It is very important to me as a songwriter to have the ultimate right to decide where and who will use the music I compose and be justly compensated due royalties for music used.

To subject songwriters to accept what Spotify, Google/YouTube, etc, are offering won't be a good thing at all, and will financially hurt many songwriters who solely make their very living through creating music.

I pray that you, the Department of Justice will use much wisdom the appropriate decision that will benefit music creators and force entities who provide music services for the public to give those music creators their just due in royalties and nothing less.

Sincerely,

Terry Davis
