US Department of Justice

Dear US Department of Justice:

As an organic consumer, I am particularly concerned about Monsanto's control over the seed supply. I currently raise livestock grass fed and am severely outmatched by the system that is supported by companies like Monsanto and others. Land prices are driven up by artificial income produced by working taxpayers to pay farm subsidies. This is a little off the mark of this action alert but it is all connected. Those same subsidies that supposedly "help" farmers go right to the pockets of companies like Monsanto, which care nothing about the safety of our food supply and only care about the bottom line.

Also they exploit the fact that they are for the small farmer when the whole ag industry pushes for bigger machines, deeper genetic tampering and decreased man power. Sounds to me like they are trying to run a streamlined factory rather than grow good food. When is the last time you saw good food grown in a filthy factory.

Genetic engineering is also not tested to the full extent it needs to be. I have read research studies from other countries and they all point to a lot of the health problems that we now face as a nation. Cancer, autism, and obesity are all epidemics that affect us all.

personally I just want a fair chance to produce food of excellent quality. With the way things are now I feel I won't get that chance. But if we start tearing down the Fortress of agribusiness greed now, and return the control of the land back to the people, who have knowledge to care for it. We may still have decent farmland for our children.

Terrorists in planes killed thousands. Would it not be just as important if Greedy Companies kill millions.

Please help,

Johan Yeutson
