I believe that large corporations have too much control over policy and regulations related to food production and labeling. If Monsanto is producing genetically modified seeds/crops, I want to know that and want to be able to avoid such foods. I want to know what chemicals are put on the food that I'm eating. Organic standards should be strictly defined -- and should not include genetically modified food of any kind. Also, companies should be monitored to make sure they are not "cheating" on the organic standards that are defined.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to comment.

Sincerely,

Sumner Chase
