

1 STEPTOE & JOHNSON LLP
2 Patrick M. Norton (Pro Hac Vice)
3 Email: pnorton@steptoe.com
4 Brian M. Heberlig (Pro Hac Vice)
5 Email: bheberlig@steptoe.com
6 1330 Connecticut Avenue, NW
7 Washington, DC 20036
8 T: (202) 429-3000
9 F: (202) 429-3902

10 Christian A. Jordan (235081)
11 Email: cjordan@steptoe.com
12 2121 Avenue of the Stars, Suite 2800
13 Los Angeles, CA 90067
14 T: (310) 734-3200
15 F: (310) 734-3300

16 Counsel for IMI plc and Control Components, Inc.

17 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
18 CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, SOUTHERN DIVISION

19 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
20
21 Plaintiff,

22 vs.

23 STUART CARSON, HONG
24 CARSON, a/k/a "Rose Carson,"
25 PAUL COSGROVE, DAVID
26 EDMONDS, FLAVIO RICOTTI, and 27 HAN YONG KIM,

28 Defendants.

Case No. SA CR 09-0077-JVS

REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO INTERVENE BY IMI plc AND CONTROL COMPONENTS, INC.

Assigned to: Hon. James V. Selna

Date: October 13, 2009
Time: 8:00 a.m.
Place: Courtroom 10C
411 West Fourth Street
Santa Ana, CA 92701-4516

2009 OCT -6 PM 12:34
CLERK U.S. DISTRICT COURT
CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIF.
SANTA ANA
SY

FILED

ORIGINAL

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

I. INTRODUCTION ..... 1

II. ARGUMENT ..... 2

    A. Defendants Concede That The Companies May Intervene To Assert Claims Of Privilege ..... 2

    B. The Companies Have Standing To Intervene To Avoid Being
    Ordered To Conduct A Burdensome And Expensive Search For
    Documents Of No Or Doubtful Relevance ..... 4

    C. The Companies Have Standing To Challenge Defendants’
    Attempt To Obtain Documents In Their Possession Without
    Issuing A Rule 17(c) Subpoena ..... 7

III. CONCLUSION ..... 12

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page(s)

FEDERAL CASES

1
2
3
4 United States v. Bryan,
5 868 F.2d 1032 (9th Cir. 1989)..... 9, 10
6 United States v. Crawford Enterprises, Inc.,
7 735 F.2d 174 (5th Cir. 1984)..... 2, 3
8 United States v. Ferguson, Crim. No. 3:06CR 137 (CFD), 2007 WL
9 2815068 (D. Conn. Sept. 26, 2007) ..... 9
10 United States v. Fort,
11 472 F.3d 1106 (9th Cir. 2007)..... 9, 10
12 United States v. Fort,
13 478 F.3d 1099 (9th Cir. 2007) (Graber, J. concurring in the denial of 14 rehearing en banc)..... 10
15 United States v. Gatto,
16 763 F.2d 1040 (9th Cir. 1985)..... 9
17 United States v. Nixon,
18 418 U.S. 683 (1974)..... 7
19 United States v. RMI Co.,
20 599 F.2d 1183 (3d Cir. 1979)..... 8
21 United States v. Santiago,
22 46 F.3d 885 (9th Cir. 1995)..... 9
23 United States v. Stein,
24 488 F. Supp. 2d 350 (S.D.N.Y. 2007)..... Passim
25 United States v. Tadros,
26 310 F.3d 999 (7th Cir. 2002)..... 11
27 United States v. Wittig,
28 250 F.R.D. 548 (D. Kan. 2008)..... 9

OTHER AUTHORITIES

1
2 Fed. R. Crim. P. 16..... Passim
3 Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(E)..... 9
4 Fed. R. Crim. P. 17..... 2
5 Fed. R. Crim. P. 17(c) ..... Passim
6 Fed. R. Crim. P. 17(c)(2)..... 7
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 The Court should permit IMI plc (“IMI”) and Control Components, Inc.
3 (“CCI”) (collectively “the Companies”) to intervene to oppose Defendants’ Joint 4 Motion to Compel Discovery (“Motion to Compel”). Defendants concede that the 5 Companies may intervene to assert claims of privilege over the material requested 6 but fail to acknowledge that there is far more privileged material at issue than the 7 few privileged charts produced to the government pursuant to a non-waiver
8 agreement. The Companies also have standing to assert privilege claims over
9 (1) the “investigation materials” generated by Steptoe & Johnson LLP (“Steptoe”)
10 during a privileged internal investigation on behalf of IMI and a Special
11 Committee of its Board of Directors, and (2) the substantial volume of privileged 12 documents in the electronic databases compiled by Steptoe and Ernst & Young 13 (“EY”) during the investigation, which Defendants seek in their entirety. Since 14 CCI’s Plea Agreement does not require it to produce privileged documents to the 15 government, none of these materials are conceivably in the government’s 16 constructive possession for purposes of Rule 16.

