

From: Ears <globalear@gmail.com>
Sent: Sunday, November 15, 2009 8:11 PM
To: ATR-Agricultural Workshops <agriculturalworkshops@usdoj.gov>
Subject: Why is seafood not included in your workshops?

It appears to me, from talking to clammers in West Florida, that something close to price fixing is going on by the clam wholesalers and canners.

We are working to open up a clam hatchery in St. Augustine, Florida, with the intention of selling directly to retail shops and restaurants so we should not have impact or even be noticed by the wholesalers. However, given that it's a no brainer that the US has lots of aquaculture capacity, enough to feed the world, it would be helpful to have some workshops on aquaculture.

Dwight Hines, Ph.D.
1523 State Road 13
St. Johns, Florida 32259