ADVISORY PANEL ON COUNTRY INFORMATION

The independent Advisory Panel on Country Information was established under the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 to make recommendations to the Home Secretary about the content of the Home Office’s country of origin information material. The Advisory Panel welcomes all feedback on the Home Office’s country of origin information material. Information about the Panel’s work can be found on its website at www.apci.org.uk.

It is not the function of the Advisory Panel to endorse any Home Office material or procedures. In the course of its work, the Advisory Panel directly reviews the content of selected Home Office COI documents, but neither the fact that such a review has been undertaken, nor any comments made, should be taken to imply endorsement of the material. Some of the material examined by the Panel relates to countries designated or proposed for designation for the Non-Suspensive Appeals (NSA) list. In such cases, the Panel’s work should not be taken to imply any endorsement of the decision or proposal to designate a particular country for NSA, nor of the NSA process itself.

RECENT HISTORY

As reported by the FCO in its Country Profile of 7 March 2007

“Since 1979, civilian governments have held power in Ecuador. Powerful interest groups and public sector unions have all played an influential role in the political process. Since the 1990s, indigenous groups have also begun to exert greater influence on the political scene... Jamil Mahuad, a former mayor of Quito and the candidate of the centrist Democracia Popular (DP) was Ecuador’s elected President from 1998-2000. Mr Mahuad signed a peace agreement with Peru in October 1998. Corruption scandals and chronic economic problems, including the banking collapse led to a military/indigenous backed coup against Mahuad in January 2000.”

“The military officers announced the creation of a parliament of salvation and decreed that Mahuad had been removed from office. A triumvirate, which included the then commander-in-chief of the armed forces and the current, democratically elected President, was appointed to lead the government. However, the heads of the National Security Council swiftly negotiated the dissolution of the triumvirate in favour of a constitutional succession of power. On 22 January 2000, the then vice-president, Gustavo Noboa, assumed the presidency. Noboa was a political independent with no formal ties to any of the parties in Congress.”

“Presidential Elections were held in November 2002. Lucio Edwin Gutiérrez, a former Army colonel who briefly took power in a coup in January 2000, won with 54% of the vote. Gutiérrez’s main rival, Alvaro Noboa, a banana and shipping magnate secured 45% of the vote. Gutiérrez’s Patriotic Society Party forged an electoral alliance with the indigenous movement’s political arm, Pachakutik. President Gutiérrez took office in January 2003 with the aim of implementing a five point plan to tackle corruption and poverty - improve competitiveness and security and effectively manage international policy. In January 2004 the alliance with Pachacutik was formally broken...”

Lucio Gutiérrez was removed as President by Congress on 20 April 2005 for ‘abandoning his position’. Gutiérrez’s removal followed a series of large-scale demonstrations, predominantly in Quito. The main concern of the demonstrators was the removal, on two occasions, of the Supreme Court and the ‘politically endorsed’ return of former President Abdala Bucaram. A State of Emergency for 19 hours on 15 April was followed by more demonstrations on 19 and 20 April. Gutiérrez's removal was preceded by the resignation of the Chief of Police and the withdrawal of support from the Armed Forces. He was replaced by President Alfredo Palacio, a cardiologist from Guayaquil. Palacio was Vice-President under Gutiérrez.”

“Former President Gutiérrez had left Ecuador for Brazil, and finally Colombia, where he was granted political asylum. Gutiérrez returned to Ecuador in October 2005 and was immediately arrested and imprisoned. The Ecuador Supreme Court released him in March 2006. Gutiérrez made an attempt to stand again for the Presidency, but this was denied.” [8a]
Recent Events and Political Developments

As recorded by the FCO:

“Ecuador held Presidential (first round) and Congressional elections on 15 October 2006. Eleven Presidential candidates were accepted to run in the first round – a second round (of just two remaining candidates) was held on 26 November. Rafael Correa (Alianza Pais) was the clear winner (by some 13%)."

“President Correa was sworn in on 15 January [sic] 2007. He has appointed members of his cabinet, and has been visiting neighbouring countries in Latin America. He has vowed to stamp out corruption and to remove political influence from state institutions. With this in mind, he has announced that a referendum will take place on 15 April to ask whether the public support his idea for a Constituent Assembly to be formed to re-draft elements of the Constitution. This proposal also needs the support of Congress where Correa will require the support of other political parties since he has no political party of his own in Congress."