17 The Companies also have standing because of the significant burden and 18 expense they would face if the Court were to grant the Motion to Compel and order
19 CCI to produce a volume of documents exponentially greater than the materials
20 produced by the Companies during the investigation. Defendants erroneously 21 contend that CCI faces no burden because it could merely copy the electronic 22 databases in their entirety. However, the Plea Agreement does not obligate CCI to 23 produce all documents in its possession upon request, only those related to “corrupt
24 payments.” The electronic databases contain documents from entire CCI email 25 servers and hundreds of employee hard drives, the overwhelming majority of 26 which have nothing to do with corrupt payments. These materials are not in the 27 government’s constructive possession for purposes of Rule 16, nor are they 28 relevant to the criminal charges. The Companies have standing to object to the

1 production of the entire electronic databases, or to any effort to compel them to 2 conduct expensive and burdensome “fishing expeditions” in the databases when 3 they have already expended substantial resources producing relevant documents to 4 the government, which have all been provided to Defendants in discovery.

5 Finally, the Companies have standing to object to requests for the production
6 of documents in the Companies’ exclusive possession that do not comply with the 7 Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. If Defendants had followed the normal
8 procedure for seeking evidence in the possession of third parties and issued a Rule
9 17(c) subpoena, the Companies would have been able to move to quash or modify
10 any improper requests. Instead, relying on United States v. Stein, 488 F. Supp. 2d 11 350 (S.D.N.Y. 2007), a single out-of-circuit decision directly contradicted by 12 binding Ninth Circuit authority, Defendants have concocted a theory of 13 “constructive possession” to attempt to trigger Rule 16. Defendants’ motives for 14 doing so are obvious, as they do not contest that they would be unable to obtain the 15 documents requested pursuant to a proper Rule 17(c) subpoena. The Companies 16 have standing to object to Defendants’ attempt to circumvent Rule 17 because the 17 Companies’ interests would be directly and adversely affected if Defendants are 18 successful.

19 II. ARGUMENT

20 A. Defendants Concede That The Companies May Intervene To 21 Assert Claims Of Privilege

22 Defendants acknowledge that third parties may intervene in criminal 23 proceedings to challenge the production of documents on privilege grounds.
24 Defendants’ Partial Opposition to Motion to Intervene by IMI plc and Control 25 Components, Inc. at 2 (“Opp’n”). Indeed, “[a]s a general proposition, persons or 26 corporations which are adversely affected by the disclosure of privileged material 27 have the right to intervene, assuming standing, in pending criminal proceedings to 28 seek protective orders, and if denied, to seek immediate appellate review.” United

1 States v. Crawford Enterprises, Inc., 735 F.2d 174, 176 (5th Cir. 1984). As a 2 result, Defendants agree it is “appropriate” for the Companies to intervene to 3 oppose Defendants’ Motion to Compel on “issues of privilege.” Opp’n at 1.

4 Defendants ignore, however, that the Motion to Compel implicates far more
5 of the Companies’ privileged documents than the handful of privileged charts
6 produced to the government pursuant to a non-waiver agreement. Defendants seek 7 all of the “investigation materials” that Steptoe prepared in connection with a
8 privileged internal investigation conducted on behalf of IMI and the Special 9 Committee, including any interview memoranda, notes of witness interviews, and 10 reports and supporting documentation. Id. at 23-25. Defendants do not contend 11 that these materials are not privileged or that the privilege has been waived.
12 Rather, they rely solely on the “constructive possession” argument and contend 13 that the material should be produced under Rule 16 even though none of it is in the 14 government’s possession. Id.

