

COUNTRY OF ORIGIN INFORMATION REPORT

ZIMBABWE

20 JULY 2009

Contents

Preface

Latest News

Events in Zimbabwe from 13 June to 20 July 2009

Reports on Zimbabwe published or accessed between 13 June and 20 July 2009

Paragraphs

Background Information

1. GEOGRAPHY	1.01
Map	1.06
2. ECONOMY	2.01
3. HISTORY	3.01
Matabeleland Insurgency 1983–87	3.04
Events between 1989 and 2007	3.07
4. SANCTIONS AND COMMONWEALTH SUSPENSION	4.01
5. ELECTIONS AND POWER-SHARING TALKS 2008	5.01
Parliamentary elections: March 2008	5.01
Presidential elections: March – June 2008	5.04
Global Political Agreement	5.08
MDC Compromises	5.11
Tsvangirai sworn in as Prime Minister	5.13
6. RECENT DEVELOPMENTS	6.01
Politically motivated violence	6.13
ZANU-PF punishes its supporters	6.13
Inter-party violence	6.16
7. CONSTITUTION	7.01
8. POLITICAL SYSTEM	8.01
Overview	8.01
The Executive Branch	8.02
The Legislative Branch	8.03
Political Parties	8.04
ZANU-PF	8.05

Human Rights

9. INTRODUCTION	9.01
10. SECURITY FORCES	10.01
Police	10.06
Arbitrary arrest and detention	10.14
Torture	10.16
Extra-judicial killings	10.20
Armed forces	10.22
Arbitrary arrest and detention	10.25
Torture	10.26
Extra-judicial killings	10.29
Central Intelligence Organisation	10.30
Other government forces	10.41

ZANU-PF Youth	10.41
Treatment of recruits in the NYS Scheme	10.47
Abuses by the youth militia	10.49
War Veterans	10.55
Abuses by War Veterans	10.58
Impunity	10.62
11. MILITARY SERVICE	11.01
Conscientious objection	11.05
12. JUDICIARY	12.01
Organisation	12.02
Judicial independence	12.04
13. ARREST AND DETENTION – LEGAL RIGHTS	13.01
Role of police and security apparatus.....	13.01
Arrest and detention	13.04
14. PRISON CONDITIONS	14.01
15. DEATH PENALTY	15.01
16. POLITICAL AFFILIATION	16.01
Freedom of political expression	16.01
Political prisoners/politically motivated violence	16.03
Freedom of association and assembly	16.05
Opposition groups and political activists	16.09
The Movement for Democratic Change (MDC)	16.09
17. FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND MEDIA	17.01
Overview of the Zimbabwean media	17.01
Public Order and Security Act (POSA)	17.11
Newspapers and journals	17.14
Television and radio	17.18
The internet	17.21
Treatment of journalists	17.22
18. HUMAN RIGHTS INSTITUTIONS, ORGANISATIONS AND ACTIVISTS	18.01
Abductions of human rights activists	18.12
Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA)	18.19
19. FREEDOM OF RELIGION	19.01
Overview	19.01
Religious demography	19.08
Religious groups	19.09
Witchcraft	19.12
20. ETHNIC GROUPS	20.01
Shona	20.02
Ndebele	20.03
Whites	20.05
Asians	20.09
Farm workers of Malawian, Zambian and Mozambican origin	20.11
Albinos	20.17
Other ethnic minorities	20.21
21. LESBIAN, GAY, BISEXUAL AND TRANSGENDER PERSONS	21.01
Legal rights	21.01
Treatment by, and attitudes of, State Authorities	21.07
Societal treatment and attitudes	21.09
Lesbians	21.14
LGBT social scene.....	21.18
22. DISABILITY	22.01
23. WOMEN	23.01
Overview	23.01

Legal rights	23.04
Political rights.....	23.06
Social and economic rights.....	23.08
Family law: marriage, divorce and inheritance	23.12
Prostitution.....	23.17
Reproductive rights – access to abortion.....	23.19
Violence against women.....	23.24
Politically motivated violence	23.27
Domestic violence.....	23.32
Rape	23.33
24. CHILDREN.....	24.01
Overview	24.01
Basic legal information.....	24.04
Legal rights	24.06
Violence against children	24.07
Childcare and protection	24.13
Child labour	24.18
Education	24.19
Health and welfare.....	24.26
HIV/AIDS	24.29
Documentation	24.32
25. TRAFFICKING	25.01
26. TEACHERS.....	26.01
27. MEDICAL ISSUES.....	27.01
General	27.01
Cholera epidemic.....	27.08
Health care facilities.....	27.13
Health care professionals.....	27.17
Access to drugs	27.19
HIV/AIDS.....	27.22
Overview.....	27.22
Availability of treatment.....	27.25
Cost and availability of ARVs.....	27.30
Women and children.....	27.32
Mental health	27.34
28. HUMANITARIAN ISSUES	28.01
Land reform	28.01
Recent land confiscations.....	28.05
Food shortages	28.13
Politicisation of food.....	28.27
29. FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT	29.01
30. INTERNALLY DISPLACED PEOPLE (IDPs).....	30.01
Operation Murambatsvina	30.07
31. CITIZENSHIP AND NATIONALITY	31.01
32. OFFICIAL DOCUMENTATION.....	32.01
Forged and Fraudulently Obtained Documents	32.01
33. EXIT/ENTRY PROCEDURES.....	33.01
Treatment of returned failed asylum seekers.....	33.01
34. EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS	34.01

Annexes

- Annex A – Chronology of major events
- Annex B – Political organisations
- Annex C – Prominent people: past and present
- Annex D – Government of National Unity
- Annex E – MDC party symbols and slogans
- Annex F – List of abbreviations
- Annex G – References to source material

Preface

- i This Country of Origin Information Report (COI Report) has been produced by COI Service, United Kingdom Border Agency (UKBA), for use by officials involved in the asylum/human rights determination process. The Report provides general background information about the issues most commonly raised in asylum/human rights claims made in the United Kingdom. The main body of the report includes information available up to 12 June 2009. The 'Latest News' section contains further brief information on events and reports accessed from 13 June to 20 July 2009. The report was issued on 20 July 2009
- ii The Report is compiled wholly from material produced by a wide range of recognised external information sources and does not contain any UKBA opinion or policy. All information in the Report is attributed, throughout the text, to the original source material, which is made available to those working in the asylum/human rights determination process.
- iii The Report aims to provide a brief summary of the source material identified, focusing on the main issues raised in asylum and human rights applications. It is not intended to be a detailed or comprehensive survey. For a more detailed account, the relevant source documents should be examined directly.
- iv The structure and format of the COI Report reflects the way it is used by UKBA decision makers and appeals presenting officers, who require quick electronic access to information on specific issues and use the contents page to go directly to the subject required. Key issues are usually covered in some depth within a dedicated section, but may also be referred to briefly in several other sections. Some repetition is therefore inherent in the structure of the Report.
- v The information included in this COI Report is limited to that which can be identified from source documents. While every effort is made to cover all relevant aspects of a particular topic, it is not always possible to obtain the information concerned. For this reason, it is important to note that information included in the Report should not be taken to imply anything beyond what is actually stated. For example, if it is stated that a particular law has been passed, this should not be taken to imply that it has been effectively implemented unless stated.
- vi As noted above, the Report is a collation of material produced by a number of reliable information sources. In compiling the Report, no attempt has been made to resolve discrepancies between information provided in different source documents. For example, different source documents often contain different versions of names and spellings of individuals, places and political parties, etc. COI Reports do not aim to bring consistency of spelling, but to reflect faithfully the spellings used in the original source documents. Similarly, figures given in different source documents sometimes vary and these are simply quoted as per the original text. The term 'sic' has been used in this document only to denote incorrect spellings or typographical errors in quoted text; its use is not intended to imply any comment on the content of the material.

- vii The Report is based substantially upon source documents issued during the previous two years. However, some older source documents may have been included because they contain relevant information not available in more recent documents. All sources contain information considered relevant at the time this Report was issued.
- viii This COI Report and the accompanying source material are public documents. All COI Reports are published on the RDS section of the Home Office website and the great majority of the source material for the Report is readily available in the public domain. Where the source documents identified in the Report are available in electronic form, the relevant web link has been included, together with the date that the link was accessed. Copies of less accessible source documents, such as those provided by government offices or subscription services, are available from the COI Service upon request.
- ix COI Reports are published regularly on the top 20 asylum intake countries. COI Key Documents are produced on lower asylum intake countries according to operational need. UKBA officials also have constant access to an information request service for specific enquiries.
- x In producing this COI Report, COI Service has sought to provide an accurate, balanced summary of the available source material. Any comments regarding this Report or suggestions for additional source material are very welcome and should be submitted to UKBA as below.

Country of Origin Information Service

UK Border Agency
Apollo House
36 Wellesley Road
Croydon CR9 3RR
United Kingdom

Email: cois@homeoffice.gsi.gov.uk

Website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/country_reports.html

INDEPENDENT ADVISORY GROUP ON COUNTRY INFORMATION

- xi The Independent Advisory Group on Country Information (IAGCI) was set up in March 2009 by the Chief Inspector of the UK Border Agency to make recommendations to him about the content of the UKBA's country of origin information material. The IAGCI welcomes feedback on UKBA's COI Reports, COI Key Documents and other country of origin information material. Information about the IAGCI's work can be found on the Chief Inspector's website at <http://www.ociukba.homeoffice.gov.uk>
- xii In the course of its work, the IAGCI reviews the content of selected UKBA COI documents and makes recommendations specific to those documents and of a more general nature. A list of the COI Reports and other documents which have been reviewed by the IAGCI or the Advisory Panel on Country Information (the independent organisation which monitored UKBA's COI material from September 2003 to October 2008) is available at <http://www.ociukba.homeoffice.gov.uk/>

- xiii Please note: it is not the function of the IAGCI to endorse any UKBA material or procedures. Some of the material examined by the Group relates to countries designated or proposed for designation to the Non-Suspensive Appeals (NSA) list. In such cases, the Group's work should not be taken to imply any endorsement of the decision or proposal to designate a particular country for NSA, nor of the NSA process itself.

Independent Advisory Group on Country Information contact details:

Office of the Chief Inspector of the UK Border Agency

4th floor, 8-10 Great George Street,

London, SW1P 3AE

Email: chiefinspectorukba@homeoffice.gsi.gov.uk

Website: <http://www.ociukba.homeoffice.gov.uk/>

Latest News

EVENTS IN ZIMBABWE, FROM 13 JUNE TO 20 JULY 2009

The news articles below have been organised thematically and then chronologically.

Politics and politically motivated violence

20 July “Zanu-PF has allegedly deployed youths and war veterans across the country to campaign for the adoption of the so-called Kariba Draft of the constitution which is at the centre of a dispute between President Mugabe and the MDC.” The Movement of Democratic Change (MDC) stated that the draft (originally drawn-up before the formation of the government of national unity) should only be used as a point of reference for a new constitution.

The Zimbabwe Times, Zanu-PF to campaign for Kariba Draft, 20 July 2009.

<http://www.thezimbabwetimes.com/?p=19963>

Date accessed 20 July 2009

16 July ZimOnline reported that human rights lawyer, Alec Muchadehama, has been summonsed for trial on charges of corruption and subverting the justice system by unlawfully gaining the release of a group of political activists. Mr Muchadehama, who is representing several members of the MDC facing charges ranging from banditry to terrorism, had previously been released on bail because of a lack of evidence.

ZimOnline, Worrying signs of growing violence and intimidation, 16 July 2009.

<http://www.zimonline.co.za/Article.aspx?ArticleId=4855>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai accused ZANU-PF of employing “cynical and diabolical” strategies to chip away at the MDC’s majority in parliament. Several MDC MPs have been convicted and sentenced to prison terms, on what the MDC claims are trumped-up charges. The MDC expressed dismay at the suspension this week of Chipinge West MP, Mathias Mlambo, who is now barred from attending sessions of Parliament.

VOA News, Zimbabwe’s MDC Accuses ZANU-PF of ‘Cynical’ Plan to Erase Its Majority, 16 July 2009.

<http://www.voanews.com/english/Africa/Zimbabwe/2009-07-16-voa46.cfm>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

15 July Six ZANU-PF governors will lose their jobs next month. Legal experts say the party has been delaying the appointments as it is worried about losing Senate seats in Parliament. Provincial governors are ex-officio members of the Senate. However, four of the five MDC governors-designate are already Parliamentarians, three in the House of Assembly and one an elected Senator. They will have to relinquish their constituency seats in order to take up their ex officio seats, causing the vacancies to be filled through by-elections.

The Zimbabwean, Six Zanu (PF) governors to go, 15 July 2009.