“Former president Palacio had been keen to promote social policies in the health and educational sector, a theme which President Correa has undertaken to follow."

“However resistance from the Executive and the Legislature meant that the Palacio’s plans for constitutional reform were unsuccessful. A new Supreme Court comprising of 31 judges was finally appointed in early December 2005, almost one year after its dissolution by former President Gutiérrez."

“During Palacio’s tenure there was much criticism, mainly from the private sector, over reforms of the Hydrocarbons Law, which aims to limit oil company revenues in participation contracts with the State, the Oxy (Occidental Oil) affair and, as a consequence, the suspension of negotiations on a Free Trade Agreement (FTA) between the US and Ecuador. Correa has said that he will not re-open negotiations.”

Economy

Inflation: 3.21% (October 2006).
Major Industries: Oil, bananas, fishing, fresh cut flowers, shrimp farming and timber.
Major trading partners: United States, Latin American countries, European Union, Japan and South Korea.

As noted by the CIA in their World Factbook on Ecuador, last updated on 23 January:

“Ecuador has substantial petroleum resources, which have accounted for 40% of the country’s export earnings and one-third of central government budget revenues in recent years. Consequently, fluctuations in world market prices can have a substantial domestic impact. In the late 1990s, Ecuador suffered its worst economic crisis, with natural disasters and sharp declines in world petroleum prices driving Ecuador’s economy into free fall in 1999. Real GDP contracted by more than 6%, with poverty worsening significantly...In March 2000, Congress approved a series of structural reforms that also provided the framework for the adoption of the US dollar as legal tender. Dollarization stabilized the economy, and growth returned to its pre-crisis levels in the years that followed. Under the administration of Lucio Guitierrez – January 2003 to April 2005 – Ecuador benefited from higher world petroleum prices. However, the government under Alfredo Palacio has reversed economic reforms that reduced Ecuador's vulnerability to petroleum price swings and financial crises, allowing the central government greater access to oil windfalls and disbursing surplus retirement funds." [4a]

HUMAN RIGHTS

The US State Department in their Country Reports on Human Rights Practices 2006, published on 6 March 2007 stated:

“While the government generally respected the human rights of its citizens, there continued to be serious problems in the following areas: isolated unlawful killings and use of excessive force by security forces; occasional torture, abuse, and killing of suspects and prisoners by security forces, sometimes with impunity; poor prison conditions; arbitrary arrest and detention; a high number of pretrial detainees; and corruption and denial of due process within the judicial system. Members of the National Police were accused of murder, attempted murder, rape, extortion, kidnappings, and alien smuggling. Societal problems continued, such as violence against women; discrimination against women, indigenous people, Afro-Ecuadorians, and homosexuals; trafficking in persons and sexual exploitation of minors; and child labor.” [16a]

The FCO in its Country Profile of 7 March 2007 stated:

Ecuador’s Human Rights record does not attract regular criticism from Human Rights organisations. However, the arrest of eight policemen for their role in extra-judicial killings in March 2002 showed that abuses, including against basic economic and social rights, still occur... Ecuador is a signatory of the six major Human Rights instruments, has a National Human Rights Plan and a Constitution that is one of the most advanced in terms of human rights principles in Latin America.” [8a]

Amnesty International in their Annual Report 2006 (covering events from January to December 2005) stated:

“The political atmosphere remained unstable. Following public protests over interference in the appointment of Supreme Court judges, first by Congress and later by President Gutiérrrez, Congress ousted and replaced the President on 20 April. In October, when he returned from Colombia, he was arrested and charged with corruption and undermining the security of the state.

The number of refugees fleeing the internal armed conflict in Colombia grew, asylum applications reportedly reaching 20,000 by October. Colombian state forces and armed opposition groups reportedly entered Ecuador’s increasingly militarized border areas.
The appointment of the Human Rights Ombudsman in July was criticized by human rights defenders for apparently flouting procedures aimed at ensuring the involvement of civil society. The candidate supported by civil society organizations was denied the opportunity to be considered for the position." [1a]