15 In addition, Defendants seek the production of the entire electronic databases
16 compiled by Steptoe and EY. The databases, however, contain a substantial 17 volume of material that is protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the 18 attorney work product doctrine. For instance, the databases contain the contents of 19 the entire hard drive of IMI’s general counsel, which obviously includes counsel’s
20 work product and privileged communications. A search for emails on which IMI’s 21 general counsel was the author, recipient or copied results in 73,838 email
22 messages. A similar search for another IMI in-house attorney results in 23,588
23 hits. Declaration of Brian M. Heberlig in Support of Reply Memorandum ¶ 4
24 (“Heberlig Reply Decl.”). During the relevant time period, IMI was represented in 25 various matters by the outside law firms Steptoe, Allen & Overy, and Pinsent 26 Masons, among others. A search for emails using the domain names of these 27 firms’ email addresses in the to, from or cc line results in hits of 1,810, 3,617, and 28 1,700 emails, respectively. Id. ¶ 5.

1 Under no conceivable scenario are these privileged documents in the 2 constructive possession of the government by virtue of CCI's Plea Agreement.
3 The Plea Agreement states that CCI is obligated to produce to the Department of 4 Justice (the "Department") upon request only "non-privileged" documents relating 5 to "corrupt payments to foreign public officials or to employees of private 6 customers . . . ." Plea Agreement ¶ 6 (Ex. C to Miller Decl., Docket # 101-5)
7 (emphasis added). CCI has no obligation whatsoever to produce privileged 8 documents to the Department. Thus, the government does not constructively 9 possess the Steptoe investigation materials or any privileged documents in the 10 electronic databases for purposes of Rule 16.

11 In addition, the CCI Plea Agreement binds only CCI. Plea Agreement ¶ 2.
12 IMI has no cooperation agreement with the Department. The Steptoe investigation
13 was conducted on behalf of IMI and the Special Committee. Declaration of Brian 14 M. Heberlig ¶ 3 (Docket # 104) ("Heberlig Decl."). The Steptoe investigation
15 materials are not in the possession of CCI. In fact, Steptoe has not even provided
16 its interview memoranda and witness interview notes to anyone at IMI. Heberlig 17 Reply Decl. ¶ 6. Because these materials are not in the possession of CCI, they 18 cannot conceivably be in the government's constructive possession by virtue of 19 CCI's Plea Agreement.

20 In sum, the Companies have standing to intervene in this proceeding to 21 assert claims of privilege over all potentially privileged materials implicated by the 22 Motion to Compel, not solely the small handful of documents in the government's 23 possession.

23 B. The Companies Have Standing To Intervene To Avoid Being
24 Ordered To Conduct A Burdensome And Expensive Search For
25 Documents Of No Or Doubtful Relevance

26 The Companies also have standing to intervene in this matter because their 27 interests will be directly and adversely affected if the Court grants the Motion to 28 Compel. Defendants seek the production of a substantial volume of documents that are in the exclusive possession of the Companies. If the Court were to grant

1 the motion, it would be compelling the Companies to produce a volume of 2 documents more than 1800 times greater than the documents they have provided to 3 the government (approximately 75 million pages in the electronic databases versus 4 approximately 40,000 pages produced to the Department).<sup>1</sup> The Companies have 5 obvious standing to intervene to attempt to avoid the significant burden and 6 expense that would be imposed by such an order.

7 Defendants' claim that the Companies would face "no burden" if the Court
8 grants the Motion to Compel is based on a fundamental misunderstanding of both 9 CCI's Plea Agreement and the contents of the electronic databases. Opp'n at 2.
10 Defendants falsely assert that the Companies "committed to provide corporate 11 records and data at the government's beck and call" in the Plea Agreement. Id. at 12 3. Defendants made similar assertions in the Motion to Compel in an attempt to 13 mislead the Court into believing that CCI is obligated to produce any document in 14 its possession to the government upon demand. See Motion to Compel at 6
15 ("CCI's Plea Agreement gives the government the unqualified right to demand
16 from CCI the production of any non-privileged documents within CCI's control.") 17 (emphasis added); id. at 8 ("CCI's Plea Agreement reflects that the government has 18 the legal right to demand production by CCI of any of its non-privileged 19 documents in connection with the government's case.") (emphasis added). To the 20 contrary, the Plea Agreement gives the Department the ability to request only non-21 privileged documents relating to "corrupt payments to foreign public officials or to 22 employees of private customers . . . ." Plea Agreement ¶ 6 (emphasis added). CCI
23 is not obligated to produce any corporate record whatsoever, as Defendants' 24 erroneously suggest. Thus, even if the "constructive possession" argument has any

---

25 <sup>1</sup> CCI previously represented in its Sentencing Memorandum that the 26 databases contained 5.5 million pages of documents. In preparing this reply
27 memorandum, counsel determined that in fact there are approximately 5.6 million 28 documents in the databases, which consist of approximately 75 million pages of material. Heberlig Reply Decl. ¶ 2 & n.1.