<http://www.thezimbabwean.co.uk/2009071522814/weekday-top-stories/six-zanu-pf-governors-to-go.html>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

- 8 July Over the past two weeks MDC activists have reported increased attacks by ZANU-PF supporters. The attacks are believed to be linked to a plan to intimidate people ahead of a constitutional referendum.
The Irish Times, Mugabe loyalists step up politically motivated attacks on MDC activists, 8 July 2009.
<http://www.irishtimes.com/newspaper/world/2009/0708/1224250235554.html>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 1 July A Mutare magistrate remanded Roy Bennett, the MDC Deputy Agriculture Minister nominee until 13 October, for the commencement of his trial. Bennett, is charged with banditry, insurgency, sabotage and terrorism. Bennett denies the charge.
SWRadio Africa, Civil Servants to get Salaries, July 2009.
<http://www.swradioafrica.com/news010709/bennett010709.htm>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 29 June Zimbabwe was plunged into political crisis after Morgan Tsvangirai threatened to withdraw his party from the power-sharing government. The threat was made following moves by President Mugabe to exclude Mr Tsvangirai from chairing a cabinet meeting.
The Telegraph, Zimbabwe coalition in crisis as MDC threatens 'disengagement', 29 June 2009.
<http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/africaandindianocean/zimbabwe/5685950/Zimbabwe-coalition-in-crisis-as-MDC-threatens-disengagement.html>
Date accessed 2 July 2009
- 27 June Shuah Mudiwa, the MDC MP for Mutare West, was sentenced to seven years in jail after being found guilty of kidnapping a 12-year old girl in 2007. Mudiwa is the third MDC MP from Manicaland Province to be convicted of a criminal offence. Human rights campaigners say that the law was being applied selectively in a deliberate tactic to reduce the number of MDC MPs in Parliament.
The Zimbabwe Times, MDC MP sentenced to seven years in jail, 27 June 2009.
<http://www.thezimbabwetimes.com/?p=18972>
Date accessed 2 July 2009
- 21 June At a meeting of the Zimbabwean diaspora at Southwark Cathedral, Morgan Tsvangirai appealed for the best and brightest Zimbabweans to return to help rebuild the country. In his assessment of the situation in Zimbabwe, Mr Tsvangirai claimed that "peace and stability" were returning. However, Mr Tsvangirai's plea was shouted down by the assembly with chants of "Mugabe must go" and calls for politicians' children to return first.
The Independent, UK Zimbabweans jeer Tsvangirai as he urges them to return home, 21 June 2009.
<http://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/home-news/uk-zimbabweans-jeer-tsvangirai-as-he-urges-them-to-return-home-1711565.html>
Date accessed 21 June 2009
- 20 June A magistrate was forced to abandon a case involving 108 MDC supporters accused of demanding back property, including livestock, that was seized by ZANU-PF supporters during last year's elections. The magistrate reported that he had decided to abandon the case following persistent attempts to influence the outcome by the Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO).
The Zimbabwe Times, CIO causes magistrate to abandon case, 20 June 2009.
<http://www.thezimbabwetimes.com/?p=18461>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

- 19 June Four members of the pressure group, Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA), were reported to have sustained severe beatings at the hands of police after gathering to commemorate International Refugee Day on 18 June. The group, who were detained overnight, were denied medical treatment despite having reportedly received serious injuries while in custody.
SWRadio Africa, CIO causes magistrate to abandon case, 19 June 2009.
<http://www.swradioafrica.com/news190609/woza190609.htm>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 18 June Sokwanele reported that there continued to be “worrying” signs of violence and intimidation by security forces and ZANU-PF supporters directed at MDC supporters. The article noted a number of recent attacks on MDC supporters, including the beating of MDC supporters and the burning down of the their homes.
Sokwanele, Worrying signs of growing violence and intimidation, 18 June 2009.
<http://www.sokwanele.com/thisiszimbabwe/archives/4292>
Date accessed 17 July 2009

Freedom of Speech

- 9 July The government owned (and ZANU-PF supporting) Saturday Herald has revived the much-reviled Nathaniel Manheru column following an absence caused by the establishment of the inclusive government. The MDC has accused the column of fomenting violence against the opposition and is demanding the the article is dropped again.
The Zimbabwean, Hate speech back in state media, 9 July 2009.
<http://www.thezimbabwean.co.uk/2009070922591/human-rights/hate-speech-back-in-state-media.html>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 23 June Morgan Tsvangirai’s MDC has launched a weekly newsletter to keep ordinary Zimbabweans informed of the goings-on in the unity government. The newsletter, reportedly distributed to 400,000, and funded by the US Government, has come in for attack from ministers and supporters of ZANU-PF.
The Times (Zimbabwe), Tsvangirai accused of spilling secrets, 22 June 2009.
<http://www.thetimes.co.za/SpecialReports/Zimbabwe/Article.aspx?id=1021644>
Date accessed 16 July 2009

Economy

- 17 July Zimbabwe's Finance Minister Tendai Biti revised upwards his forecast of economic growth to 3.7 percent during 2009. Mr Biti stated that the power-sharing government has made great strides in stabilising the economy and attracting foreign aid for the country.
ZimOnline, Worrying signs of growing violence and intimidation, 17 July 2009.
<http://www.zimonline.co.za/Article.aspx?ArticleId=4863>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 2 July The government announced that it would start paying civil servants salaries instead of allowances after it emerged that its coffers had improved. Finance minister Tendai Biti is expected to announce the change when he presents his mid-term policy statement on July 16.

- Civil servants have been getting a monthly allowance of US$100, which many said was not enough to sustain them.
The Zimbabwe Independent, Civil Servants to get Salaries, 2 July 2009.
<http://www.thezimbabweindependent.com/index.php/local/22972-civil-servants-to-get-salaries>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 24 June Zimbabweans in the diaspora are remitting between US$600 million and US$1 billion a year, helping prop up the economy, said Economic Planning and Development Minister Elton Mangoma.
Radiovop, Diasporans remit more than US$500m', 24 June 2009.
http://www.radiovop.com/index2.php?option=com_content&do_pdf=1&id=6677
Date accessed 25 June 2009
- 23 June The US-dollarisation of the economy has helped spur foreign investment in Zimbabwe and prompted the large Zimbabwean exile community to send more remittances home, reported the planning and investment minister Elton Mangoma. The minister also noted that the economy has turned around in the past four months, with inflation coming under control and employment and industrial capacity use doubling.
Reuters, Zimbabwe's economy begins to recover: minister, 23 June 2009.
<http://af.reuters.com/article/zimbabweNews/idAFLN12795520090623?feedType=RSS&feedName=zimbabweNews>
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- Humanitarian issues
- 11 July Bulawayo city council is reported to have been forced to close some of the city's health care facilities because of a critical shortage of health professionals to run the health centres. The city council reported that it had leased four clinics to private investors in order to save them from collapse after health professionals deserted council clinics.
The Standard, Bulawayo Closes Understaffed Council Clinics, 11 July 2009.
http://www.thezimbabwestandard.com/index.php?option=com_content&view=article&id=20792:--as-bulawayo-closes-understaffed-council-clinics&catid=31:zimbabwe-stories&Itemid=66
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 7 July Municipal health officials in Zimbabwe's second city, Bulawayo, are reported to be struggling to cope with growing waiting lists of people in need of HIV treatment and too few doctors to prescribe the drugs. IRIN reported that a large proportion of those on the waiting list for Anti-Retrovirals are waiting upwards of a year for the medication.

IRIN PlusNews, Doctors and ARVs in short supply, 7 July 2009.
http://www.zimbabwesituation.com/jul8_2009.html#Z12
Date accessed 17 July 2009
- 29 June Zimbabwe's justice minister, Patrick Chinamasa, announced that the government was considering freeing prisoners early in an effort to reduce prison mortality rates that have seen around 1000 die from malnutrition in the first six months of 2009.
The Times (Zimbabwe), Starving Zim prisoners to be released, 29 June 2009.
<http://www.thetimes.co.za/News/Article.aspx?id=1025393>
Date accessed 2 July 2009

18 June Visiting Zimbabwe on a six day fact finding mission, Amnesty International Secretary General, Irene Khan warned that Zimbabwe risked sparking a round of retributive violence if the government continued to ignore calls to prosecute perpetrators of last year's political violence. Ms Khan described the human rights situation in the country as "precarious" noting that "Impunity remains unaddressed".
The Zimbabwe Times, Nation faces risk of retributive violence, 18 June 2009.
<http://www.thezimbabwetimes.com/?p=18357>
Date accessed 17 July 2009

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

REPORTS ON ZIMBABWE PUBLISHED OR ACCESSED BETWEEN 13 JUNE AND 20 JULY 2009Freedom House <http://freedomhouse.org>

Country Report: Zimbabwe 2009

<http://freedomhouse.org/template.cfm?page=21&year=2009>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa<http://www.idasa.org.za>

States in Transition Observatory, GNU Watch Zimbabwe

June 2009, dated 6 July 2009

http://www.idasa.org.za/index.asp?page=programme_details.asp%3FRID%3D54

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum <http://www.hrforumzim.com>

Political Violence Report: May 2009, 30 June 2009

http://www.hrforumzim.com/frames/inside_frame_monthly.htm

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Human Rights Watch <http://www.hrw.org>

Diamonds in the Rough, 26 June 2009

<http://www.hrw.org/node/83960>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Amnesty International <http://www.amnesty.org>

Without justice there can be no real healing in Zimbabwe, 18 June 2009

<http://www.amnesty.org/en/news-and-updates/news/without-justice-there-can-be-no-real-healing-in-zimbabwe-20090618>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Amnesty International <http://www.amnesty.org>

Zimbabwe's progress on human rights 'woefully slow', 18 June 2009

<http://www.amnesty.org/en/news-and-updates/news/zimbabwe-progress-human-rights-woefully-slow-20090618>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Refugee Documentation Centre (Ireland)

Zimbabwe: Treatment of MDC supporters, 17 June 2009

<http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/country,COI,...ZWE,,4a3ba7ba1a,0.html>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

United States Department of State <http://www.state.gov>

Trafficking in Persons Report 2009 - Zimbabwe, 16 June 2009

<http://www.state.gov/g/tip/rls/tiprpt/2009/index.htm>

Date accessed 17 July 2009

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Background information

1. GEOGRAPHY

- 1.01 Zimbabwe is located in southern Africa and has an area of 390,580 sq km. It is land locked and is bordered to the north-west by Zambia, to the east by Mozambique, to the south by South Africa and to the south-west by Botswana. (Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment: Zimbabwe, 14 October 2008) [90j] (Geography)
- 1.02 The principal towns (those with a population of over 100,000) are Harare (the capital), Bulawayo, Chitungwiza, Mutare (Umtali) and Gweru (Gwelo). (Europa World Online, accessed 10 February 2009) [1b] (Area and Population)
- 1.03 The Economist Intelligence Unit's Zimbabwe Country Profile 2008, dated 9 May, noted:
- “The population may have declined in recent years. The IMF estimated Zimbabwe's population at 13.2m in 2006. However, the indications from local data, including the 2002 census, are that the population may actually be declining, probably reflecting a combination of the HIV/AIDS pandemic and emigration. ... The population of the capital, Harare, including its Chitungwiza township, is around 2m. The majority of Zimbabweans are Shona, with the Shona outnumbering the Ndebele by about four to one. The Ndebele live mainly in the south and west. ... The most widely spoken language is Shona and its dialects, although English, which is universally spoken in towns, is the official language.” [24n] (p10)
- 1.04 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment: Zimbabwe, 14 October 2008 noted that in addition to the main Shona and Ndebele ethnic groups there are, in addition, several minor ethnic groups such as the Tonga, Venda and Hlengwe/Shangaan. [90k] (Demography)
- 1.05 The same source also noted:
- “Today there are approximately one million practising Roman Catholics in Zimbabwe. There are also significant representations of the Anglican, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Dutch Reformed Churches.
- “There are many African churches of different denominations, such as the Zimbabwe Assemblies of God and the Vapostori sects. Small Hindu, Muslim and Jewish communities exist in some urban centres. The Jewish community had been estimated at 925, but is declining rapidly through outmigration.” [90k] (Demography)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

MAP

- 1.06 The following links provide a selection of different maps of Zimbabwe. The Multimaps and Google maps are searchable.

Page 01h30R (544836) 10-57

United Nations

Provincial map of Zimbabwe with district boundaries:
<http://ochaonline2.un.org/Portals/161/zimbabwe%20-%20provincial%20and%20district%20boundaries.pdf>

UNHCR map:

<http://www.unhcr.org/cgi-bin/texis/vtx/publ/opendoc.pdf?tbl=PUBL&id=3dee2cf00>

Link to Google for more detailed searches:

<http://maps.google.co.uk/maps?hl=en&tab=wl>

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

2. ECONOMY

- 2.01 The Economist Intelligence Unit's Zimbabwe Country Profile 2008, dated 9 May 2008, noted that: "Zimbabwe used to have a well-developed manufacturing sector, relatively diversified commercial farms, productive peasant agriculture, varied mineral resources and good tourism potential. As a result, it had a more diversified economy than any of its neighbours. However, the ongoing economic and political crisis has decimated the economy." [24n] (p12)
- 2.02 The Times reported on 11 February 2009 that 94 per cent of Zimbabweans are unemployed. [82k] A large number of Zimbabweans rely on remittances (cash/credit) sent by relatives working abroad. It was estimated by the Global Poverty Research Group (attached to the universities of Oxford and Manchester) that "... in 2006, 50 percent of all households surveyed in Zimbabwean cities and towns were regular recipients of money, food and other goods ..." (The Inter Press Service News Agency, 24 January 2009) [15a] However, The Times reported, on 6 December 2008, the plight of those not in receipt of remittances. It noted that some families were foraging for food and surviving on little more than wild berries or nuts. [82z] The Economist Intelligence Unit noted in February 2009 that "... the economic collapse means that around 70% of the population require food aid..." [24p] (p3)
- 2.03 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa's group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch (SITO Report) April 2009, that "... an average family of six needs [US]$386 a month for a basic 'basket' of goods that includes food as well as rent and utilities." [9a] (p4) The National Post (Canada) reported on 15 October 2008 that: "... 90% live on less than US$2 a day ..." [18a]
- 2.04 Throughout 2008, and into 2009, hyperinflation caused the Zimbabwean dollar to devalue on a daily basis. Possibly as a result of these increases, the government stopped publishing the country's inflation rate in July 2008, at which point inflation stood at 231 million per cent. The Guardian reported, on 6 December 2008, that: "John Robertson, one of Zimbabwe's most respected economists, has accurately estimated the rate of inflation in the past. He says that it shot through the billions, trillions and quadrillions between August and October until it reached 1.6 sextillion percent last month. A sextillion has 21 noughts." [34b] IRIN News reported on 21 January 2009 that the inflation rate had reached 6.5 Quindecillion Novemdecillion per cent (65 followed by 107 noughts) with prices doubling on an approximately daily basis. [10af]
- 2.05 At the end of January 2009 the Government announced the effective abandonment of the Zimbabwean dollar in favour of multiple foreign currencies. This formalised what was happening in the economy with most goods only available for purchase with the US dollar or the SA rand. (BBC News, 29 January 2009) [3p] The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that while the "... economic situation remains dire ..." currency reforms and policy changes introduced by the unity government has resulted in "... some signs of improvement: ... prices have stabilised, basic stocks are returning to shops and civil servants are being paid at least a modest stipend." [100a] (Overview & p9) However, the SITO Report May 2009 noted that: "Since the withdrawal of the Zimbabwean Dollar as a currency, a South African Rand shortage is visible, pushing up the price of US Dollars and bringing back the informal black market. To add to this, many banks and building societies are having difficulty meeting the increased demand for US Dollars from civil servants.” [9b] (p3)

