I am concerned about the lack of competition in agricultural markets.

Quite frankly, large agro-businesses frighten me as they are interested in profit, not the environment or my grand-daughter's well being.

We need to grow food which is safe for the environment, and good for human consumption.

And we need to know exactly what is on our foods (pesticides are poison, you know).

In general, we are getting more detached from our food, which IS life. Food is now being controlled by corporate types who want control.

We will all suffer in the end if changes aren't made. All being me and my grand-daughter, but you and yours too, and the land which sustains us, and needs to be healthy for generations.

Tighten controls on corporate types being in government positions, and vice versa. Our food should not be in the hands of those whose interests are improving their own ties and lots.

This whole food issue is a very serious issue, and I am trying to eat more locally, as the food sources are getting to be mega-businesses.

Thanks you...

and do please see "Food Incorporated" if you want to be informed, and have the nerve.

I would be surprised if you haven't watch it, but shame on you if you haven't yet.

Watch it with your family; they are the ones eating this food too.

Do you dare? Really?

Sincerely,

Jennifer L. Braverman, Va. 22743
