 F.3d 54, 58 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (finding that release "would compromise the investigation as it could lead to destruction of evidence"); Solar Sources, 142 F.3d at 1039 (stating that disclosure "could result in destruction of evidence"); Alyeska Pipeline, 856 F.2d at 312 (ruling that disclosure could allow for destruction or alteration of evidence, fabrication of alibis, and identification of witnesses); Leopold, 301 F. Supp. 3d at 29 (finding 7(A) Glomar permissible because confirmation through response to plaintiffs' FOIA request "'would tip off subjects and persons of investigative interest, thus giving them the opportunity to take defensive actions to conceal their criminal activities, elude detection, and suppress and/or fabricate evidence'" (quoting agency declaration)); Performance Coal, 847 F. Supp. 2d at 16 (noting that prematurely revealing information might permit altering of evidence); Council of Am.-Islamic Relations, 749 F. Supp. 2d at 1119 (noting that release could permit targets to alter, destroy, or create false evidence); Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein, 697 F. Supp. 2d at 88 (agreeing with agency that disclosure could provide details about illegal activities being investigated thus enabling targets to determine what evidence
Courts have held that Exemption 7(A) ordinarily will not afford protection when the target of the investigation has possession of or has submitted the information in question or the agency has made it public. Courts have, however, upheld protection for "selected" information provided by the target which would suggest the nature and scope of the investigation.

39 See, e.g., Lion Raisins v. USDA, 354 F.3d 1072, 1085 (9th Cir. 2004) (stating – in a situation in which investigatory target already possessed copies of documents sought – that "[b]ecause Lion already has copies . . . USDA cannot argue that revealing the information would allow Lion premature access to the evidence upon which it intends to rely at trial"); Wright v. OSHA, 822 F.2d 642, 646 (7th Cir. 1987) (observing that disclosure of information provided by plaintiff would not provide plaintiff "with any information that it does not already have"); Chesapeake Bay Found., Inc. v. Army Corps of Eng'rs, 677 F. Supp. 2d 101, 108 (D.D.C. 2009) (finding that the agency did not explain "how its investigation will be impaired by the release of information that the targets of the investigation already possess"); Estate of Fortunato v. IRS, No. 06-6011, 2007 WL 4838567, at *4 (D.N.J. Nov. 30, 2007) (explaining that because information appears to be either in plaintiff's possession or known to plaintiff, agency "has not met its burden of justifying the withholding of these documents under Exemption 7(A)"); Dow Jones Co. v. FERC, 219 F.R.D. 167, 174 (C.D. Cal. 2002) (stating that there cannot be harm, because "each target company has a copy . . . and therefore is on notice as to the government's possible litigation strategy and potential witnesses"); Ginsberg v. IRS, No. 96-2265-CIV-T-26E, 1997 WL 882913, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 23, 1997) (reiterating that "where the documents requested are those of the [requester] rather than the documents of a third party . . . 'it is unlikely that their disclosure could reveal . . . anything [the requester] does not know already'" (quoting Grasso v. IRS, 785 F.2d 70, 77 (3d Cir. 1986)).

40 UtahAmerica Energy v. Dep't of Labor, 700 F. Supp. 2d 99, 108 (D.D.C. 2010) (finding withholding of investigatory reports into two mining accidents not justified where reports "have been available in full on [Mining Safety and Health Administration] website" and adding that agency's "failure to explain with greater particularity how that information could compromise those ongoing investigations some two years [after posting reports on website] should not be rewarded by this Court"); Scheer v. DOJ, 35 F. Supp. 2d 9, 14 (D.D.C. 1999) (declaring that agency assertions of harm and "concern proffered . . . cannot stand" when agency itself disclosed information to target).

41 See, e.g., Swan, 96 F.3d at 500-01 (holding that "harm in releasing ["information [two clients'] attorney conveyed to the [agency]"] flows mainly from the fact that it reflects the [agency] staff's selective recording . . . and thereby reveals the scope and focus of the investigation"); Mapother v. DOJ, 3 F.3d 1533, 1543 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (discussing a report agency compiled of source materials, including those submitted by target of investigation,
Generic Categories

When invoking Exemption 7(A), the Supreme Court has held that the government may justify its withholdings by reference to generic categories of documents, rather than document-by-document.42