- 2.06 The Economist Intelligence Unit estimated in its May 2009 Zimbabwe Report that “... inflation will remain high in 2009, prices on the ground are expected to come down throughout the year, and once the highs of 2008 drop out of the calculations in 2010 overall inflation will fall quickly. Indeed, a period of deflation is a distinct possibility, especially if external financial assistance does not materialise, prompting a squeeze on liquidity.” The Economist has forecast that the average rate of inflation will be around minus 7.2 per cent in 2010. [24a] (p8)
- 2.07 The Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) noted that one of the first major actions of the MDC, as part of the unity government, was the publication of a revised budget. Finance Minister, Tendai Biti (of the MDC), announced measures to reduce government spending to around US$1bn. Gaps in the public finances will be plugged by rising taxation as the economy recovers. However, the EIU report stated its belief that Mr Biti’s estimates for economic growth were overly optimistic, “... and given the difficulty of raising revenue ... [EIU] expects the government to continue to rein in spending in real terms in an attempt to keep the deficit under control. As a result, government services, particularly healthcare and education, will continue to deteriorate.” [24a] (p5-6)
- 2.08 The SITO Report April 2009 went on to note that the unity government announced that “... 142,835 pensioners will now be able to receive their monthly payments to the value of US$25.” [9a] (p3)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

3. HISTORY

- 3.01 Europa World Online – Zimbabwe (accessed 10 February 2009) noted that the country that is now Zimbabwe was established in 1923 as the British colony of Southern Rhodesia. In 1965, the white-dominated Rhodesia Front administration of Prime Minister Ian Smith made an illegal unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) for Rhodesia from the United Kingdom. The Republic of Zimbabwe achieved formal independence from the United Kingdom on 18 April 1980. [1d] (Recent History)
- 3.02 Europa goes on to note that following the unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) by Ian Smith in 1965 black nationalists organised the fight for majority rule. The principal nationalist groups were the Ndebele-dominated Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), led by Joshua Nkomo, and the Shona-dominated Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), led initially by the Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole and later by Robert Mugabe. [1d] (Recent History)
- 3.03 Europa also noted that ZAPU and ZANU merged their military efforts in 1976 in the uneasy Patriotic Front alliance. In 1979, according to Europa 2005, the UDI administration concluded an 'internal settlement' with some black nationalists, under which Bishop Abel Muzorewa became Rhodesia's first black Prime Minister. Later in 1979, all parties to the conflict participated in the Lancaster House Conference in London, which agreed an independence settlement. Initially Mugabe adopted a conciliatory stance towards Nkomo but relations became strained and in February 1982 Nkomo was removed from the Cabinet, with two PF colleagues under suspicion of plotting against the government. [1d] (Recent History)

MATABELELAND INSURGENCY 1983–87

- 3.04 Europa stated that the alleged discovery of large caches of arms on ZAPU-owned properties in Matabeleland in 1982 led to Joshua Nkomo's dismissal from government office. Dissidents from Nkomo's former guerrilla force, ZIPRA, perpetrated indiscriminate acts of violence. The Government responded by sending the North Korean-trained Fifth Brigade to Matabeleland in early 1983 to quell dissent. The mainly Shona Fifth Brigade was accused of committing atrocities against civilians in its 'pacification' campaign and it alienated support for the Government amongst Matabeleland's Ndebele population. It has been estimated that as many as 10,000 civilians died during the Fifth Brigade's campaign. [1c] (p1254-55) An article published by Wordpress.org on 12 March 2006 stated that the number killed could have been up to 20,000 civilians. [48]
- 3.05 Europa noted that a unity agreement between ZANU-PF and ZAPU was reached in 1988. The merged party retained ZANU-PF's name and Nkomo became one of two vice-presidents and took a senior cabinet post. An amnesty in 1988 led to a rapid improvement in the security situation in Matabeleland. Constitutional changes in 1987 ended reserved seats for whites and created an executive Presidency, replacing the ceremonial post of President formerly held by Canaan Banana and incorporating the post of Prime Minister. Mugabe became Zimbabwe's first executive President at the end of 1987. [1c] (p1255)

- 3.06 In July 1999, The Independent noted that on 19 October 1999, at Vice-President Joshua Nkomo's funeral, President Mugabe expressed his regret for the actions of the Fifth Brigade in Matabeleland during the 1980s. At a memorial service for Nkomo in October 1999, Mugabe announced the willingness of the Government to compensate the families of the thousands of people killed during the insurgency. [4g] Further promises of compensation projects were made in June 2002 by John Nkomo, the then Minister for Home Affairs, but according to the Zimbabwe Standard on 13 July 2003 this compensation had not been paid. [20f]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

EVENTS BETWEEN 1989 AND 2007

- 3.07 The Economist Intelligence Unit's Zimbabwe Profile 2008, noted that:
- “Although Mr Mugabe has ruled since independence, a steady decline in living standards throughout the 1990s led to growing dissatisfaction with the government and galvanised civic groups and the country's trade union movement; the country was rocked by a series of nationwide strikes in the late 1990s. Buoyed by this success, sections of the union movement eventually formed an opposition political party, the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC), in September 1999. It led a successful campaign against Mr Mugabe's proposed amendment of the constitution (which included some controversial clauses on land reform), which culminated in a ‘no’ vote in a national referendum on the issue in February 2000 that was widely perceived as a vote of no confidence in the government.” [24n] (p4)
- 3.08 Europa World Online (accessed 12 June 2009) reported that:
- “The Government embarked on a campaign to restore its popularity prior to the legislative elections, which, it was announced in March 2000, were to be held in May rather than April. Illegal occupations of white-owned farms by black ‘war veterans’ (many of whom, too young to have taken part in the war of independence, were suspected of having been paid to participate), which began in late February, were rumoured to have been organized by the Government in an attempt to regain support through the land issue. ... Mugabe repeatedly denied that his administration was behind the occupations, but made no secret of his support for them. The invasions became increasingly violent, and two farmers were killed in April [2000]. ...” [1d] (Recent history)
- 3.09 The BBC Timeline for Zimbabwe, last updated on 9 April 2009, noted that Mugabe's party (ZANU-PF) narrowly fought “... off a challenge from the opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) led by Morgan Tsvangirai, but lost its power to change the constitution.” [3ag] Europa noted that there were widespread reports of violence and polling irregularities. International observers declared that the elections had not been free and fair. [1d] (Recent history)
- 3.10 Throughout 2000 and 2001 the government issued thousands of notices appropriating white farms, providing farmers with little in the way of a right of appeal. Europa noted that in November 2001 the government “... amended the Land Act by decree. According to the revised legislation, any farm issued with a 'notice of acquisition' would become the property of the state with immediate effect; previously, a farm owner had been served 90 days' notice." During this time, there were reports of continuing violent land seizures against white farmers by militia groups such as the 'War Veterans'. [1d] (Recent history)

3.11 In March 2002 Mugabe was re-elected in presidential elections and was declared the "... winner on 13 March, with 56.2% of the valid votes cast; Tsvangirai secured 42.0%." Europa went on to note that the elections were condemned as seriously flawed by the opposition and foreign observers with reports of "... widespread electoral fraud and intimidation of the electorate and of observers by members of ZANU-PF." [1d] (Recent history)

3.12 Europa noted that:

"Immediately after the election the Government enacted the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act [AIPPA], which required all journalists reporting in Zimbabwe to be approved by the state; seven journalists had been detained under the Act by early May. In April the NCA [National Constitutional Association] organized demonstrations in support of demands for a new constitution and a rerun of the presidential election, at which more than 80 demonstrators were arrested. Violence directed at supporters of the MDC intensified following the election, allegedly committed by ZANU-PF supporters, and more than 50 people were reported to have been killed between the election and the end of April." [1d] (Recent history)

3.13 Europa noted that:

"Land seizures ... escalated, and in late March 2002 the Government listed almost 400 white-owned farms for compulsory acquisition, bringing the area scheduled for redistribution to the black population to around 85% of total commercial farmland. In June Mugabe issued an order listing some 2,900 white-owned farms for seizure ... In September the Land Acquisition Act was amended to allow the eviction of white farmers within seven days, as opposed to the 90 days previously required." [1d] (Recent history)

3.14 Europa noted that in Parliamentary elections held in March 2005, Mugabe won two-thirds of the votes allowing him "... to amend the Constitution. International observers from the African Union (AU) and the Southern African Development Community (SADC) [initially] endorsed the results ..." but "... later reversed their opinion and called for investigations into allegations of electoral fraud." The opposition, US and EU governments again condemned the results citing widespread electoral fraud. [1d] (Recent history)

3.15 Europa noted that:

"In late May 2005 the Government launched Operation Murambatsvina ('Sweep Away the Rubbish'), which targeted black market trading—principally in foreign currency and fuel—and 'general lawlessness'. The MDC claimed that it was a punitive action against the urban poor who had voted against ZANU—PF in the elections in March. Shanty towns were razed to the ground in Harare and other major cities, including Bulawayo and Gweru. The operation attracted widespread international condemnation and, according to a report by UN-Habitat published in late July, some 700,000 people were made homeless ...” [1d] (Recent history)

3.16 Europa noted that:

“In late August 2005 the House of Assembly approved a bill which ... provided for the reintroduction of a 66-member Senate (abolished in 1990) as the second chamber of the legislature; senatorial elections were held in late November 2005. The MDC was deeply divided over the issue of participating in the elections. Tsvangirai opposed electoral participation, advocating mass protests and ‘democratic resistance’; however, a faction led by the party's Secretary-General, Welshman Ncube, fielded 26 candidates. ZANU-PF won 43 of the 50 elected seats, receiving 73.7% of the vote; MDC candidates took the remaining seven seats with 20.3% of the vote. The MDC effectively split in two, a ‘pro-Senate’ faction electing Arthur Mutumbara as its leader in February 2006. The rump of the party re-elected Tsvangirai as its President in late March ...” [1d] (Recent history)

3.17 Europa noted that:

“In mid-February 2007 police used tear gas and water cannons to prevent an MDC rally from proceeding in Harare, despite the organization obtaining a High Court order allowing the rally to take place. In late February anti-Government protesters took control of Budiro township in Harare for several hours, setting up roadblocks of boulders and burning tyres. Political tensions intensified further when Tsvangirai was arrested in mid-March along with five other members of the MDC after riot police violently dispersed a ‘Save Zimbabwe’ prayer meeting in Harare’s Highfield township. One activist was killed by the police and Tsvangirai suffered severe injuries while in police custody. The Government stated that the rally breached a recently introduced three-month ban on political gatherings. The incident provoked widespread international condemnation and demands for the release of those detained. Following an SADC summit in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, in late March, it was announced that Mbeki had agreed to mediate between the MDC and the Zimbabwean Government; however, there were further reports of the mistreatment of MDC activists in police custody, provoking renewed opposition protests and repeated calls for Mugabe to relinquish the presidency. Nevertheless, in early April ZANU-PF declared that Mugabe would stand as the party's candidate in the 2008 presidential election.” [1d] (Recent history)

3.18 Europa noted that:

“In early June 2007 constitutional amendments were proposed that would allow the legislative elections to be brought forward to coincide with the presidential election in 2008, harmonizing the presidential and parliamentary terms of office. The proposals also contained provisions for amendments to the structure of the House of Assembly and the Senate. The MDC opposed the proposals, which would, inter alia , allow the House of Assembly to nominate a new President should the incumbent stand down; under the existing structure, new elections would be required if the presidency were vacated. The MDC continued to be weakened by divisions between party members and in July it was announced that the two factions planned to field separate candidates in the presidential and legislative elections. Meanwhile,

South African-led mediation between the MDC and ZANU-PF faltered amid worsening political and economic conditions; however, Mbeki denied that negotiations would collapse.” [1d] (Recent history)

3.19 Europa noted that:

“On 30 October 2007 a number of changes to the Constitution were officially adopted. With effect from the 2008 elections, the House of Assembly was to be enlarged to comprise 210 directly elected members, while the total number of members of the Senate was to be increased to 93. ... The presidential term was reduced to five years. However, talks between ZANU-PF and the opposition failed to produce any agreement on electoral procedures and negotiations continued. ZANU-PF representatives insisted that further negotiations, expected to continue throughout November, would not delay the March 2008 elections.” [1d] (Recent history)

A thorough chronology of events in Zimbabwe is available from the BBC’s Timeline http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/africa/country_profiles/1831470.stm and from the Guardian <http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2007/oct/04/zimbabwe>

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

4. SANCTIONS AND COMMONWEALTH SUSPENSION

- 4.01 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that:

“The EU has been united in condemnation of Mugabe's campaign of violence and his disregard for the democratic process. The EU has had measures in place since 2002, which target individuals, not the Zimbabwean people. The UK worked with EU colleagues in 2008 to expand these measures as a means to increase pressure on the regime. On 22 July, the EU added 37 individuals, including those involved in the violence that had occurred during the elections, and for the first time froze the assets of four ZANU PF related companies. The number of individuals and companies subject to a visa ban and asset freeze was increased again in December to 180.” [13a] (European Union)

- 4.02 The EU renewed its sanctions targeted against ZANU-PF members of Robert Mugabe's government, senior government officials, military figures, and some businesses with close links to Mugabe. Under the sanctions, which have been extended until 20 February 2010, key figures in the regime are prevented from travelling to Europe and are subject to an asset-freeze.

Details of the ban can be found here:

<http://eur-lex.europa.eu/LexUriServ/LexUriServ.do?uri=OJ:L:2009:049:0015:0017:EN:PDF>

A list of Zimbabweans subject to sanctions/travel ban can be found at the following link:

<http://eur-lex.europa.eu/LexUriServ/LexUriServ.do?uri=OJ:L:2007:172:0089:01:EN:HTML>

- 4.03 A report by 'States in Transition Observatory' (SITO) noted in April 2009 that: “A 'humanitarian plus' form of aid is being discussed by western donors to enable the country to deliver critical services while keeping 'smart sanctions and travel bans' in place. If implemented a review of this status may be likely when the rule of law and other minimum standards of governance and accountability can be seen and sustained. [9a] (p3)
- 4.04 On 12 December 2003 the Commonwealth Secretariat announced that Zimbabwe had terminated its membership of the commonwealth the previous day. (The Commonwealth of Nations, accessed 26 January 2009) [36]
- 4.05 The International Crisis Group, noted in a report entitled 'Zimbabwe: A Regional Solution?', dated 18 September 2007, that while sanctions imposed by western countries are limited in their scope; only a couple of hundred are affected by the sanctions. Mugabe has made great play of these sanctions to convince ordinary Zimbabweans that the UK and US harbour “neo-colonial ambitions”. [100e] (Executive Summary and Recommendations)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

5. ELECTIONS AND POWER-SHARING TALKS IN 2008

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS: MARCH 2008

- 5.01 Amnesty International Report 2009 (AI report 2009) – Zimbabwe, published on 28 May 2009, reported that:

“On 29 March [2008] the country held presidential, parliamentary and local government elections in an environment that was relatively peaceful compared to previous elections. The elections followed a year-long dialogue between ZANU-PF and the two formations of the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC), facilitated by the Southern African Development Community (SADC). The March elections saw ZANU-PF losing its majority in parliament for the first time since independence in 1980.” [14b] (p360)

- 5.02 Sokwanele reported on 3 April 2008 that the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission (ZEC) had announced the results for 207 of the 210 parliamentary constituencies. The remaining three constituencies will be determined by by-elections following the deaths of three candidates prior to the March 29th elections: Pelandaba/Mpopoma, Gwanda South, and Redcliff.

