

POLICE REFORM AND ACCOUNTABILITY ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Since the start of the administration, the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division has opened 23 investigations into police departments. In the first five fiscal years of the administration, the department has opened more than twice as many investigations than were opened in the previous five fiscal years.

The department is enforcing 17 agreements with law enforcement agencies, including 13 consent decrees, and one post-judgment order.

- Consent Decrees: New Orleans Police Department, Puerto Rico Police Department; Seattle Police Department; Portland (Oregon) Police Department; Detroit Police Department; Virgin Islands Police Department; East Haven (Connecticut) Police Department; Warren (Ohio) Police Department; Albuquerque (New Mexico) Police Department; Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department-Antelope Valley; Cleveland Division of Police; Meridian (Mississippi) Police Department; Maricopa County (Arizona) Sheriff's Office

The vast majority of law enforcement agencies enter into voluntary agreements, however, the department has filed suit when agencies have been unwilling to correct patterns or practices of misconduct. The department is currently in litigation with regard to two law enforcement agencies:

- Alamance County (North Carolina) Sheriff's Office; Colorado City (Arizona) Police Department

The department currently has eight open investigations. In the majority of these investigations the department has issued findings or technical assistance letters.

- Technical Assistance Letters: Yonkers (New York) Police Department
- Ongoing Investigations: Chicago (Illinois) Police Department; Baltimore (Maryland) Police Department; Ville Platte (Louisiana) Police Department; Evangeline Parish (Louisiana) Sheriff's Office

The department does not always find constitutional violations. In the past six years, the department has concluded six investigations of law enforcement agencies without finding constitutional violations.