42 See, e.g., NLRB v. Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. 214, 223-24, 236 (1978) (explaining that statute draws distinction "between subdivision (A) and subdivisions (B), (C), and (D)" of Exemption 7, holding that 7(A) "appears to contemplate that certain generic determinations might be made" and finding that "Congress did not intend to prevent the federal courts from determining that, with respect to particular kinds of enforcement proceedings, disclosure of particular kinds of investigatory records while a case is pending would generally 'interfere with enforcement proceedings'"); Batton v. Evers, 598 F.3d 169, 182 (5th Cir. 2010) (reiterating that Supreme Court has held that generic categorical determinations may be made under Exemption 7(A)); Solar Sources Inc. v. United States, 142 F.3d 1033, 1038 (7th Cir. 1998) ("It is well-established that the Government may justify its withholdings by reference to generic categories of documents, rather than document-by-document." (citing Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 236)); Leopold v. DOJ, 301 F. Supp. 3d 169, 182 (5th Cir. 2010) (finding categorical approach permissible because "even a Vaughn index or other precise description of the records being withheld would 'reveal non-public information about the targets and scope of the investigation' which 'could reasonably be expected to' interfere with it"); Int'l Union of Elevator Constr. Local 2 v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 804 F. Supp. 2d 828, 834 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (noting that "it is well-established that the Government may justify its withholdings by reference to generic categories of documents rather than document-by-document" (quoting Solar Sources, 142 F.3d at 1038)); Gray v. U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command, 742 F. Supp. 68, 74 (D.D.C. 2010) (holding that "agency is not required to submit a document-by-document response to plaintiff's FOIA request," but can "focus on categories of records encompassed by [plaintiff's] request" (quoting Campbell v. HHS, 682 F.2d 256, 259, 265 (D.C. Cir. 1982))); Lawyers Comm. for Civil Rights v. U.S. Dep't of Treasury, No. 07-2590, 2010 WL 1299821, at *3 (N.D. Cal. May 11, 2009) (repeating that existing authority supports categorical application of Exemption 7(A)); Powers v. DOJ, No. 03-893, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62756, at *29 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 1, 2006) (same); cf. Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. 749, 776-77 (1989) (Exemption 7(C) case) (declaring...
When an agency elects to use the "generic" approach, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has held that the agency "has a three-fold task."\(^{43}\)

First, it must define its categories functionally. Second, it must conduct a document-by-document review in order to assign the documents to the proper category. Finally, it must explain to the court how the release of each category would interfere with enforcement proceedings.\(^{44}\)

(For a further discussion, see Litigation Considerations, Vaughn Index, below.)

Courts traditionally accept agency declarations in Exemption 7(A) cases that specify the distinct, generic categories of documents at issue and the harm that would result from their release, rather than requiring extensive, detailed itemizations of each document.\(^{45}\)

---

\(^{43}\) Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash. v. DOJ, 746 F.3d 1082 (D.C. Cir. 2014); accord Bevis v. Dep't of State, 801 F.2d 1386, 1389-90 (D.C. Cir. 1986).

\(^{44}\) Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash., 746 F.3d at 1098 (quoting Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389-90); see also In re DOJ, 999 F.2d 1302, 1310-11 (8th Cir. 1993) ("To satisfy its burden with regard to Exemption 7(A), the government must define functional categories of documents, it must conduct a document-by-document review to assign documents to proper categories; and it must explain to the court how the release of each category would interfere with enforcement proceedings." (citing Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389-90)); Inst. for Justice v. IRS, 340 F. Supp. 3d 34, 42 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding that "all 'open' assets is a functional category" and "there is a rational link between seizures in open investigations and potential interference") (appeal pending); Int'l Union of Elevator Constructors Local 2 v. DOJ, 804 F. Supp. 2d 828, 834 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (same) (quoting In re DOJ, 999 F.2d at 1310-11); Banks v. DOJ, 700 F. Supp. 2d 9, 17 (D.D.C. 2010) (same); Bilderbeek v. DOJ, No 08-1931, 2010 WL 1049618, at *5 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 22, 2010), aff’d sub nom. Van Bilderbeek v. DOJ, 416 F. App’x 9 (11th Cir. 2011) (discussing that "D.C. Circuit stated that in order to use a categorical approach when withholding records, an agency must define the categories to be used, conduct a document-by-document review before assigning documents to the appropriate category, and 'explain to the court how the release of each category would interfere with enforcement proceedings'" (quoting Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389-90)); United Am. Fin. v. Potter, 531 F. Supp. 2d 29, 40 (D.D.C. 2008) (describing three-fold task).