House of Assembly results (ZEC)

(Based on 207 constituencies counted)

MDC Mutambara	10
MDC Tsvangirai	99
ZANU-PF	97

(ZEC: Final results for the House of Assembly, 3 April 2008) [37b]

- 5.03 On 5 April 2008, Sokwanele reported that the ZEC had announced the results for all 60 elected Senate seats. ZANU-PF won 30 seats, the MDC T gained 24 seats and the MDC M took 6 seats. The Senate consists of 93 Senators: 60 directly elected by voters in 60 constituencies; 5 Senators appointed by the President; 10 Provincial Governors; 18 chiefs – 16 elected by fellow chiefs, plus the President and Deputy President of the Council of Chiefs ex officio. (ZEC: Final results for the House of Assembly, dated 5 April 2008) [37a]

Presidential Elections: March - June 2008

- 5.04 Voting in the first round of the presidential elections took place at the same time as the parliamentary elections. [14b] (p360) However, the Economist Intelligence Unit reported in July 2008 that there were delays of close to “... five weeks before the results were announced ...” [24i] (p8) The AI report 2009, noted that “... Morgan Tsvangirai of the MDC obtained 47.8 per cent of the vote, Robert Mugabe of ZANU-PF obtained 43.2 per cent, while two independent candidates obtained less than 10 per cent combined.” [14b] (p360)
- 5.05 IRIN News reported on 1 May 2008 that MDC observers claimed that Morgan Tsvangirai had won the presidential ballot by close to, or over, the required 50 per cent, and questioned why it had taken over a month for the ZEC to release the results. Morgan Tsvangirai’s failure to secure 50 per cent, plus one vote, ensured that a second round of voting would need to take place. [10ai]

- 5.06 The AI report 2009 noted that the delay in announcing the election results, and in the scheduling of the second round of the presidential vote, provided the government with ample time in which to intimidate Zimbabweans into voting for Mugabe. The wave of violence unleashed by the security forces, war veterans, and ZANU-PF supporters resulted in the deaths of at least 180 people "... and at least 9,000 people injured from torture, beatings and other violations ..." [14b] (p360) The violent retribution, termed 'Operation Mavhoterapapi' or 'Who did you vote for' (IRIN News, 1 May 2008) [10ai] caused Morgan Tsvangirai to announce on the 22 June 2008 that he was withdrawing from the second round of the election. "However, the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission ruled that the election should go ahead on 27 June. The June election was widely condemned by independent local and regional election observers." [14b] (p360)
- 5.07 Africasia (carried by the Zimbabwe Situation) reported on 29 June 2008, that President Mugabe claimed an overwhelming victory after seeing early unofficial count tallies. [40a] "Mr Mugabe won the run-off by a wide margin, getting 2.1m votes to the 233,000 for Mr Tsvangirai, whose name was still on the ballot papers despite his absence from the election." (Economist Intelligence Unit, July 2008) [24i] (p8)

Global Political Agreement

- 5.08 Against a background of continuing violence, Amnesty International reported that increased "Efforts by SADC [Southern African Development Community] to find a political settlement between ZANU-PF and the two formations of the MDC resulted in a political agreement signed in September [2008]. However, negotiations to set up a unity government stalled over allocation of key government ministries including the Ministry of Home Affairs." [14b] (p360)
- 5.09 Jane's Sentinel, Zimbabwe Executive Summary, updated 13 March 2009, noted that:

"Under the September 2008 deal, Mugabe chairs the cabinet as well as the National Security Council, while Tsvangirai, as prime minister, chairs a new council of ministers, is deputy chair of the cabinet and a member of the National Security Council. The 31-member cabinet is to consist of 13 ministers nominated by the MDC-T, three by the MDC-M and 15 by ZANU-PF. ZANU-PF also nominate eight deputy ministers, the MDC-T six and the MDC-M one. However, actual implementation of the deal suffered months of deadlock as the rival sides fought over key ministries in the future government. While the MDC-T agreed to the deal, it appeared intent on not losing any more ground than it ceded during negotiations to ZANU-PF, with it continuing to fight, for example, for control of the Ministry of Home Affairs." [90a]

The BBC provided on 15 September 2008 a breakdown of the 'key points' of the deal, details of which can be found through the following link:
<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/africa/7617731.stm>

The full text of the Global Political Agreement (GPA) can be found at the following link (Institute for Security Studies, 15 September 2008):
http://www.iss.co.za/dynamic/administration/file_manager/file_links/ZIMAGMT_150908.PDF?link_id=5&slink_id=6575&link_type=12&slink_type=13&tmpl_id=3

- 5.10 Human Rights Watch noted on 14 January 2009 that: "... the frailty of the deal was soon apparent as the parties rapidly reached a deadlock on the distribution of ministries, with violence and intimidation against the MDC still taking place." [69c] The main sticking point appears to have been over the allocation of ten key ministries. Control of the home affairs portfolio, and therefore the police, was reported to have been a particular sticking point. (Institute for War and Peace Reporting, 20 January 2009) [77p] Sporadic talks continued for a further five months, with the three parties finally reaching an agreement at the end of January 2009. (Institute for War and Peace Reporting, 29 January 2009) [77q] The Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) reported in February 2009 that as word of the agreement was announced on 30th January "Hundreds of Zimbabweans gathered in the capital, Harare ... to cheer the Zimbabwean opposition leader, Morgan Tsvangirai ... Mr Tsvangirai will be sworn in as prime minister on February 11th, after parliament approves a constitutional amendment creating the post." (Zimbabwe Country Report, February 2009) [24p] (p3-4)

The MDC compromises

- 5.11 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that:
- "This decision to join the government was made amid major divisions within the party. While Tsvangirai was pushing to enter, a faction led by Tendai Biti – the secretary general and lead negotiator at the talks with ZANU-PF – was opposed. This faction argued that the best option was to continue to mobilise support at home and abroad so as to pressure Mugabe to resign the presidency. Tsvangirai's preference was to initiate reforms through government, then win the next election decisively. After months of stalemate, the choices had narrowed, the party did not have a Plan B, and the deepening humanitarian and economic crisis was threatening its support base. With almost no chance that the African Union (AU) would agree to take on the Zimbabwe case, there was no realistic way to challenge SADC. This left the party with the choice of being blamed for the failure of the Global Political Agreement (GPA) or entering the government, despite its shortcomings." [100a] (p2)
- 5.12 Under the agreement "... both factions of the MDC will join ZANU-PF in power. Despite the MDC holding a majority of the parliamentary seats, Mr Tsvangirai has been forced to accept a junior position in the power-sharing government, as ZANU-PF will continue to control the most important ministries [Armed Forces, Central Intelligence Organisation, and the Judiciary]." (EIU Zimbabwe Country Report, February 2009) [24p] (p3-4) The IWPR reported that Mugabe had been forced by the Southern African Development Community (SADC) to make some concessions to the MDC. These included: "... reversing all executive appointments he has made since the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding in September." And an even split between ZANU-PF and the MDC of "... the ten provincial governorships he had unilaterally allocated to his party. The regional bloc resolved that the party that had won the majority of seats in a province in last year's parliamentary elections should govern that province." [77q]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Tsvangirai sworn in as Prime Minister

- 5.13 The Economist Intelligence Unit reported on 13 February 2009 that “Morgan Tsvangirai was sworn in as prime minister on February 11th after parliament approved a constitutional amendment creating the post ... Arthur Mutambara – leader of the splinter opposition group MDC-M – became deputy prime minister. Robert Mugabe remains head of state. ... Zimbabwe’s new cabinet was sworn in on February 13th, completing the formation of the country’s new government of national unity.” [24f]
- 5.14 The Times noted on 12 February 2009 that following his swearing in as Prime Minister, Morgan Tsvangirai drove to Harare’s sports stadium to address supporters and well wishers. Many of the huge crowd that thronged the stadium were dressed in MDC t-shirts and hats which would have been kept well hidden days earlier. However, military leaders who enforced Mugabe’s rule stayed away from the inauguration ceremony of Zimbabwe’s military leaders so that “... they would not have to salute the new Prime Minister and state controlled television and radio failed to broadcast ... [Morgan Tsvangirai’s] inaugural speech.” [82ad]

Please see the March 2009 update of the Zimbabwe Country Report (<http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs09/zimbabwe-260309.doc>) for a more detailed narrative of the events surrounding the 2008 parliamentary and presidential elections and the signing of the power-sharing agreement on 15 September 2008.

See also Latest news, Security forces, Political affiliation, Recent Developments, and Freedom of speech and media

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

6. RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

- 6.01 On the 7 March 2009 SW Radio Africa reported that Susan Tsvangirai, wife of Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai, was killed following a car crash on 6th March that also injured Mr Tsvangirai. The crash was caused by an oncoming truck that veered into the path of the Tsvangirai's car. Officially, Mr Tsvangirai claimed that the crash was an accident, although senior members of the MDC expressed doubts. [53a] The Telegraph reported on 9 March 2009 that senior members of the MDC continued to express grave concerns that the crash was not an accident. Coming so soon after the inauguration of the new unity government, led many MDC activists to believe that the crash was planned by a clique within Zimbabwe's security forces. [5a] The Telegraph reported on 9 March 2009 that: "Mr Tsvangirai was flown out of Zimbabwe after Botswana's President Ian Khama sent Phandu Skelemani, Botswana's foreign minister, and other officials to visit him in hospital in Harare on Saturday." [5d]
- 6.02 BBC News reported on 10 March 2009 that President Mugabe, who attended the funeral of Susan Tsvangirai, surprised many in the congregation by his conciliatory comments calling on ZANU-PF and the MDC to put their differences behind them. "In a speech delivered to mourners from the pulpit, Mr Mugabe said: 'We have many followers. So many have lost their lives. Gone should be the days of violence'." [3q] On 18 April 2009 the BBC reported that President Mugabe, who was attending an independence event with his rival Morgan Tsvangirai, again made conciliatory comments calling on the people of Zimbabwe to enter a period of "national healing". He went on to state that "We need tolerance...irrespective of political or religious affiliation" [3s]
- 6.03 However, some sources noted that Mugabe's actions often appeared to contradict his conciliatory language. The Africa Research Bulletin (ARB), Volume 46 Number 4, dated 1st-30th April 2009, reported that:
- "The first few months of the unity government have been characterised by Mugabe's intransigence and flouting of the Global Political Agreement (GPA) ... Mugabe has unilaterally announced that the Transport Ministry, controlled by ZANU-PF stalwart Nicholas Goche, would be expanded to absorb the functions of the Ministry of Information, Communication and Technology, headed by Nelson Chamisa, who is also the MDC's spokesperson. Among the responsibilities taken from the MDC was control of Net One, a mobile phone network and services provider, postal services, and the fixed-line phone network provider, Tel One.
- "Tsvangirai declared the grab 'null and void', saying 'This (appointment) does not only fly in the face of the letter and spirit of the Global Political Agreement, but is also an illegality, as the GPA has legal effect'. ZANU-PF's absorption of the Communications Ministry allows it to avoid obtaining authorisation from the MDC to spy on its citizens, by permitting the security agencies, controlled by ZANU-PF under the GPA, to monitor telephone conversations and e-mails, and intercept letters." [76b] (17931)
- 6.04 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009 that supporters of Emmerson Mnangagwa (a favourite to succeed Mugabe as ZANU-PF's leader) are fully prepared to sabotage the new government.

“Some of the early tactics by which they seek to put Tsvangirai under pressure and make the government dysfunctional include the arrest of Roy Bennett, the MDC-T national treasurer and deputy agriculture minister-designate (who Mugabe reportedly is refusing to swear into the cabinet); continued incarceration of MDC activists; encouraging Mugabe’s unilateral appointment of permanent secretaries and reconfiguration of ministerial powers so as to favour ZANU-PF; renewed farm invasions; and stalemating talks on the future of Gono and Attorney General Tomana, and the appointment of provincial governors. Their wider strategy is to capitalise on the MDC’s inexperience in governing in order to defeat the reforms Tsvangirai intends to fast-track before elections.” [100a] (p5)

- 6.05 The International Crisis Group (ICG) also highlighted that there was a “real risk” that disgruntled elements within ZANU-PF, specifically within the military, were capable of staging a military coup within the country or of trying to engineer the assassination of Morgan Tsvangirai. The report went on to note that:

“Some old regime elements seek to cause the new government to fail, out of fear of prosecution, loss of power and its financial sinecures, hatred for Tsvangirai or the MDC or a genuine belief that they are the guardians of the country’s liberation. They are thus continuing to provoke and frustrate the MDC, as shown by such actions as continuing arrests and detention of MDC activists, refusal of police to carry out some government orders, efforts to drive out the last hundred white farmers by continued farm invasions and stalling on the appointment of provincial governors as well as reconfiguration of ministerial powers.” [100a]

- 6.06 The BBC reported on 9 June 2009 that one senior member of the MDC, Sekai Holland, who is currently the Minister for National Healing, Reconciliation and Integration in the unity government, claimed that malcontents within ZANU-PF were sending daily threats and warnings to members of the MDC and “... were drawing up assassination lists.... With the worst violence planned to coincide with elections due in 18 months.” Ms Holland, who “... was badly beaten by ZANU-PF supporters two years ago... claimed that militiamen would be paid a wage of $100 (£62) a day ...” during the next election to intimidate and kill Zimbabweans. Her comments echo earlier claims by Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai who criticised the speed of political change and commented that “... although the MDC was in government, it had not succeeded in restoring the rule of law and warned his party that Zimbabweans remained hungry and afraid of political persecution.” [3e]
- 6.07 There were some reports of ZANU-PF supporters and officials being brought before the courts for violent attacks on opposition supporters. A report by ‘States in Transition Observatory’ (SITO) noted in April 2009 that “A ZANU-PF political commissar Admroe Hwarare and two war veterans, Darlington Chiwa and Daniel Tsingo, were brought before the courts ... The Chiredzi Magistrates Court in Masvingo Province jailed three ZANU-PF militiamen (Vengai Zihura, Eukeria Muvengwa and Alick Ziwende) for their involvement in election based violence last year targeted against the then opposition MDC.” [9a] (p6)
- 6.08 On the 29 April 2009 Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai announced the launch of the Government of National Unity’s 100 day plan. The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa's group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch (SITO Report) May 2009 that the plan is supposed to represent a guide to tangible results that are hoped will come out of the Global Political Agreement and the Short Term Emergency Recovery Programme (STERP). [9b] (p3)