1 merit, which the Companies' dispute, the only CCI documents possibly in the 2 government's constructive possession are those relating to "corrupt payments."

3 Defendants fail to acknowledge that the overwhelming majority of the 4 approximately 75 million pages of documents in the electronic databases are 5 unrelated to "corrupt payments" and therefore not in the government's constructive
6 possession (nor, for that matter, are they relevant to the criminal charges in this 7 case). As stated previously, the electronic databases include entire CCI email 8 servers and forensic images of over 200 hard drives of company employees.
9 Heberlig Decl. ¶ 5. No effort was made to screen these materials before they were 10 compiled into the searchable databases. Indeed, the vast majority of these 11 documents have never been reviewed by Steptoe or EY because they were not 12 responsive to the various key word searches conducted to identify relevant 13 documents relating to corrupt payments. Defendants are simply mistaken when 14 they suggest that the government has the right under the Plea Agreement to ask
15 CCI to produce the entire contents of the electronic databases. The Companies 16 have standing to object to the production of the Companies' entire electronic 17 databases.

18 The Companies also have standing to contest any effort to obtain a narrower 19 order requiring the Companies to produce additional documents relating to 20 "corrupt payments." Identifying such documents would largely duplicate the 21 extensive efforts already undertaken by the Companies to identify and produce 22 relevant documents -- organized by witness and by the improper payments that 23 Steptoe identified in its investigation -- to the Department. In undertaking these 24 efforts, counsel acted pursuant to instructions from IMI and the Special Committee 25 to be fully cooperative with the Department and produce all relevant, non-26 privileged documents reflecting potentially improper payments to employees of 27 state-owned and privately-owned CCI customers. Heberlig Decl. ¶ 8. Other than 28 the handful of privileged charts at issue, all of these documents have been produced to Defendants in discovery.

1 CCI would suffer significant harm if ordered to search for additional 2 documents relating to “corrupt payments,” which would require time-consuming,
3 burdensome and expensive document searching and review by the Companies’
4 counsel. The Companies spent millions of dollars in attorneys’ and accountants’
5 fees cooperating with the Department’s investigation and identifying the 6 documents that have been provided to Defendants in discovery. CCI has already 7 accepted responsibility for its conduct and has been punished by the strong
8 sanctions imposed by the Court. Ordering CCI to perform Defendants’
9 investigation for them, and conduct a highly subjective search for unspecified 10 documents of questionable relevance, would be profoundly unfair at this stage of 11 the proceedings. Thus, the Court should permit the Companies to intervene to 12 protect their interests in this matter.

13 C. The Companies Have Standing To Challenge Defendants’
14 Attempt To Obtain Documents In Their Possession Without
15 Issuing A Rule 17(c) Subpoena

16 The Companies have standing to object to Defendants’ attempt to obtain 17 documents in the Companies’ exclusive possession pursuant to Rule 16 based on a 18 novel “constructive possession” theory that is an obvious attempt to avoid 19 complying with Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 17(c). Had Defendants
20 complied with Rule 17(c), the normal procedure for obtaining evidence from a 21 third party in a criminal case, the Companies would have had obvious standing to 22 move to quash or modify any improper requests. Fed. R. Crim. P. 17(c)(2) (“[T]he 23 court may quash or modify the subpoena if compliance would be unreasonable or 24 oppressive.”). Defendants also do not dispute that they would be unable to obtain 25 the majority of the information requested pursuant to a Rule 17(c) subpoena, which 26 requires requests to be specific, relevant and evidentiary. See United States v.
27 Nixon, 418 U.S. 683, 701 (1974).

28 Defendants erroneously suggest that the Companies have no standing to object to the Motion to Compel because Defendants are seeking evidence pursuant to Rule 16 instead of Rule 17(c). For purposes of determining whether a company

1 has standing to intervene in a criminal case to avoid the production of privileged or 2 confidential documents, “there is no discernible difference in effect between the 3 enforcement of a Rule 17(c) subpoena and the grant of a Rule 16 discovery
4 request.” United States v. RMI Co., 599 F.2d 1183, 1187 (3d Cir. 1979).
5 Moreover, RMI Co. refutes Defendants’ claim that no authority permits a party to 6 intervene in a Rule 16 dispute for any reason other than privilege. Id. at 1185,
7 1187 (recognizing that intervention was appropriate in a Rule 16 dispute where a 8 company argued “it would be prejudiced by the unprotected disclosure of the 9 documents, containing as they do highly confidential and proprietary business
10 information concerning the financial affairs”). Because both procedural vehicles
11 have the potential to result in the disclosure of protected documents to a criminal 12 defendant, a company may intervene in either proceeding to protect its interests.
13 Id. at 1187. The case for intervention in a Rule 16 proceeding is particularly 14 compelling where the documents at issue are in the third-party intervenor’s
15 possession.