\(^{45}\) See, e.g., Lynch v. Dep’t of the Treasury, No. 99-1697, 2000 WL 123236, at *2 (9th Cir. Jan. 28, 2000) (explaining that "government need not 'make a specific factual showing with respect to each withheld document that disclosure would actually interfere with a particular enforcement proceeding'" (quoting Lewis v. IRS, 823 F.2d 375, 380 (9th Cir. 1987))); Solar Sources, 142 F.3d at 1038 (reiterating that government "need not establish that release of a particular document would actually interfere, [but] may justify its withholdings by reference Courts have emphasized, however, that an agency's ability to place documents into categories "does not obviate the requirement that an agency conduct a document-by-document to generic categories of documents, rather than document-by-document"); In re DOJ, 999 F.2d 1302, 1308 (8th Cir. 1993) (en banc) (The "Supreme Court has consistently interpreted Exemption 7 of the FOIA (specifically so far subsections 7(A), 7(C), and 7(D))" to permit government to proceed on a "categorical basis" and to not require a document-by-document Vaughn Index.); Dickerson v. DOJ, 992 F.2d 1426, 1431 (6th Cir. 1993) (stating that it is "often feasible for courts to make 'generic determinations' about interference"); Lewis, 823 F.2d at 380 (holding that IRS need only make general showing that disclosure "would interfere with its enforcement proceedings" and is not required to make specific factual showing with respect to each withheld page); Wright v. OSHA, 822 F.2d 642, 646 (7th Cir. 1987) (explaining that "detailed listing is generally not required under Exemption 7(A)"); Spannaus v. DOJ, 813 F.2d 1285, 1288 (4th Cir. 1987) (stating that Supreme Court "has rejected the argument that the statute requires particularized showings of interference, holding instead that the Government may justify nondisclosure in a generic fashion"); Curran v. DOJ, 813 F.2d 473, 475 (1st Cir. 1987) (holding that generic determinations of likely interference are permitted); Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389 (finding that agency "need not proceed on a document-by-document basis, detailing to the court the interference that would result from disclosure," but may take "generic approach, grouping documents into relevant categories"); Crooker v. ATF, 789 F.2d 64, 67 (D.C. Cir. 1986) ("Because generic determinations are permitted, the government need not justify its withholdings document-by-document; it may instead do so category-of-document by category-of-document."); Campbell, 682 F.2d at 265 (recognizing that "government may focus upon categories of records"); Leopold, 301 F. Supp. 3d at 26 (finding that instead of specific information about each withheld record, agency "describes for each type of responsive record, how disclosure could interfere with the Special Counsel's investigation and any prospective enforcement proceedings"); Banks v. DOJ, 700 F. Supp. 2d 9, 17 (D.D.C. 2010) ("[T]he government need not justify its withholdings document-by-document; it may instead do so category-of-document by category-of-document." (quoting Crooker v. ATF, 789 F.2d at 67)); Int'l Union of Elevator Constr. Local 2 v. U.S. Dept of Labor, 747 F. Supp. 2d 976, 982 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (explaining that use of generic categories to justify withholdings is well-established and that "[c]ompelling the production of a Vaughn index could also effectively defeat the very purpose of Exemption 7(A)"); Van Bilderbeek, 2010 WL 1049618 at *4 (reiterating that agency can justify its withholdings by generic categories and need not establish that release of particular document would actually interfere with enforcement proceeding); Radcliffe v. IRS, 536 F. Supp. 2d 423, 437 (S.D.N.Y. 2008) (finding that "government is not required to make a specific factual showing with respect to each withheld document that disclosure would actually interfere with a particular enforcement proceeding," but may make generic determinations); Envtl. Prot. Servs. v. EPA, 364 F. Supp. 2d 575, 588 (N.D. W.Va. 2005) (stating that an "agency is not required to establish on a document-by-document basis the interference that would result from the disclosure of each document," but instead may take generic approach "based on categorical types of records" (citing Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. at 232); see also FOIA Update, Vol. V, No. 2, at 3-4 ("FOIA Counselor: The 'Generic' Aspect of Exemption 7(A)") (discussing use of generic categories under Exemption 7(A)).
document review”; rather, agencies have been required to conduct a document-by-document review in order to assign documents to their proper categories.46