Full details of the 100 day plan can be found through the following link: <http://www.idasa.org.za/gbOutputFiles.asp?WriteContent=Y&RID=2552>

6.09 On 17 May 2009 ZWNews reported that the Zimbabwean African People's Union (ZAPU), a wing of ZANU-PF, had announced that it had formally split from the ruling party. [67a] ZAPU, which was effectively forced to merge with ZANU following the Matabeleland Insurgency (See 3.04 for further details of the Matabeleland Insurgency) [28] (Chapter 7) voted in favour of the de-coupling of the two parties at a special party congress, attended by around 1,000 delegates at McDonald Hall in Mzilikazi. Dumiso Dabengwa was appointed the interim chairman of the party. [67a]

6.10 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, noted in its Political Violence Report March 2009, published 28 April 2009, (ZHRF March 2009 report) reported that during March "Student leaders in tertiary institutions have also continued to be targeted for arrest, detention and intimidation as they seek to have issues affecting them addressed." The report went on to note that:

"This report documents the arrest and detention of Bindura University students following a protest against high tuition fees. Protests against the tuition fee structure for tertiary institutions announced by government at the beginning of the year, have taken place at institutions around the country. Many student leaders have been arrested, detained, expelled or suspended from institutions or have appeared in court facing various charges, as a result of these protests. Some students who have been arrested have been beaten and tortured while in custody, a technique that has been used to interrogate and intimidate student leaders." [35b] (p2)

6.11 The ZHRF March 2009 report noted that levels of political violence dropped compared to the previous month. However the April 2009 report, published on 2 June 2009, reported that: "The figures for the monthly totals [of political violence in April 2009] show an increase in the number of violations as compared to March. April recorded a total of 204 violations as compared to 155 in March." The April report's figures indicate that almost all of the most serious politically motivated violence - murder, attempted murder, torture and abduction - that occurred during the first four months of 2009 took place in April. [35a] (p2 & 15) However, the reported figures for politically motivated human rights violations in January - April 2009 was much lower compared to the same periods in 2007 and 2008.. (ZHRF Political Violence Report, December 2008) [35j] (ZHRF Political Violence Report, December 2007) [35z]

Please see the Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum website for detailed reports and figures of politically motivated violence since January 2001: http://www.hrforumzim.com/frames/inside_frame_monthly.htm

6.12 BBC News reported on 4 June 2009 that the "Zimbabwe Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai has told the BBC the 'acrimony is over' between him and President Robert Mugabe.” However, the previous week “... Mr Tsvangirira struck a less upbeat tone ... during a party convention ...” [3v] where he told supporters that “... political intimidation and rights abuses continued in Zimbabwe.” He admitting that the “... MDC had not yet succeeded in restoring the rule of law, warning that people were still hungry and afraid of political persecution.” The article also noted that: “The party complains that it has been undermined by President Mugabe and ZANU-PF party on a number of issues ...” (BBC, 30 May 2009) [3ab]

Further news reports covering recent events can be found at the following websites:

Institute for War and Peace Reporting - http://www.iwpr.net/?apc_state=henh&s=p&p=zim&o=-

The Zimbabwe Situation -

<http://www.zimbabwesituation.com/>

UNHCR REF WORLD –

<http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/country,COI,,,ZWE,,,0.html>

See also Latest news

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

POLITICALLY MOTIVATED VIOLENCE

ZANU-PF punishes its supporters

6.13 Pambazuka News reported on 4 December 2008, that:

“Despite being given free food, grain, farming implements and fertilizer by the incumbent regime before the March 2008 elections, Zimbabwe's rural areas, once viewed as strongholds of the ruling ZANU-PF party, backed the opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC). This move by the rural folk resulted in some senior government members losing their parliamentary seats in a number of provinces. As a result, the period prior to the run-off election was marked by extensive violence, torture and internal displacement of the electorate believed to be supporting the opposition.” [46a] (p1)

6.14 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) noted in its Political Violence Report – December 2008 that recorded instances of violence peaked during May and June 2008. Although, “... surprisingly, the violence in April [2008] and thereafter was largely confined to areas where ZANU PF won more seats for Parliament causing the Human Rights Forum to conclude that the violent retribution was because of President Mugabe’s dismal showing in the Presidential elections.” [35] (Overview) The view of the opposition MDC was that Mugabe had “... unleashed a violent campaign to punish ZANU-PF supporters who voted against him ... ‘They are targeting what they see as their strongholds that voted against them’ ...” (The Scotsman, 9 April 2008) [98a] To facilitate the campaign of violence, one source estimated that up to 20,000 militia bases were established before the presidential run-off on 27 June. These bases were used to house Youth Militia and War Veterans and many schools, community halls and farm houses were used as bases. (Pambazuka News, 4 December 2008) [46a] (p4)

- 6.15 The ZHRF reported on 9 August 2008 that during April 2008 62 per cent of human rights abuses, such as torture, were reported to have taken place in the three Mashonaland Provinces, but a significantly large number ...” was also reported in Harare. The report went on to note that a large proportion of those claiming to be victims of political violence were from rural areas and were “... self-admitted members of the MDC, often holding positions of authority or leadership.” [35n] (p16-18)

Inter-party violence

- 6.16 Following the formation of the power sharing government in February 2009 there were increased reports of MDC supporters becoming emboldened by the new political situation and attempting to settle scores against ZANU-PF supporters. A number of reports detailed incidences of violence against ZANU-PF local leaders and supporters throughout most of Zimbabwe. IRIN reported on 23 February 2009 of running battles taking place between MDC and ZANU-PF supporters “... in the working-class suburb of Mbare, in the capital, Harare. ... Welshman Ncube, [MDC-M] chairperson of the Joint Monitoring and Implementation Committee ... told IRIN that numerous reports of ‘revenge attacks’ had been received from across the country. ... ‘In many areas it would appear that supporters of the MDC, who were ill-treated by ZANU-PF members, are demanding and implementing their own form of justice’. ... In Mashonaland Central a senior ZANU-PF official was reportedly in a coma after being attacked by unidentified assailants.” [10e] The Institute for War and Peace Reporting (IWPR) noted on 25 February that: “In parts of Mashonaland East and Manicaland provinces ... MDC supporters burned homes of known ZANU-PF supporters and officials, accusing them of murdering their relatives. ... 15 people were admitted to Mutoko District Hospital on February 18 after they were singled out by MDC supporters ... In Mashonaland Central province, hotbed of support for Mugabe and one of the areas that suffered the worst election-related violence, axe-wielding MDC supporters went on the rampage, kidnapping alleged members of ZANU-PF vigilante squads, taking them into the bush and thoroughly beating them.” There were other reports of provincial ZANU-PF leaders being so badly beaten that they were in ‘intensive care units’. However the IWPR did stress that the scope of the current violence did not bear “... comparison to the widespread state-sponsored violence ...” witnessed during 2008. [77i]
- 6.17 Other sources noted further examples of retributive violence against ZANU-PF supporters, as well as tit-for-tat violence against the MDC. The Zimbabwe Times reported on 27 February 2009 that a traditional village chief was beaten up for violence perpetrated during the presidential run-off in June 2008 in Gutu South, Masvingo. [32e] The Harare Tribune reported on 12 March 2009 that: “Two houses belonging to a member of the MDC were reportedly burnt down in Buhera. ... The houses were razed after the owner had gone to the funeral wake of Morgan Tsvangirai’s wife.” In retaliation, a group of MDC youths burned down three houses and destroyed other property belonging to ZANU-PF supporters. [33a]
- 6.18 A report by ‘States in Transition Observatory’ (SITO) noted in April 2009 “... that during April 2009 “Violent clashes broke out between ZANU-PF and MDC supporters at a youth summit, organised by the Ministry of Youth Development, Indigenisation and Empowerment. An estimated 100 youths attended the conference at the Rainbow Towers.” [9a] (p6) SITO’s May report noted that: “Traditional leaders have been approached for assistance in Buhera as it is reported that MDC-T supporters are perpetrating acts of revenge against ZANU-PF assailants who victimised them prior to the run-off election in June last year.” [9b] (p7) Radiovop reported on 28 May 2009 that Headman of Buhera stated that “... tension between ZANU-PF and MDC-T supporters in my area is increasing instead of going down ...” One ZANU-PF supporter was reported to have been seriously beaten causing some people to flee the town to “... skip potential punishment by MDC-T supporters.” [28b]

- 6.19 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, noted in its March 2009 (published 28 April 2009) report that: “As in the previous month, clashes between ZANU-PF and MDC supporters were reported in March; another indication that political polarisation is far from over. Members of both parties have been implicated in violent retributive attacks, reminiscent of the violence that occurred pre and post the 2008 harmonised elections.” [35b] (p2) The April 2009 report, published on 2 June 2009, noted that: “Incidences of inter-party violence continue to be reported around the country.” [35a] (p2)

See also Human rights, introduction and Security forces

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

7. CONSTITUTION

- 7.01 Europa World online – Zimbabwe (The Constitution), accessed on 4 February 2009, noted that: “The Constitution of the Republic of Zimbabwe took effect at independence on 18 April 1980. Amendments to the Constitution must have the approval of two-thirds of the members of the House of Assembly and the Senate.” [1i]
- 7.02 Europa World online – Zimbabwe (The Republic), accessed on 4 February 2009, noted that: “Zimbabwe is a sovereign republic and the Constitution is the supreme law.” [1h]
- 7.03 Europa World online – Zimbabwe (Declaration of Rights), accessed on February 2009, noted that “The declaration of rights guarantees the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, regardless of race, tribe, place of origin, political opinions, colour, creed or sex.” [1j]
- 7.04 The Telegraph noted on 21 September 2007 that President Mugabe passed into law the new Constitutional Amendment (No.18) Act that saw broad and sweeping increases in the president’s powers of patronage. Among the most important changes that the Act introduces is an increase in the number of directly elected MPs from 120 to 210. Constituency boundaries will be re-drawn to create the 90 new constituencies. [5k] In addition, Veritas Trust noted on 30 October 2007 that the act will also reintroduce a second parliamentary chamber called the Senate, which will consist of 60 directly elected Senators and a further 33 appointees. [52b] The Act also empowers the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission “... to take over registration of voters, demarcation of constituencies and overall management of elections.” (BBC News, 8 November 2007) [49ct]
- 7.05 The Africa Research Bulletin, Volume 46 Number 4, dated 1st-30th April 2009, reported that the power-sharing government had:
- “... started writing a new constitution to replace the current supreme law drafted ... in 1980 ...Constitutional and Parliamentary Affairs Minister Eric Matinenga said the new constitution would be based on public submissions and is expected by the end of 2009. ...A new constitution has been a long-standing demand of the opposition, and is enshrined in the agreement for a coalition government which President Robert Mugabe and the opposition signed in 2008.” [76b] (p17930)
- 7.06 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa’s group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch April 2009, that “... a 25 member parliamentary committee comprising of legislators from the MDC-T, MDC and ZANU-PF will lead the process of writing a new constitution. This process will finish with a referendum in July 2010.” [9a] (p2)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

8. POLITICAL SYSTEM

OVERVIEW

- 8.01 Jane's Sentinel Country Risk Assessment: Zimbabwe, dated 13 March 2009, noted that:

"The Lancaster House Constitution, agreed to in December 1979 just prior to independence from the UK, together with 16 amendments, is the fundamental law that determines Zimbabwe's governmental structure. It provided for a parliamentary democracy with majority rule, the protection of minority rights and three separate branches of government; the executive, the legislature and the judiciary. An incorporated bill of rights affords extensive protection of human rights which, during the first 10 years of independence, could only be amended by unanimous vote of the House of Assembly. The constitution was significantly amended in August 1984 and at the end of 1987 executive power was transferred from parliament and prime minister to a new position of executive president, filled by elevating the former prime minister. A provision for guaranteed seats for white Zimbabweans was also removed from the constitution at this time. From 1990, the president and the House of Assembly served different terms and, therefore, presidential and assembly elections took place on different dates. However, the 2008 polls were harmonised and also included senate and municipal elections. A constitutional amendment required for the formation of a power-sharing government in Zimbabwe, as per a September 2008 agreement, was passed on 5 February 2009." [90e] (Internal Affairs)

THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH

- 8.02 Jane's Sentinel Country Risk Assessment: Zimbabwe, dated 13 March 2009, noted that:

"The president [Robert Mugabe] of the republic is head of state and government and commander in chief of the defence forces. To qualify for nomination, a presidential candidate must be a Zimbabwean citizen by birth or descent, aged 40 or above and resident in Zimbabwe. The president is elected by popular majority vote for a term of six years and may be re-elected for any number of further terms. He may appoint two vice-presidents, whose functions include assisting him to discharge his executive responsibilities. Executive authority is vested in the president and cabinet of ministers, which includes the vice-presidents and other ministers whom the president appoints. Together they control senior public service appointments, including those in the military and police. Each of the eight provinces of Zimbabwe is administered by a provincial governor appointed by the president. As per the September 2008 peace deal, the posts of prime minister and two deputy prime ministers were also created for the power-sharing government, with MDC-T leader Morgan Tsvangirai becoming prime minister." [90e] (Internal Affairs)

THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

- 8.03 The CIA World Fact Book (Zimbabwe), updated on 5 May 2009, noted that the:

“... bicameral Parliament consists of a Senate (93 seats - 60 elected by popular vote for a five-year term, 10 provincial governors nominated by the president, 16 traditional chiefs elected by the Council of Chiefs, 2 held by the president and deputy president of the Council of Chiefs, and 5 appointed by the president) and a House of Assembly (210 seats - all elected by popular vote for five-year terms).” [56a]

POLITICAL PARTIES

- 8.04 The CIA World Fact Book noted that the following political parties, with the leaders in square brackets, operated in Zimbabwe:

“African National Party or ANP [Egypt DZINEMUNHENZVA]; Movement for Democratic Change or MDC [Morgan TSVANGIRAI, Arthur MUTAMBARA, splinter faction]; Peace Action is Freedom for All or PAFA; United Parties [Abel MUZOREWA]; United People’s Party or UPP [Daniel SHUMBA]; Zimbabwe African National Union-Ndonga or ZANU-Ndonga [Wilson KUMBULA]; Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front or ZANU-PF [Robert Gabriel MUGABE]; Zimbabwe African Peoples Union or ZAPU [Agrippa MADLELA]; Zimbabwe Youth in Alliance or ZIYA.” [56a]

