Slinde Nelson LLC, Nicholas J. Slinde, OSB No. 003900, Darian A. Stanford, OSB No. 994491, Of Attorneys for Plaintiff.

BACKGROUND

This case involves Defendants Sharon Bankofier, Duane Bankofier and Oregon Realty Company ("Oregon Realty")'s representation of the Veryl G. Gibson Trust (the "Trust") and Veryl G. Gibson, a then 81-year old widower with protracted dementia and memory loss, in the sale of certain real property located in Multnomah County and the subsequent ill advised reinvestment of said proceeds into four Tenants in Common ("TIC") investments.

PARTIES

1.

Patricia N. Gibson is an Oregon resident and the daughter of Veryl Gibson. Patricia Gibson brings this action in her capacity as the successor trustee for the Trust. Patricia Gibson replaced Veryl Gibson as the successor trustee for the Trust on or about July 22, 2010, after it was determined that Veryl Gibson was unable to manage the interests of the Trust due to progressive dementia and memory loss.

2.

Defendant Sharon Bankofier was at all relevant times an Oregon resident and a licensed realtor with Oregon Realty.

3.

Defendant Duane Bankofier was at all relevant times Sharon Bankofier's husband who, although not formally affiliated with Oregon Realty, nonetheless participated in providing Veryl Gibson and the Trust with financial and investment advice.

4.

Chicago Title Insurance Company of Oregon (“Chicago Title”) was at all relevant times an Oregon corporation in the business of facilitating the buying and selling of real estate.

5.

Equity Advantage, Inc. (“Equity Advantage”) was at all relevant times an Oregon corporation in the business of facilitating 1031 tax deferred exchanges.

FACTS

6.

The Trust was created on or about January 17, 2006 by and for the benefit of Veryl Gibson at the direction of Sharon Bankofier and Oregon Realty.

7.

From 1974-2010, Veryl Gibson's only income derived from her activities as an Avon representative. After her husband's death in December 1991, Veryl Gibson was left with minimal assets that consisted of a home, car and other retirement related investments. Veryl Gibson was not a sophisticated investor, and at the time of the transaction giving rise to this complaint, she relied on a combination of social security and retirement income to cover her personal expenses.

8.

Over time, Sharon Bankofier and Duane Bankofier ingratiated themselves as advisors for Veryl Gibson's financial and other affairs. Veryl Gibson relied on Sharon Bankofier and Duane Bankofier for real estate investment and financial advice to the exclusion of Veryl Gibson's familial relations.

9.

On or about May 16, 2007, Sharon Bankofier and Oregon Realty were retained to represent Veryl Gibson and the Trust in the sale of real property owned by the Trust located at 7800 SE 162nd Avenue, Portland, Oregon 97236 (the “Property”). The Property was sold to Scott and Sandy Campbell for $1,250,000. $250,000 of the sales price was allocated to a house located on the Property and $1,000,000 to a neighboring pasture property. As part of the transaction, Veryl Gibson retained a life estate in a home located on the Property.

10.

During the negotiation of the sale of the Property, Sharon Bankofier and Duane Bankofier convinced Veryl Gibson to invest $1,000,000 of the proceeds from the sale of the Property (the “Trust Money”) via a 1031 exchange into four separate TIC investments. A TIC is a highly risky and illiquid investment which pools money from investors to own a single property. As a

TIC owner, an investor has an individual fractional interest in the relevant property and shares in the associated liabilities and obligations. Sharon Bankofier and Duane Bankofier promised that Veryl Gibson would not lose her principal investment and would enjoy returns of 7.5%-15% per annum.

11.

On June 29, 2007, the transaction closed. Sharon Bankofier and Oregon Realty were paid a $31,250 commission.

12.

At the instructions of Sharon Bankofier and Duane Bankofier, acting as agents (Sharon Bankofier) or de facto agents (Duane Bankofier) of Oregon Realty, Veryl Gibson selected Chicago Title to close the transaction and Equity Advantage to facilitate the 1031 exchange of the Trust Money into the TICs.

13.

Based on the advice and counsel of Sharon Bankofier, Duane Bankofier and Oregon Realty, Veryl Gibson on behalf of the Trust placed the Trust Money into the TICs. This advice was given without regard to whether 1) Veryl Gibson met the necessary accredited investor criteria and/or 2) the investment was suitable for Veryl Gibson's needs as a then 81-year old woman living on social security and retirement income. This advice was also given despite the fact that Sharon Bankofier and Oregon Realty knew that at least one of the TIC investments was already embroiled in litigation.

14.

But for the advice and counsel of Sharon Bankofier, Duane Bankofier and Oregon Realty regarding the suitability of the investment and facilitation of the same, Veryl Gibson would not have put the Trust Money into the TICs. Sharon Bankofier and Duane Bankofier had been given notice by Veryl Gibson's daughters (including Patricia Gibson) that Veryl Gibson was experiencing dementia and memory loss and that her continued care was critical to any reinvestment strategy.

15.

Chicago Title and Equity Advantage knew or should have known that Veryl Gibson was a vulnerable person and should have taken steps to determine her capacity to close the transaction and reinvest the Trust Money in the TIC's.

16.

The Trust Money is now invested in four separate TICs. This investment is not yielding the monthly income that Sharon Bankofier, Duane Bankofier and Oregon Realty represented would be sufficient to cover Veryl Gibson's monthly expenses. The Trust is unable to sell its interest and has been asked to subsidize current operating losses of the TIC. Most if not all of these TIC investments are involved in various stages of litigation and there is little chance the Trust will ever be able to recover monies invested.

17.

On or about July 22, 2010, Patricia Gibson replaced Veryl Gibson as successor trustee for the Trust after it was determined that Veryl Gibson was unable to manage the interests of the Trust due to progressive dementia and memory loss.