Indeed, courts have held that the burden is on agencies to "identify[] either specific documents or functional categories of information that are exempt from disclosure, and disclos[e] any reasonably segregable, non-exempt" portions.47 The D.C. Circuit has upheld protection for an entire investigative file when the agency demonstrated that 46 See, e.g., Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389 (explaining that agency "must itself review each document to determine the category in which it properly belongs"); Banks, 700 F. Supp. 2d at 17 (finding that agency must determine, document-by-document, the category into which each document falls); Van Bilderbeek, 2010 WL 1049618, at *5 (determining that agency used categorical approach properly because it reviewed each document responsive to request and placed document in its appropriate category); Lawyers Comm. for Civil Rights, 2009 WL 1299821, at *3 ("In order to apply an exemption categorically, there must be some indicia that the individual documents within the class of documents are similar; and that the agency has reviewed and ensured that the individual documents it seeks to include in the class of documents are indeed similar."); United Am. Fin., 531 F. Supp. 2d at 40 (stating that under generic category approach, agency must review each document to determine in which category it properly belongs); Kidder v. FBI, 517 F. Supp. 2d 17, 28 (D.D.C. 2007) (determining that agency used categorical approach properly because it reviewed each document responsive to request and placed document in its appropriate category); (Gavin v. SEC, No. 04-4522, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 75227, at *12-14 (D. Minn. Oct. 13, 2006) (explaining that agency must conduct "document-by-document review of responsive documents for categorization"); Edmonds v. FBI, 272 F. Supp. 2d 35, 54 (D.D.C. 2003) (explaining that agency may group documents into categories, but that "[i]n order to utilize this categorical approach, [an agency] must 'conduct a document-by-document review' of all responsive documents to assign documents to the proper category" (quoting Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389-90)); Kay v. FTC, 976 F. Supp. 23, 35 (D.D.C. 1997) (same).

47 Long v. DOJ, 450 F. Supp. 2d 42, 76 (D.D.C. 2006) (explaining that to do otherwise "would eviscerate the principles of openness in government that the FOIA embodies"); see, e.g., Batton, 598 F. 3d at 182 (reiterating that while Supreme Court has held that generic categorical determinations are permissible, it "expressly refused to find that an agency can simply claim [Exemption 7(A)] for everything in a file labeled 'investigative'" and attempt to do so is "plainly insufficient to satisfy [agency's] burden"); Gray, 742 F. Supp. at 75 (stating that "boilerplate statements, without reference to specific documents or even categories of documents, fail to support" Exemption 7(A)); Banks, 700 F. Supp. 2d at 18 (repeating that "mere fact that the underlying investigation remains open is not a sufficient basis for withholding the entire case file; such a decision is justified only on a showing that the release of each category of documents could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings"); Gavin, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 75227, at *12-14 (refuting agency's assertion that categorization eliminates duty to segregate; explaining that agency must conduct "document-by-document review of responsive documents for categorization and segregation purposes").
release of any portion could reasonably be expected to compromise an ongoing investigation.48

Adequate Descriptions of Categories

Specific guidance has been provided by the Courts of Appeals for the First, Fourth, and District of Columbia Circuits as to what constitutes an adequate "generic category" in an Exemption 7(A) declaration.49 The general principle uniting their decisions is that agency declarations must provide at least a general, "functional" description of the types of documents at issue sufficient to indicate the type of interference threatening the law enforcement proceeding.50 The First and the Fourth Circuits have approved a 48 See Patino-Restrepo v. DOJ, No. 17-5143, 2019 WL 1250497, at *2 (D.C. Cir. Mar. 14, 2019) (holding that FBI properly withheld in full investigative file concerning crime organizations under Ex. 7(A) because release of any portion of file would be reasonably likely to compromise an ongoing investigation by creating chilling effect on witnesses and possibly revealing scope of investigation, alerting potential targets) (petition for cert. filed).

49 See Spannaus v. DOJ, 813 F.2d 1285, 1289 (4th Cir. 1987) (holding that "details regarding initial allegations giving rise to this investigation; notification of [FBI Headquarters] of the allegations and ensuing investigation; interviews with witnesses and subjects; investigative reports furnished to the prosecuting attorneys," and similar categories are all sufficient); Curran v. DOJ, 813 F.2d 473, 476 (1st Cir. 1987) (same); Bevis v. Dep't of State, 801 F.2d 1386, 1390 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (explaining that "identities of possible witnesses and informants, reports on the location and viability of potential evidence, and polygraph reports" are sufficient; categories "identified only as 'teletypes,' 'airtels,' or 'letters'" are insufficient); see also Cucci v. DEA, 871 F. Supp. 508, 511-12 (D.D.C. 1994) (holding that "evidentiary matters category" – described as "witness statements, information exchanged between the FBI and local law enforcement agencies, physical evidence, evidence obtained pursuant to search warrants and documents related to the case's documentary and physical evidence" is sufficient).