ZANU-PF

- 8.05 The Economist Intelligence Unit’s Zimbabwe Country Profile, 2008, noted that since independence from the United Kingdom in 1980 the country has been ruled by Robert Mugabe and ZANU-PF. The report stated that:

“At independence ZANU-PF’s ideology was initially Marxist-Leninist, but from the late 1980s in line with the fall of communism the president did reluctantly allow a move towards market-oriented economic policies. As the political crisis in Zimbabwe has intensified in recent years, Mr Mugabe has reverted to more revolutionary language, notably the need to complete the chimurenga (the revolution by which he came to power) through the redistribution of land. He has also at various times called for the nationalisation of mines and industries.” [24n]

- 8.06 Jane’s Sentinel Country Risk Assessment: Zimbabwe, dated 13 March 2009, noted that:

“ZANU-PF holds five-yearly congresses as its primary decision-making mechanism. Its congress in early December 2004 led to the appointment of a new ZANU vice-president, Joyce Mujuru. The event was closely managed by Mugabe and left open the question of his succession. This question continues to dominate the party’s internal politics, but for now remains open. The party again endorsed Mugabe as its presidential candidate for the 2008 elections and appears to have been wholly unprepared for its defeat in the first round in March in the National Assembly and presidential polls.” [90e] (Internal Affairs)

For further information on ZANU-PF see Annex B

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

9. Human Rights

INTRODUCTION

- 9.01 The Human Rights Watch World Report 2009 (Zimbabwe), covering events in 2008, dated 14 January 2009, observed that during 2008

“ZANU-PF launched a campaign of violence against MDC activists and supporters, mobilizing a system of repression and violent intimidation that remained in place, if less overtly active, at the end of the year. The months leading up to the [presidential election] run-off [in June] were marked by widespread abuses, including killings, torture, beatings, looting, and burning of property. Perpetrators, including the police, military, and local ZANU-PF officials, as well as government-backed militia and war veterans, committed abuses with almost absolute impunity.” [69c]

- 9.02 Amnesty International’s 2009 Zimbabwe report, published on 28 May 2009, added:

“... thousands were injured while tens of thousands were displaced in rural areas and had to seek refuge in urban centres. Many people were left in need of emergency shelter, food aid and medical treatment after they were targeted ahead of the run-off presidential election in June.

“The economy continued to decline making it very hard for a large part of the population to access food, healthcare and education. According to the UN, more than five million people were in need of food aid by the end of 2008. Victims of the 2005 mass forced evictions continued to live in deplorable conditions.” [14b]

- 9.03 There were varying reports on the numbers who were killed during the violence of 2008, Human Rights Watch reported 163 deaths [69c], Amnesty International stated the figure was closer to 180 [14b] while the US State Department reported 193 deaths and that the MDC claimed 200 others were missing, presumed dead. (USSD Country Report on Human Rights Practices 2008) [2b] (Section 1a) However, the BBC reported on 17 September 2008 that a western diplomat in Zimbabwe claimed that there was information to suggest that around 2,000 supporters/members of the MDC had been killed. [3z]

- 9.04 Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) noted in its Political Violence Report – April 2009, that in the first four months of 2009 levels of political violence had dropped compared with the same period in 2008 and 2007. In the first four months of 2009 there were 872 reports of recorded political violence. [35a] This compared with 5,471 cases during the same period in 2008 (ZHRF Political Violence Report, December 2008) [35i] and 4,274 during the same period in 2007. (ZHRF Political Violence Report, December 2007) [35z]

The monthly reports can be accessed via the ZHRF website

- 9.05 Human Rights Watch noted on 14 January 2009 that while ZANU-PF’s campaign of violence was “... less overtly active, at the end of the year ... a system of repression and violent intimidation ... remained in place ...” [69c]

Human Rights Watch reported on 22 January 2009 that since October 2008 "... more than 40 MDC members and human rights activists" were abducted and held illegally. [69g] (p24) Further abductions and unlawful imprisonment continued after the formation of the power sharing government. Voice of America reported on 17 March 2009 that despite the release of some civic and political activists at least 80 MDC activists who had been abducted and or unlawfully held in custody. [83a]

- 9.06 While most of the abducted human rights and MDC activists were eventually released, some prominent activists such as NGO Jestina Mukoko and MDC MP Roy Bennett, continue to face ongoing and what most commentators claim were, trumped-up charges. (Amnesty International Zimbabwe 2009 Report) [14b] (Voice of America, 17 March 2009) [83a] Legal proceedings against Jestina Mukoko and Roy Bennett continued (as of 12 June 2009) There were serious concerns about the safety of seven political activists and human rights defenders, who were reported to have been abducted between 29 October and 15 December 2008, but who were still unaccounted for "... raising fears that they may have been murdered." (SITO Report, May 2009) [9b] (p8)

See also Political affiliation, and Abductions of Human Rights Activists

- 9.07 SW Radio Africa reported on 3 June 2009 that three MDC activists (Terry Musona, Lloyd Tarumbwa and Fani Tembo) were abducted from their homes on 2 June 2009, but released the following day. It was the second time that the trio had been abducted; the first time was in October 2008. [53b]
- 9.08 The country's political problems were further compounded by a significant increase in cholera infections. From August 2008, as the economy collapsed and the provision of clean water and sanitation seized up, health officials recorded significant increases in the numbers infected with cholera. (Human Rights Watch, 22 January 2009) [69g] (p17-18) On 9 June 2009 the World Health Organisation reported that there had been at least 4,276 deaths from cholera and nearly a 100,000 had been infected. [97a]
- 9.09 Political bias continued to be a major issue in Zimbabwe. Amnesty International reported that political affiliation often dictated the treatment an individual received. (Annual Report, 7 August 2008) [14d] Bias in the distribution of food continued in 2008 with food distributions being run by the "... army, the Central Intelligence Organization, the police and district administrators. ... Those who were actually supporting the opposition were getting nothing because the CIO wanted to give ... grain directly to ... supporters ..." (Los Angeles Times, 26 September 2008) [66b]
- 9.10 Freedom House's, Worst of the Worst 2009, Zimbabwe, released on 3 June 2009, noted that:

"Zimbabwe is not an electoral democracy. President Mugabe and the ruling ZANU-PF party have dominated the political landscape since independence in 1980. Presidential and legislative elections in March 2008 were marred by a wide-ranging and brutal campaign of violence and intimidation, flawed voter registration and balloting, biased media coverage, and the use of state resources to bribe and threaten voters. Despite political violence and vote rigging, the two factions of the opposition MDC won a majority of seats in the House of Assembly, while ZANU-PF maintained its majority in the Senate. The September power sharing agreement divided ministries between the two parties and installed Tsvangirai as prime minister, while Mugabe remained president. Corruption is rampant throughout the country, including at the highest levels of government... Freedoms of expression and the press are severely restricted. Journalists are required to register with the state and are routinely subjected to intimidation, physical attacks, arrest and detention, and financial pressure. In 2008, scores of local and foreign journalists were beaten or detained, both before and after the elections. While freedom of religion has generally been respected, church attendance has become increasingly politicized. Nongovernmental organizations have faced increasing legal restrictions and extralegal harassment, and human rights groups are explicitly prohibited from receiving foreign funds. While some courts have struck down or disputed government actions, increasing pressure by the regime has substantially eroded judicial independence. In general, security forces are accountable to the government but abuse citizens with impunity. ZANU-PF militias operate as de facto enforcers of government policies and have committed assault, torture, rape, extralegal evictions, and extralegal executions. Prison conditions are harsh, and deaths in prisons are often caused by disease or beatings by guards. The state has extensive control over travel and residence, and property rights are not respected. Women enjoy legal protections, but societal discrimination and domestic violence persist" [96e]

- 9.11 The Freedom House report ranked Zimbabwe as one of the seventeen most repressive countries in the world, sitting alongside states such as Libya, North Korea and Somalia. [96e]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

10. SECURITY FORCES

OVERVIEW

- 10.01 A report by the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), published in the Washington Post, dated 28 March 2008, noted that:

“... Mugabe has ceded significant power to the country's security forces – the Central Intelligence Organization, the military, and the police. Above all else, the president seeks to maintain his grip on power. ...The security sector reports directly to the president, and is given funding from the president's office, the budget of which does not appear in the finance minister's yearly budget statement.

“Experts say that since the 2002 presidential election, the state itself has become increasingly militarized. Military figures, or ‘securocrats,’ occupy high-level positions in civilian institutions from the Grain Marketing Board to the Electoral Supervisory Commission to the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe. The cabinet's authority has been superseded by that of the Joint Operations Command, which is comprised of the heads of the intelligence agency, military, and police. The command makes policy, and according to a 2007 International Crisis Group report, it also oversees the government's strategy regarding regional attempts to mediate between the ruling party, ZANU-PF, and Zimbabwe's opposition party, the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC). ...In June 2007, the Economist Intelligence Unit reported that the ‘day-to-day running of the country is increasingly carried out by the National Security Council rather than the cabinet.’” [31a]

- 10.02 The CIA World Fact Book (Zimbabwe), updated on 5 May 2009, notes that the main military branches are the “Zimbabwe Defense Forces (ZDF): Zimbabwe National Army (ZNA), Air Force of Zimbabwe (AFZ) and the Zimbabwe Republic Police.” [56a] In addition, Jane's Security Sentinel – Country Profile: Zimbabwe (Security and Foreign Forces, accessed 10 February 2009), reported that other security forces included the Central Intelligence Organisation and the Police Support Unit (PSU). The PSU is described as “...a de facto counter-insurgency and border patrol force...” The PSU is thought to number in excess of 2,000 full-time personnel...” [90m] (Security and Foreign Forces) The US State Department Country Report on Human Rights Practices 2008, Zimbabwe, released on 25 February 2009, (USSD Report 2008), provided a summary of the security apparatus:

“The Zimbabwe Republic Police (ZRP) is responsible for maintaining law and order. Although the ZRP officially is under the authority of the Ministry of Home Affairs, in practice the president's office, through the [Joint Operations Command] JOC, controlled some roles and missions. The Zimbabwe National Army and Air Force, under the Defense Ministry, were responsible for external security; however, there were cases in which the government called upon them for domestic operations. The Central Intelligence Organization (CIO), under the Ministry of State for National Security, is responsible for internal and external security.

“Security forces were widely used to carry out government-sponsored politically motivated violence. Police routinely and violently disrupted public gatherings and demonstrations, and tortured opposition and civil society activists in police custody.

“It was difficult for rank-and-file police to remain impartial due to continued politicization of the force's upper echelons.” [2b] (Section 1d)

- 10.03 Sources report the active participation and collusion of all branches of the security forces, both formal and informal, in widespread human rights abuses and politically motivated violence. (SW Radio Africa, 23 September 2008) [53c] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, December 2008) [35I] (Overview) Human Rights Watch noted on 12 August 2008 that during 2008, security forces, in collaboration with ZANU-PF activists, set up and used “... camps and bases to beat and torture perceived MDC activists and supporters.” [69a] (p6) The HRW World Report 2009, covering events in 2008, noted: “The militia and war veterans beat, tortured, and mutilated suspected MDC activists, supporters, and their family members in hundreds of base camps-many of them army bases-established across the provinces as local operation centers.” [69c]
- 10.04 The International Crisis Group (ICG) also highlighted that there was a “real risk” that disgruntled elements within ZANU-PF, specifically within the military, were capable of staging a military coup or engineering the assassination of Morgan Tsvangirai. [100a]
- 10.05 Human Rights Watch reported on 22 January 2009 that since October 2008 “... more than 40 MDC members and human rights activists” were abducted and held illegally. [69g] (p24) ZHRF report notes that most abductions were perpetrated by the security forces. [35I] Pambazuka News reported on 4 December 2008 that following the government's defeat at the elections, ‘Operation Makavhotera Papi [where did you put your vote?]' saw “... war veterans, soldiers, militia, intelligence operative and ruling party youths inflicting retribution on suspected supporters of the opposition in both rural and urban areas ...” The source noted the murder of a number of opposition supporters but did not specify who was believed to have been responsible. [46a] (p2)

See Recent Developments, Humanitarian Issues and Human Rights for more information about politically motivated violence.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

POLICE

- 10.06 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessments – Southern Africa (Zimbabwe), updated 25 January 2007, noted that: “The force [the Zimbabwe Republic Police] is an armed, quasi-military organisation, which is modelled more along the lines of a military gendarmerie rather than a civilian police force. It has approximately 22,000 full-time members and is deployed throughout the country. Its presence is most evident in cities and towns, but thinly spread in rural areas.” [90c] (Zimbabwe Republic Police) Jane's also noted that the Police Support Unit often provides guard duty at the frontier, as it aims to combat poachers and smugglers; and that it is also always on the lookout for signs of insurgent dissident activity. [90c] (Border Guards)

- 10.07 A report by the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), published in the Washington Post, dated 28 March 2008, noted that:
- “The police execute the orders of the Joint Operations Command and are viewed by the public as an untrustworthy, politicized body. ‘Mugabe uses the police as technicians of public order, rather than as managers or administrators,’ ... The intelligence organization has been known to intimidate the police into executing its orders. ‘The police are not strategic heavyweights within Zimbabwe,’ says [Knox] Chitiyo. While experts believe many policemen dislike how politicized the force has become, the head of the force is loyal to Mugabe. In March 2008, the police commissioner said ‘Police will never treat perpetrators of political violence with kid gloves. Please be warned ...’ [31a]
- 10.08 Human Rights Watch reported on 8 November 2008, that it had “... interviewed serving police officers who spoke of a national level policy to not pursue ZANU-PF militia and other allies of ZANU-PF implicated in political violence.” The report went on to note the following:
- “A detective inspector in the Law and Order Section (Criminal Investigation Division) based in Harare explained to Human Rights Watch the approach of the police in ‘political’ matters: You do not deal with a political or politically sensitive case without first getting clearance from your superior on duty, and usually these superiors are members or active supporters of ZANU-PF who decide the matter and give directions based on their political affiliation. In fact, it is classified as misconduct for a junior police officer to deal with a political matter without consulting a superior. For instance, you cannot just extract information from a witness in matters involving MDC without clearance and directives from your superior.” (HRW: Our Hands Are Tied, 8 November 2008) [69i] (p25-26)
- 10.09 ZimOnline reported on 20 July 2007 that there was evidence that even relatively senior police officers were unable to act independently without fear of sanction from ruling party supporters. The report noted that: “Six senior police officers in Masvingo town are facing demotion after they set free several opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) party activists who were arrested during a government crackdown last March [2007].” The officers were demoted from the rank of superintendent to inspector after being “... found guilty of releasing suspects especially members of the opposition in March this year without following proper procedures...” [49cs]
- 10.10 Human Rights Watch reported on 12 August 2008 that the police were generally partisan. Abuses committed by government supporting forces such as the ‘War veterans’, ZANU-PF Youth, army and the CIO, took place “...with almost total impunity. Serious crimes are committed without investigation, prosecution or legal redress or compensation for the victims. Police have taken little or no substantial action to investigate the abuses... To Human Rights Watch’s knowledge no alleged perpetrators have been questioned or arrested despite victims and witnesses naming them as the abusers. Instead, the police have embarked on a witch-hunt of elected MDC MPs with at least 12 facing what Human Rights Watch believes to be politically motivated criminal charges.” [69a] (p2)

