(S.D.N.Y.) - Comments on Proposed Final Judgment as to Defendants
Hachette, HarperCollins, and Simon & Schuster

Text of your email: Dear Mr. Read,

I was a long time and voracious reader before physical issues affected my ability to read.

Digital readers have allowed me to enjoy reading once again. They have truly been a life changing and life improving invention for me.

That said, I believe those of us reading digital books have been treated poorly by traditional publishers. Their books are often poorly formatted and we lose the right to lend the products, resell them, transfer to other devices, etc.

To have to pay increased priced with reduced rights due to collusion by the publishers is ridiculous. Outrageous, really.

While I think the settlement could go further to provide rights and protections to the consumer, please consider this email as support for the proposed settlement.

Sincerely, Pat Evans