50 See Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1389 (describing proper "functional" categories as those that allow "court to trace a rational link between the nature of the document and the alleged likely interference" (quoting Crooker v. ATF, 789 F.2d 64, 67 (D.C. Cir. 1986))); see also e.g., Batton v. Evers, 598 F. 3d 169, 182 (5th Cir. 2010) (while reiterating that "Supreme Court has held that generic categorical determinations" are permissible, holding that category labeled "certain documents" makes it impossible to determine type of documents agency asserts are exempt; thus, standard for Exemption 7(A) not satisfied); Curran, 813 F.2d at 475 ("Withal, a tightrope must be walked: categories must be distinct enough to allow meaningful judicial review, yet not so distinct as prematurely to let the cat out of the investigative bag."); Crooker v. ATF, 789 F.2d 64, 67 (D.C. Cir. 1986) ("The hallmark of an acceptable Robbins category is thus that it is functional; it allows the court to trace a rational link between the nature of the document and the alleged likely interference."); Owens v. DOJ, No. 04-1701, 2006 WL 3490790, at *6 (D.D.C. Dec. 1, 2006) (observing that "courts reviewing the withholding of agency records under Exemption 7 cannot demand categories' so distinct as prematurely to let the cat out of the investigative bag," but finding that agency's categories in this case did not provide "so much as a bare sketch of the information" and that agency therefore had not met its burden under Exemption 7(A)
"miscellaneous" category of "other sundry items of information" as one of the permissible categories.51

Deference

The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has recognized that "Exemption 7(A) explicitly requires a predictive judgment of the harm that will result from disclosure of information."52 In Center for National Security Studies v. DOJ, the D.C. Circuit also held that in the national security context, "the long-recognized deference to the executive" utilized by the courts when applying Exemptions 1 and 3 should also apply in the Exemption 7A context.54 While granting greater deference to agencies in the 51 Spannaus, 813 F.2d at 1287, 1289; accord Curran, 813 F.2d at 476 (finding that wide range of records made some degree of generality "understandable – and probably essential").

52 Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies v. DOJ, 331 F.3d 918, 928 (D.C. Cir. 2003); Elec. Privacy Info. Ctr. v. DHS, 82 F. Supp. 3d 307, 320 (D.D.C. 2015) (same); see, e.g., Judicial Watch, Inc. v. DHS, 59 F. Supp. 3d 184, 193 (D.D.C. 2014) (holding that, "[i]n light of the deference owed to the agency . . . the Court concludes that DHS properly withheld the documents" because they "are part of an ongoing investigation . . . which may lead to future law enforcement proceedings").

54 Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies, 331 F.3d at 928, 932 (explaining that courts "must defer" to executive on national security matters; therefore, "we owe the same deference under Exemption 7(A)" when national security is at issue); see also ACLU of Mich. v. FBI, 734 F.3d 460, 467 (6th Cir. 2013) (discussing deference and holding that demographic data was properly withheld pursuant to Exemption 7(A) because it concerns "matter of national security as to which the agency is owed deference"); Lowy v. IRS, No. 10-00767, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34168, *23, *46 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2011) (finding, in cases involving tax information exchanged between IRS and foreign tax offices, that "IRS's determination about potential harms to tax administration was 'entitled to some deference'" (quoting Shannahan v. IRS, 680 F. Supp. 2d 1270, 1276 (W.D. Wash. 2010))); Council on Am. Islamic Relations v. FBI, 749 F. Supp. 2d 1104, 1117, 1119 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (reiterating that courts should be hesitant to second guess law enforcement agencies and agreeing with agency that release of records would cause specific, potential harms); Shannahan v. IRS, 680 F. Supp. 2d 1270, 1276 (W.D. Wash. 2010) (holding that "conclusions [in agency declarations] are entitled to national security area, courts still carefully review the government's submissions to determine if they meet Exemption 7(A)'s standards.\textsuperscript{55}