- 10.11 The Africa Research Bulletin (ARB), Volume 46 Number 4, dated 1st-30th April 2009, reported that there were recent examples of the police taking no action against farm invasions, in spite of Deputy Prime Minister Mutambara calling for them to stop immediately. In most cases the police were reported to "... have been wholly supportive of the sometimes-violent activities." [76b] (17946)
- 10.12 BBC News reported on 21 March 2008, that:
 "Five police officers based in Masvingo, southern Zimbabwe, are serving a 14-day prison term after being convicted of breaching the Police Act. They were accused of supporting the opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) led by Morgan Tsvangirai. The Police Act bars officers from actively participating in politics... But critics say the law has been applied selectively, with supporters of the ruling Zanu-PF going unpunished ahead of the 29 March election. Police chief Augustine Chihuri has publicly stated that he will not allow 'puppets' to take power in Zimbabwe - widely seen as a reference to the MDC." [3bj]
- 10.13 The Zimbabwe Standard reported on 24 January 2009 that concerns about increasing corruption within the police force appeared to be confirmed by the growing number of roadblocks on the country's major roads. The police claimed that the roadblocks are in place to enforce safety on the roads but motorist groups claimed that the roadblocks were simply there to generate revenue for corrupt officers. The report stated that police demand bribes of US$5 per commuter bus, and commercial vehicles are asked for bribes of between 20 – 40 South African rand per trip. Some road hauliers complained of encountering up to four roadblocks on one road. [20a] The BBC reported on 9 June 2009 that police road blocks continued to be common throughout Zimbabwe, but especially near large town and cities. Zimbabweans told the BBC that the "... police often asked drivers for 'presents' before letting them pass." [3k]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Arbitrary arrest and detention

- 10.14 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that: "The constitution and law prohibit arbitrary arrest and detention; however, some laws effectively weakened this prohibition, and security forces repeatedly arbitrarily arrested and detained persons." [2b] (Section 1d)
- 10.15 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) noted in its Political Violence Report – December 2008 that between 1 January 2008 and 31 December 2008 there were 922 reports of unlawful arrest and detention. [35i] (p3) The ZHRF noted in its April 2009 report published on 2 June 2009 that there continued to be reports of unlawful arrests and detention, with 396 reported cases in the first four months of 2009. [35a]

For information on politically motivated violence see section 7: Recent developments, subsection Political violence, and Recent Developments

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Torture

- 10.16 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that:

“Although the constitution prohibits torture and other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, security forces continued to engage in such practices. Security forces routinely committed political violence, including torture of citizens in custody, particularly in areas suspected of heavy support for the opposition. ... police units organized, participated in, or provided logistical support to perpetrators of political violence and generally permitted their activities. Police also refused to record reports of politically motivated violence or destruction of property. Police used excessive force in apprehending and detaining criminal suspects. Government supporters continued to assault suspected and known opposition members and their families, civil society activists, and student leaders. Violent confrontations between various youth groups aligned with either the government or the opposition continued.” [2b] (Section 1c)

- 10.17 The Human Rights Watch World Report 2009 (Zimbabwe), dated 14 January 2009, noted that: “The police are responsible for widespread violations, including harassment, threats, and violence against opposition supporters and human rights activists, as well as torture and other mistreatment. Police have routinely refused to take action against ZANU-PF supporters and militia implicated in political violence.” [69c] Human Rights Watch reported on 22 January 2009 that: “ZANU-PF controlled police units continue to violently break up peaceful protests, and routinely arrest and harass MDC activists.” [69g] (p3)
- 10.18 The USSD 2008 went on to note that the police were implicated in “Torture and other assault methods commonly reported included beating victims with sticks, whips and cables; suspension; burning; electric shock; and falanga (beating the soles of the feet).” [2b] (section 1c) The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF), reported on 9 August 2008, that during the height of the election backlash against those who voted for the MDC, over 30 per cent of reports of violence were attributed to the police. [35n] (p11)
- 10.19 On 27 December 2008, The Guardian reported that lawyers, representing leading Zimbabwean human rights activists who were abducted during the latter half of 2008, accused the police of using torture “... to extract false confessions of a plot against President Robert Mugabe.” The article reported that “...Jestina Mukoko, one of the country’s most prominent activists” and eight other activists had been held incommunicado despite a judge having ordered that they should be moved to hospital and examined by doctors for signs of torture. [34d]

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Extra-judicial killings

10.20 The USSD 2008 noted that:

“The government or its agents committed politically motivated, arbitrary, and unlawful killings during the year. By year's end over 193 citizens had been killed in political violence that targeted members of the opposition party. The MDC claimed that approximately 200 other members and supporters were missing and presumed dead at year's end. The killings were primarily committed by members of ZANU-PF, ZANU-PF youth militia, war veterans, and, to a lesser extent, members of the military and police. The majority of politically motivated killings occurred between the March 29 harmonized election and the June 27 presidential run-off election. NGOs also estimated security forces killed between 200 and 300 citizens in the Chiadzwa diamond fields in Manicaland Province.” [2b] (section 1a)

10.21 Human Rights Watch reported on 8 November 2008 that even where the police were not implicated in the extrajudicial killing of opposition supporters, they were often guilty of failing to make even rudimentary investigations where murders were believed to have been perpetrated by ZANU-PF supporters. (HRW: Our Hands Are Tied, 8 November 2008) [69I] (p26-27)

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

ARMED FORCES

10.22 Jane's Security Sentinel – Country Profile: Zimbabwe (Army, updated 7 January 2008), noted that:

“The Zimbabwe National Army (ZNA) is formally committed to reducing the number of serving personnel to 25,000, although the authorised strength will remain at 42,000... The Army has already redistributed members of 6th Brigade, an infantry formation that was never properly constituted. A brigade headquarters and six battalions have so far been disbanded. The last phase of the reorganisation will see three more battalions disbanded, resulting in five brigade headquarters, all with two attached battalions, and support units such as engineers available to them on request. The intention is to reduce the Parachute Group, the Commando Group and the Presidential Guards into regimental-size formations, although it is understood that the Presidential Guard will probably ultimately consist of a two-battalion strength formation.” [90f]

10.23 The Economist Intelligence Unit, Zimbabwe Country Profile 2008, noted that:

“Since early 2005 a worrying trend within Zimbabwe has been Robert Mugabe's increasing use of the military in virtually all areas of government. In addition, many important state-owned corporations are headed by retired military officers. Although this has helped to shore up and maintain the president's authority, it has led to other problems. In particular, although Mr Mugabe believes that he can rely on the military to be loyal to him, the increased militarization of government is promoting divisions within ZANU-PF that will be difficult to heal in the long run.” [24n] (p5)

- 10.24 SW Radio Africa reported on 3 June 2009 that: “Over 200 senior army officers, deployed countrywide to help secure the violent re-election of Robert Mugabe in last year’s one-man presidential run-off, are still deployed in the villages.” The officers, who each “... commanded a team of soldiers comprising so-called war veterans and ZANU-PF ...” militia are still in position three months after the opposition “... entered into the coalition government with ZANU-PF ...” [53b]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Arbitrary arrest and detention

- 10.25 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that: “The constitution and law prohibit arbitrary arrest and detention; however, some laws effectively weakened this prohibition, and security forces repeatedly arbitrarily arrested and detained persons.” [2b] (Section 1c)

Torture

- 10.26 Amnesty International reported in its Annual Report 2009, covering events in 2008, released on 28 May 2009, that:

“Torture and other ill-treatment of opposition supporters were widespread following the 29 March elections in Mashonaland, Midlands, Manicaland and Masvingo provinces. In most districts, war veterans, soldiers and local ZANU-PF leaders established makeshift torture camps. The camps were set up in tents, clearings within a community, classrooms or at the homes of ZANU-PF officials or displaced MDC activists.

“Local people were forced to attend all-night meetings at these camps. They were made to watch their neighbours being beaten and warned that if they did not vote for ZANU-PF on 27 June they would face a similar fate. MDC supporters were forced to denounce the party and surrender all their party materials, including t-shirts and membership cards. Dozens of MDC supporters died after beatings at these camps. Local youths were forced to attend the camp meetings and participate in beatings.” [14b] (p362)

- 10.27 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) reported on 9 August 2008 that during the height of the backlash against those who voted for the MDC, around 20 per cent of reports of violence were attributed to the army. [35n] (p11)
- 10.28 A range of sources noted that the army was involved in widespread human rights violations, including harassment, threats, and violence against opposition supporters and human rights activists, as well as torture and other mistreatment. (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 18 December 2008) [35j] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 13 February 2009) [35j] (Human Rights Watch, 29 January 2009) [69c] (Human Rights Watch, 22 January 2009) [69g] (Pambazuka News, 4 December 2008) [46a]

Extra-judicial killings

- 10.29 The USSD 2008 noted that: “The government or its agents committed politically motivated, arbitrary, and unlawful killings during the year.” Most killings were “... committed by members of ZANU-PF, ZANU-PF youth militia, war veterans ...” but members of the army were also implicated. [2b] (section 1a)

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE ORGANISATION

- 10.30 A report by the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), published in the Washington Post, dated 28 March 2008, noted that:

“Experts say the most powerful arm of Zimbabwe's security apparatus is the Central Intelligence Organization (CIO). It is the ‘brains behind the regime,’ ... and [is] deeply feared by Zimbabweans inside and outside the country. There is no public record of the CIO's size, but it is thought to have thousands of operatives. Many Zimbabweans think the organization has a network of informers that extends into the Zimbabwean diaspora. Within Zimbabwe, CIO agents have infiltrated the MDC, and are believed to have covertly taken over two newspapers in 2006. Organizations such as Human Rights Watch have documented systematic acts of violence and intimidation committed by the CIO and the police against opposition members or individuals suspected of allegiance to the opposition.” [31a]

- 10.31 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessments – Southern Africa (Zimbabwe), updated 10 February 2009, noted that the Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO):

“... was formed by the Rhodesian authorities in the late 1960s as the country's main civilian intelligence agency. It was later taken over by the Zimbabwe government, ideologically re-oriented and placed under the Ministry of National Security in order to adopt a protective role for the new regime. Political direction between 1980 and 1988 came from Emerson Mnangagwa, a leading ZANU-PF personality and one of the first ZANLA cadres from the Liberation War. Mnangagwa was replaced by former ZANLA doctor Sidney Sekeramayi, who served until August 2000, when he was replaced by former diplomat Nicholas Goche.

“The CIO was used by ZANU-PF after independence largely for accumulating financial data on the country's wealthier citizens, acting as guardians of party loyalty and, surprisingly, did remarkably well at breaking-up sabotage and other attempts directed at the South African ANC and other groups in exile in Zimbabwe.

“Since 2000, the CIO has been used to spearhead the ZANU-PF political-economic programme, including farm occupations and the suppression of opposition politicians and media. Nevertheless, the CIO has not been immune to the wider crisis of Zimbabwe's economy. In September 2001 it was reported that more than 500 members of the CIO were set to leave over poor working conditions. Subsequently, it was reported that major salary increases had been granted to CIO members to appease them. Libyan intelligence officers were also reported to have been sent to Zimbabwe to improve Mugabe's security and intelligence system and technology supply agreements were reported to have been made with China.

"In April 2003, Brigadier-General (ret'd.) Happyton Bonyongwe was appointed by Goche as Director-General of the CIO. Maynard Muzariri was appointed as his deputy." [90m] (Security and Foreign Forces)

- 10.32 Jane's added that "The CIO has taken over immigration security at Harare International Airport in its search of dissidents (mostly MDC activists), especially on flights to the UK and US. It justifies this activity within the remit of co-operation in the international fight against terrorism." [90m] (Security and Foreign Forces) The Mail on Sunday noted on 26 October 2007, that the "... airports are filled with ... Central Intelligence Organisation officers." [94a]
- 10.33 On the subject of security at Harare Airport, Peta Thornycroft, writing in The Telegraph on 22 May 2006, noted that the details of every person passing through immigration is fed into a "...central system as part of Zimbabwe's paranoia to detect undesirables, like journalists, or trade unionists." [5c] (p1) However, in a radio discussion on 16 January 2007, she questioned the effectiveness of security processes at Harare Airport stating that "... I don't know whether the Zimbabweans can get that sort of thing up and going efficiently [referring to South African Apartheid era entry/exit security processes] because they're not terribly efficient at the airports, despite their electronic scanning." (NewZimbabwe.com, 17 January 2007) [41d]

Also Returned failed asylum seekers

- 10.34 Dr Diana Jeater, Principal Lecturer in African History at the University of the West of England, noted in a briefing paper that: "The CIO and police have always been very efficient at being able to identify and locate people within Zimbabwe. ...There is good evidence that the CIO keeps lists of people who are suspected of sympathy with opposition positions. ... Evidence gathered by human rights groups confirms that the information in these lists covers a wide range of citizens, and is often based on information extracted by torture." (Zimbabwe seminar at SOAS 30 March 2007, paragraphs 3.3.2 and 4.5) [58] A recent article, dated 28 June 2008, noted that CIO operatives in the UK were using the threat of being included in a "hit list" if MDC supporters in the UK did not refrain from supporting and fund raising for the opposition party. (The Zimbabwe Guardian, 28 June 2008) [43a]
- 10.35 CVNI.com, dated 3 July 2003, noted that "Over the last couple of years, the CIO has been widening its scope of operations. The agency now works actively with the ZANU-PF youth organisation; which is part of the state funded training programme of the Ministry of Youth Affairs. They are trained in a network of 'youth camps' across the country and in a short time have become a paramilitary extension of the CIO." [88] (p2)
- 10.36 However, the CFR report raised some doubts about the CIO's effectiveness, suggesting that Mugabe's (and ZANU-PF's) expectations of what the organisation could do, did not match their resources. As a result the article noted that "Some analysts think the CIO's ability to generate fear among Zimbabweans might exceed its true power. ‘The extent to which they are actually predators is debatable,’ Chitiyo [‘... Knox Chitiyo, a Zimbabwean researcher who heads the Africa program at the Royal United Services Institute for Defense and Security Studies in London.’] says.” [31a]