16 Defendants’ also criticize the Companies for not citing authority permitting 17 a third party to intervene to challenge the government’s attempt to obtain
18 documents in the third party’s possession in circumvention of Rule 17(c). Opp’n 19 at 2, 8. The reason no such cases exist, however, is that aside from a single out-of-20 circuit, distinguishable case, United States v. Stein, 488 F. Supp. 2d 350 (S.D.N.Y.
21 2007) (addressed below), no court has adopted Defendants’ novel position that 22 documents in the actual possession of a third party are within the government’s 23 constructive possession for purposes of Rule 16.<sup>2</sup> Rather, when criminal 24 defendants seek materials of the sort requested here, the proper procedure is to 25

---

26
27 <sup>2</sup> Even in Stein, moreover, the court permitted third party witness KPMG to 28 “submit evidence and argument” in opposition to the defendants’ attempt to obtain documents in KPMG’s possession. 488 F. Supp. 2d at 356 n.22.

1 issue a Rule 17(c) subpoena to the party in possession of the documents.<sup>3</sup>
2 Defendants' claim that under "well-settled law," CCI's plea agreement
3 "unquestionably gives the government control of the documents Defendants seek,"
4 Opp'n at 8 n.4, is based solely on Stein, which is obviously not binding on this 5 Court. No other court appears to have followed Stein and held that documents in 6 the possession of a cooperating witness are within the government's constructive
7 possession for purposes of Rule 16.

8 Stein is contradicted by binding Ninth Circuit law that Defendants do not 9 address. In the Rule 16 context, the Ninth Circuit has limited the application of the 10 constructive possession concept to documents possessed by federal agencies other 11 than the prosecution. See United States v. Bryan, 868 F.2d 1032, 1036 (9th Cir.
12 1989); United States v. Santiago, 46 F.3d 885, 893 (9th Cir. 1995). Absent federal 13 agency involvement, the Ninth Circuit treats "physical possession [of documents] 14 as the dispositive factor" in determining whether materials are discoverable under 15 Rule 16. United States v. Fort, 472 F.3d 1106, 1118 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing United 16 States v. Gatto, 763 F.2d 1040, 1046-49 (9th Cir. 1985)). Thus, evidence created 17 or gathered by third parties (including even state law enforcement authorities) 18 "becomes subject to the disclosure obligation established by Rule 16(a)(1)(E) when 19 it passes into federal possession." Fort, 472 F.3d at 1118 (emphasis added); see 20 also id. ("Gatto's emphasis on possession as the triggering requirement for Rule 16 21 accords with decisions by this and other circuits.").

22 As Judge Graber described the holding in Fort, in an opinion concurring in 23 the denial of a petition for rehearing en banc:

24 For the purposes of Rule 16(a)(1)(E), this court has held, "[t]he 25 prosecutor will be deemed to have knowledge of and access to 26 anything in the possession, custody or control of any federal

---

27 <sup>3</sup> See, e.g., United States v. Wittig, 250 F.R.D. 548, 552 (D. Kan. 2008);
28 United States v. Ferguson, Crim. No. 3:06CR137 (CFD), 2007 WL 2815068 (D.
Conn. Sept. 26, 2007).

1 agency participating in the same investigation of the defendant.’
2 United States v. Bryan, 868 F.2d 1032, 1036 (9th Cir. 1989)
3 (emphasis added). The majority opinion does not deem the 4 prosecution to have knowledge of or access to anything
5 generated by a state or local actor that is not actually known by 6 and in the possession of the prosecutor. In other words, . . .
7 Fort establishes no principle of constructive possession.”

8 United States v. Fort, 478 F.3d 1099, 1100 (9th Cir. 2007) (Graber, J. concurring 9 in the denial of rehearing en banc) (emphases in original).