Time Frame for Determining Exemption 7(A) Applicability

some deference as the court is not in a position to independently evaluate what actions on the part of the IRS or the United States government would impair relations between Hong Kong and the United States"; because disclosure would interfere with ongoing enforcement proceedings, agency "has met its burden under Exemption 7(A)"); aff'd, 672 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 2012); Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm. v. DHS, 516 F. Supp. 2d 83, 89 (D.D.C. 2007) (finding information about individuals arrested on national security criteria withholdable under Exemption 7(A) and explaining that "Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies may have ratcheted up the degree of deference that must be accorded the executive, but it was clear long before that decision that the courts are not simply to use their own best judgment in a national security context"); L.A. Times Commc'ns v. Dep't of the Army, 442 F. Supp. 2d 880, 899 (C.D. Cal. 2006) (stating that "Court defers to [Army officer's] predictive judgments" about Exemption 7(A) harm in insurgency setting); Edmonds v. FBI, 272 F. Supp. 2d 35, 55 (D.D.C. 2003) (stating that deference "must be extended to Exemption 7(A) in cases like this one, where national security issues are at risk" (citing Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies, 331 F.3d at 927-28)). But see Shearson v. DHS, No. 06-1478, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16902, at *13-16 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 9, 2007) (stating that such deference to agencies is not necessarily afforded in cases that do not implicate national security and holding that agency's mere statement that "border investigations are 'ongoing'" does not satisfy its burden that enforcement proceedings are likely, nor does statement "implicate issues of national security"; adding that "government's reliance on [Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies v. DOJ] is misplaced").

\textsuperscript{55} See Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Wash., 746 F.3d at 1098 (stressing that "although we give deference to an agency's predictive judgment of the harm that will result from disclosure of information," reiterating that "it is not sufficient for the agency to simply assert that disclosure will interfere"); Ctr. for Nat'l Sec. Studies, 331 F.3d at 926-32 (while stating that "[w]e have consistently reiterated the principle of deference to the executive in the FOIA context when national security concerns are implicated," nonetheless still reviewing standards agencies must meet and stressing that "we do not abdicate the role of the judiciary"); see also Shannahan, 680 F. Supp. 2d at 1275 ("although the IRS's determination is entitled to deference, the court nonetheless reviews the determination de novo"); Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm., 516 F. Supp. 2d at 89-90 (noting that "courts have consistently deferred to executive affidavits predicting harm to the national security," but nonetheless still reviewing agency submissions to determine if agency "satisfies" test of reasonableness and provides "sufficient detail"); Kidder v. FBI, 517 F. Supp. 2d 17, 27-28 (D.D.C. 2007) (mentioning deference given to law enforcement agencies, but stressing that agency must show, even in case involving terrorism and intelligence gathering, how release of records could interfere with proceedings); Owens v. DOJ, No. 04-1701, 2007 WL 778980, at *6-8 (D.D.C. Mar. 9, 2007) (noting "sensitive investigations involving terrorist bombings in Tanzania and Kenya, yet requiring agency to provide sufficient detail to allow court to trace link between document and purported interference with "potential criminal proceedings").
The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has held that the proceeding supporting the use of Exemption 7(A) "must remain pending at the time of [the court's] decision, not only at the time of the initial FOIA request."\textsuperscript{56} The D.C. Circuit has declared that Exemption 7(A) is "temporal in nature,"\textsuperscript{57} and reliance on it "may become outdated when the proceeding at issue comes to a close."\textsuperscript{58}

Changes in Circumstances During Litigation When Exemption No Longer Applies

The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in Maydak v. DOJ denied the government's motion for remand "so that it might defend the applicability of other FOIA exemptions" when Exemption 7(A) became inapplicable and instead "order[ed] the release of all requested documents," ruling that the government "must assert all exemptions at the same time, in the original court proceedings."\textsuperscript{59}