10 If the constructive possession doctrine does not apply in the Rule 16 context
11 to documents in the possession of state and local law enforcement authorities, it 12 has even less application to documents in the possession of private entities such as 13 CCI. In sum, Stein is flatly inconsistent with binding authority in the Ninth 14 Circuit, where the “triggering requirement” for Rule 16 discoverability is that the 15 records be in the “physical possession” of the government. Fort, 472 F.3d at 1118.

16 In any event, Stein is easily distinguishable from this case because KPMG’s
17 cooperation agreement required it to produce ““all documents, records,
18 information, and other evidence in KPMG’s possession, custody, or control as may 19 be requested by the [U.S. Attorney’s] Office or the IRS,”” and did not permit 20 KPMG to assert any claim of privilege over contemporaneous records relating to 21 the investigation. 488 F. Supp. 2d at 353. Here, as set forth above, CCI’s Plea
22 Agreement permits the government to request only non-privileged documents
23 limited to the specific subject matter of “corrupt payments.” Plea Agreement ¶ 6.

24 As the Companies will further explain if permitted to file a brief on the 25 merits of the Motion to Compel, even if it were not directly contrary to Ninth 26 Circuit law, there is good reason not to follow Stein. Stein dramatically alters the 27 normal functioning of criminal discovery by theoretically permitting criminal 28 defendants to gain access to any materials in the possession of a third-party cooperating witness. If Stein were to become widely accepted, such a rule would

1 create a significant disincentive to cooperating with the government. In all cases
2 where a corporation produces documents, as in this case, it must necessarily collect
3 and review more documents than it ultimately produces as responsive or relevant 4 to the investigation. If private, third-party cooperating witnesses were required to 5 satisfy the government's Rule 16 obligations, they would need to review every 6 document in their possession -- usually, as in this case, after a settlement -- to 7 determine whether it is "material to the preparation of the defense." This would 8 impose enormous burdens on private companies, essentially imposing additional 9 sanctions in the form of legal fees after companies have already settled with the 10 government.

11 In addition, as Defendants suggest, the logic of Stein applies to the 12 government's Brady obligations as well, which is neither practical nor advisable.
13 See Motion to Compel at 36-42 (arguing that pursuant to Stein, the government has 14 a Brady obligation to produce any exculpatory evidence in CCI's possession). CCI 15 is not the prosecutor and cannot, nor should it be required to, identify what 16 evidence is favorable to the defense for purposes of Brady. If Stein is correct, the 17 government would be obligated to review all evidence in the physical possession 18 of its cooperating witnesses for Brady, which has never been the law and would 19 have negative consequences for the government and cooperating witnesses alike.
20 See United States v. Tadros, 310 F.3d 999, 1005 (7th Cir. 2002) ("Brady does not 21 require the Government to gather information or conduct an investigation on the 22 defendant's behalf. . . . Brady prohibits suppression of evidence, it does not require 23 the government to act as a private investigator and valet for the defendant, 24 gathering evidence and delivering it to opposing counsel.").

25 Defendants make a series of overblown, and frankly ridiculous, claims that 26 the Companies are trying to "orchestrate the government's case against 27 Defendants," "run this show," engage in "gamesmanship," "cabin 'relevant'
28 documents to documents they believe implicate Defendants," and "thwart Defendants' right to information." Opp'n at 3, 6, 7, 11. To the contrary, the

1 Companies seek only to protect their interests in not being compelled to produce 2 privileged documents or engage in a burdensome and expensive search for 3 unspecified documents through a process that does not comply with the Federal 4 Rules of Criminal Procedure. If Defendants are able to identify with specificity 5 admissible evidence that they need from the Companies to defend themselves, they 6 are free to follow the rules and serve a Rule 17(c) subpoena. The Companies will 7 respond in good faith and comply with any requests permitted by the Federal Rules
8 of Criminal Procedure. The Court should not permit Defendants to circumvent this 9 well-established procedure and engage in the broad "fishing expedition"
10 represented by the Motion to Compel.

11 The Court should permit the Companies to intervene and be heard on these 12 important issues over which they have obvious standing.

13 III. CONCLUSION

14 For the foregoing reasons, IMI and CCI respectfully request that the Court
15 grant the Motion to Intervene and permit the Companies to submit a brief in 16 opposition to the Defendants' Motion to Compel on or before October 21, 2009.

17 Dated: October 5, 2009

Respectfully submitted,

19 STEPTOE & JOHNSON LLP

20 By:
21 Brian M. Heberlig
22 Counsel for IMI plc and Control
23 Components, Inc.
24
25
26
27
28