The D.C. Circuit subsequently declared in August v. FBI that "we have repeatedly acknowledged that there are some 'extraordinary' circumstances in which courts of

\begin{footnotesize}
\begin{itemize}
\item[56] Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash. v. DOJ, 746 F.3d 1082, 1097 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (citing Sussman v. USMS, 494 F.3d 1106, 1115 (D.C. Cir. 2007)); see Sussman v. U.S. Marshals Serv., 494 F.3d 1106, 1115 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (holding that "relevant proceedings must be pending or reasonably anticipated at the time of the district court's eventual decision, not merely at the time of [plaintiff's] original FOIA request, in order to support redaction under Exemption 7(A)") (citing August v. FBI, 328 F.3d 697, 698 (D.C. Cir. 2003)); see also Cuban v. SEC, 744 F. Supp. 2d 60, 87 (D.D.C. 2010) (explaining that Exemption 7(A) "is only temporary" and given passage of time since it was first invoked, agency must establish at upcoming hearing whether investigation is still ongoing').
\item[57] Citizens for Responsibility & Ethics in Wash., 746 F.3d at 1097 (citing NLRB v. Robbins Tire, 437 U.S. 214, 223-24 230-32 (1978)).
\item[58] Id. (citing Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Dep't of Energy, 617 F.2 d 854, 870 (D.C. Cir. 1980)).
\item[59] 218 F.3d 760, 765, 769 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (noting that delay caused by permitting agency to raise FOIA exemption claims one at a time interferes with statutory goals of efficient and prompt disclosure of information and finding that agency offered no convincing reason why it could not have raised other exemptions in district court proceeding); see, e.g., Abuhouran v. Dep't of State, 843 F. Supp. 2d 73, 81 (D.D.C 2012) (agreeing that applying Exemption 7(A) "in conjunction with exemption 5 to a handwritten note" was proper); Lawyers' Comm. for Civil Rights v. Dep't of the Treasury, No. 07-2590, 2008 WL 4482855, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2008) (discussing agency's use of eight exemptions while also relying on "Exemptions 7(A) and 7(F)"); Owens v. DOJ, No. 04-1701, 2007 WL 778980, at *1 (D.D.C. Mar. 9, 2007) (noting agency maintained that all responsive materials were properly withheld under Exemption 7(A), but advanced other exemptions to avoid waiving them); Ayvad v. DOJ, No. 00 Civ. 960, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6925, at *4 n.2 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 18, 2002) (noting that agency invoked exemptions in addition to Exemption 7(A) "because of Maydak").
\end{itemize}
\end{footnotesize}
appeals may exercise their authority . . . to require 'such further proceedings to be had as may be just under the circumstances,' in order to allow the government to raise FOIA exemption claims it failed to raise the first time around." It further explained that "[g]iven the drafters' recognition that the harms of disclosure may in some cases outweigh its benefits, we have avoided adopting a 'rigid press it at the threshold, or lose it for all times' approach to . . . agenc[ies'] FOIA exemption claims.""}

Exclusion Considerations

Finally, the FOIA affords special protection to certain ongoing law enforcement proceedings through the "(c)(1) exclusion." When there is reason to believe that the subject of a criminal law enforcement investigation is not aware of the existence of the investigation and disclosure of the existence of the investigation could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings, the agency may treat the records as not subject to the requirements of the FOIA.

---

60 328 F.3d 697, 700 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (holding that because failure to raise all FOIA exemptions at the outset resulted from human error, because wholesale disclosure would pose a significant risk to the safety and privacy of third parties, and because agency had taken steps to ensure that it does not make the same mistake again, remand is appropriate for consideration of other potentially applicable exemptions); see also Smith v. DOJ 251 F.3d 1047, 1050 (D.C. Cir. 2001) (stating that "as a general rule, [agency] must assert all exemptions at the same time, in the original district court proceeding," and noting that while "extraordinary circumstances' or 'interim developments' could warrant "departure from this rule," finding that no such circumstances were identified by agency; therefore, agency "must produce the [records] notwithstanding any other FOIA exemptions it may assert in a future case of this sort" (quoting Maydak, 218 F. 3d at 764, 767) (Exemption 3 case)); cf. Conti v. DHS, No. 12Civ.5827, 2014 WL 1274517, at *22 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 24, 2014) (noting that agency advised plaintiff that when proceedings were final that at such time agency might apply other FOIA exemptions to protect certain information from disclosure; holding that agency "may apply other exemptions").

61 August, 328 F.3d at 699; see e.g., Gawker Media, LLC v. FBI, 145 F. Supp. 3d 1100, 1106 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (finding that "[a]s soon as the FBI no longer claimed that their entire investigative file was being withheld under exemption 7(A), the FBI identified more specific exemptions in its Vaughn Index and supporting declaration;" "[P]laintiff] has had an opportunity to object to those exemptions and the Court has had an opportunity to consider the exemptions along with [plaintiff's] objections;" and "[P]laintiff's objections and response to summary judgment does not change the Court's decision to consider the additional exemptions").

63 Id.