- 10.37 A range of sources noted that the CIO was involved in widespread human rights violations, including harassment, threats, and violence against opposition supporters and human rights activists, as well as torture and other mistreatment. (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 18 December 2008) [35j] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 13 February 2009) [35i] (Human Rights Watch, 29 January 2009) [69c] (Human Rights Watch, 22 January 2009) [69g] The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum noted that during the latter half of 2008, “... the CIO embarked on an orgy of abductions and torture of civic society leaders ... and opposition party members ...” [35i] (Overview) (Pambazuka News, 4 December 2008) [46a]

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

- 10.38 The Los Angeles Times reported on 26 September 2008 that the distribution of government food was partly controlled by the Central Intelligence Organization who ensured that opposition supporters were prevented from receiving food aid. [66b] ZimOnline reported on 14 May 2007 that CIO agents had asked traditional leaders in parts of Zimbabwe to compile lists of known MDC supporters. [49bq]

- 10.39 The USSD 2008 noted that:

“CIO personnel have assumed faculty and other positions and posed as students at the University of Zimbabwe and other public universities to intimidate and gather intelligence on faculty who criticize government policies and students who protest government actions. CIO officers regularly attended all lectures where noted MDC activists were lecturers or students. In response both faculty and students often practiced self-censorship in the classroom and academic work.” [2b] (Section 2a)

- 10.40 Sources have for some time claimed that CIO operatives are working in the UK. (SW Radio Africa, July 2005) [89aj] (Institute for War and Peace Reporting, 23 June 2006) [77r] This was most recently reported in The Independent (UK) on 28 June 2008, “British security sources” confirmed that Zimbabwe’s Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO) was operating in the UK and was “...waging a highly organised campaign to terrify the 4,000 MDC members living in the UK.” The aim of the CIO’s operations in the UK is believed to be based on preventing or reducing the amount of funds raised for the MDC’s campaign. It was reported that UK members of the MDC were sending between £5,000 and £10,000 a month for the election campaign. “With inflation in Zimbabwe running at three million per cent, hard cash is vital to buy campaign essentials such as fuel and printing supplies.” The article noted that CIO operatives were using a variety of methods to intimidate MDC supporters in the UK, these included: “Filming of demonstrations outside the Zimbabwean embassy in London, followed by telephone calls to activists, warning that their details have been passed to the government in Harare, or that their families will face punitive sanctions... Disruption of dissident MDC meetings... and photographing members...” It was also noted that the CIO had intercepted “...information passed from the MDC’s London office to its headquarters in Harare, leading to the..." arrest of "dissidents hiding at the MDC HQ and churches in Harare..." [4m]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

OTHER GOVERNMENT FORCES

ZANU-PF YOUTH

- 10.41 A report by the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), updated 9 June 2008, noted that:

"The youth militia, also known as the Green Bombers, is part of Zimbabwe's National Youth Service, a program started in 2000. They loot land owned by white farmers, beat opposition members, and rape women and girls linked to opposition groups (NYT). Ahead of elections, they are charged with distributing food aid and intimidating voters. In April 2008, veterans and youth militias began targeting MDC members and supporters in a campaign of violence and oppression that included a network of illegal detention centers. A group of South African generals who conducted a fact-finding mission in early May found 'shocking levels' of state-sponsored violence, according to the International Crisis Group." [31a]

- 10.42 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessments noted on 10 February 2009 that:

"The National Youth Service programme was established in 2001 and is ostensibly a post-school ideological and vocational training scheme for those who are seeking to enter further education or government service. While initial proposals were for a compulsory programme for all Zimbabwean youth, experience over the first four years demonstrated capacity at five residential camps for just 6,000 youths per year, or about 2 per cent of each age group.

"Critics of the scheme say that the training camps are effectively ZANU-PF indoctrination facilities aiming to brutalise and co-opt a new generation of supporters for the ruling party and its third phase of the 'liberation struggle', replacing ZANLA veterans lost to age and HIV/AIDS. It is alleged that cadres, nicknamed 'Green Bombers' or ZANU-PF Youth Militia, are trained in torture and intimidation techniques before being unleashed back into the community to inform on and combat opposition activists. Female cadres have complained that rape is used as a standard method of breaking in new recruits. Training is certainly paramilitary in style, with uniforms and weapons handling." [90m] (Security and Foreign Forces)

- 10.43 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessments also noted that:

"Late in 2000, it was announced that a return to conscription was envisaged. Lack of resources modified this plan, the responsibility for organising it being transferred to the Ministry of Youth, Development and Job Creation. In August 2001 a national service intake was introduced for the first time since majority rule in 1980.

"As presently construed, national service ostensibly serves as a political introduction for employment in government service, be it the civil service or a military career. However, there is a heavy paramilitary element to the service and critics say that it aims to produce a political-military reserve force to back up or replace the ZANLA war veterans as they die out. An estimated 6,000 young Zimbabweans undergo training in the residential youth camps every year. However, the dire economic circumstances currently facing the government make it unlikely that the youth service is adequately funded or operating at full capacity.

“The mission of the National Youth Service is to ‘transform and empower youths for nation building through life skills training and leadership development’. However, members of the service are thought to be taught using ZANU-PF speeches and campaign material and have been condemned by the West and Africa for carrying out gross human rights violations on behalf of the party.” (Jane’s Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe, accessed 10 February 2009) [90i] (Armed Forces)

- 10.44 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa’s group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch (SITO Report) April 2009 “It is estimated that up to 29,000 ZANU-PF youth militia are still receiving government salaries as civil servants.” [9a] (p3)
- 10.45 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that: “There were reports that the government removed from the civil service and the military persons perceived to be opposition supporters. There also were reports that the government assigned soldiers and youth service members to work in government ministries.” [2b] (Section 3)
- 10.46 The USSD 2008 report also noted that:

“The government gave preference to national youth service graduates among those entering and those seeking employment in the civil service, especially in the security forces. The stated purpose of the training camps was to instill national pride in youth, highlight the history of the struggle for independence, and develop employment skills; however, news reports quoted deserters as saying that the camps subjected trainees to partisan political indoctrination as well as military training. There were numerous credible reports that graduates were used by the government to carry out political violence.” [2b] (Section 5)

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Treatment of recruits in the NYS scheme

- 10.47 The Solidarity Peace Trust reported on 5 September 2003 that the camps at district and village level appeared to have suffered from a lack of resources. Defecting militia stated that they were sent home to eat, then ordered to return after one hour. Examples of gross cruelty were reported at these smaller camps. [65a] Severe beatings were reported to be a standard punishment for militia members who attempted to escape or were captured. (Mail and Guardian, 5 April 2007) [6m]

- 10.48 The Solidarity Peace Trust noted that female militia have been raped on a systematic scale in some camps, with reports that male militias would come into the female dormitories and take turns in raping various women. Often the women were told not to report this to the camp leaders, as to do so would indicate their support for the opposition MDC, and could result in their punishment. Camp instructors have been implicated in these rapes. As a result, militias may be infected with HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections. Although the Government has not explicitly acknowledged this problem, in June 2003 the first all girls training camp was established in Manicaland. It is not known if all the staff are female too. [65a] The Mail and Guardian Online noted on 5 April 2007 that a former member of the ZANU-PF youth service claimed that female volunteers were routinely raped and used as “sex slaves” by instructors. [6m]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Abuses by the youth militia

- 10.49 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that: “Youth wings of the ruling party continued to commit abuses against the opposition and members of civil society with impunity.” They were used to “... harass and intimidate members of the opposition, labor, student movement, and civic groups, as well as journalists considered critical of the government.” ZANU-PF youths were also reported to have been involved in the murder of opposition activists. [2b] (Sections 1a, 1c and 2d)
- 10.50 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) reported on 9 August 2008 that during the height of the election backlash between May and July 2008 over 30 per cent of reports of violence were attributed to the ZANU-PF Youth. [35n] (p11) Following the presidential run-off on 27 June 2008, there continued to be reports that youth militia members terrorised villagers in rural areas, with particular emphasis being placed on traditional ZANU-PF voting areas such as Mashonaland (east west and central) where the party did not gain the number of votes expected. (Human Rights Watch, 12 August 2008) [69a] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 5 May 2008) [35g] (Amnesty International, 25 July 2008) [14f] The previously mentioned sources and the following sources provide details of some individual attacks by youth militia gangs. (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, April 2009) [35a] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, March 2009) [35b] (Human Rights Watch, “Bullets for each of you”, 9 June 2006) [69e] (FCO Blog, 11 March – 1 August 2008) [13n] (Kubatana, Operation Mavhoterapi) [55a] (Harare Tribune, 5 August 2008) [33b]
- 10.51 The Harare Tribune reported on 5 August 2008 that the Youth Militia had operated 55 “torture camps” across the country. It was reported that these had been used during and after the elections to torture and rape MDC activists. A list of the bases still operating was published which included locations and the names of Base Commanders. [33b]
- 10.52 Throughout 2008 there were reports that ZANU-PF militia harassed and attacked opposition members. The Voice of America, reporting on 24 September 2008, noted that the MDC “... issued a statement saying that there's been a resurgence of violence against its supporters by ZANU-PF militia members and other militants. The MDC grouping said dozens of its supporters have been assaulted turned out of their homes or seen them burned by militants of the former ruling... party. "Some of the violence has been taking place in Mbare, a populous Harare suburb where according to MDC sources some 61 families were attacked by ZANU-PF militia members in full view of police at the Matapi station, who took no action." In addition, the source reported that militia members had not been prevented by the police from evicting MDC supporters from their homes. [83o] Pambazuka News reported on 4 December 2008, that in one area of Zimbabwe, ZANU PF militia compiled lists of opposition supporters. Asterisks were added next to a person's names to indicate the level of political activism and to "... also determine the severity of the physical attack they would receive." [46a] (p3)

- 10.53 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, noted in its April 2009 report, published on 2 June 2009 that during April 2009 there continued to be reports of ZANU-PF youths involved in violent attacks on farm owners and workers. The report noted that: "The ZANU-PF youths who have occupied the commercial farms have become a law unto themselves ...[farm workers were] severely assaulted by ZANU-PF youths for talking to the Deputy Prime Minister Arthur Mutambara about the situation on Twyford farm in Chegutu." Youths were reported to have been involved in a number of other farm invasions. [35a]

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

- 10.54 Human Rights Watch reported on 12 August 2008 that the youth militia along with 'War Veterans', police and other security services generally did not face sanctions for the their actions. The report noted: "Abuses continue to take place with almost total impunity. Serious crimes are committed without investigation, prosecution or legal redress or compensation for the victims." [69a] (p2)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

WAR VETERANS

- 10.55 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment updated 20 June 2008 reported that: "The Zimbabwe National Liberation War Veterans' Association (ZNLWA) emerged as a major pro-government pressure group in the 1990s, leading the occupation of white-owned farms in early 2000 and forming pro-ZANU-PF militias to attack MDC supporters during the 2000 election campaign." The war veterans were reported to number around 55,000. "Larger in number than the military and with less to lose, the 'veterans' movement is arguably beyond the control of its political patrons in ZANU-PF. ...the National Liberation War Veterans' Association has become more militant since 2003 and staunchly opposes the MDC." [90h] (Internal Affairs)
- 10.56 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessments noted, updated 8 October 2008, that 'war veterans' are "... included in the reserve force and receive a gratuity (increasingly sporadically) from the Ministry of Defence for being technically available for duty." [90i] (Armed Forces) Indicating the continuing influence of the War Veterans over the government, ZimOnline reported on 2 February 2007 that the government agreed a substantial increase in War Vet pensions. "The payout increase for war veterans leaves former fighters – known for doing little except campaigning for Mugabe and ZANU-PF every election time – earning more than junior school teachers ... ” In addition to the pension, ex-combatants are entitled to free treatment at state hospitals and free education for children at state schools. [49ba]

- 10.57 Jane’s noted (updated on 20 June 2008) that: “ZNLWA leader Jubulani Sibanda was suspended from ZANU-PF in December 2004 for attempting to obstruct the nomination of Joyce Mujuru as national vice-president. This prompted ZNLWA to assert its independent identity and stress that it was not bound to agree with ZANU-PF policy. A breakaway faction known as the Zimbabwe Liberators’ Platform subsequently declared its opposition to Mugabe and the ZANU-PF inner circle.” [90g] (Internal Affairs)

Abuses by the War Veterans

- 10.58 As previously recorded, Amnesty International’s Annual Report 2009, reported that ‘war veterans’ were heavily involved in the torture and other ill-treatment of opposition supporters, resulting in the wounding and deaths of opposition supporters. [14b] (p362)
- 10.59 A wide range of sources noted that the ‘War Veterans’ were involved in widespread human rights violations, including harassment, threats, and violence against opposition supporters and human rights activists, as well as torture and other mistreatment. The following sources provide a number of examples of these abuses. (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, April 2009) [35a] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 18 December 2008) [35j] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 13 February 2009) [35i] (Human Rights Watch, 29 January 2009) [69c] (Human Rights Watch, 22 January 2009) [69g] (Pambazuka News, 4 December 2008) [46a]
- 10.60 In collaboration with the ZANU-PF Youth Militia and the security forces, the ‘War Veterans’ participated in numerous attacks on opposition supporters and those suspected of sympathising with the opposition. ‘War Veterans’ were implicated in the torture and killing of opposition supporters with 163 people reported to have been murdered between 29 March and 12 August 2008. Even after the presidential run-off on 27 June 2008 and the start of power sharing talks between ZANU-PF and the two factions of the MDC, there continued to be reports that ‘War Veterans’ were involved in violent attacks against opposition supporters. (Human Rights Watch, 12 August 2008) [69a] (Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, 5 May 2008) [35g] (Amnesty International, 25 July 2008) [14f] The following sources provide additional details of individual attacks by War Veterans. (Human Rights Watch, “Bullets for each of you”, 9 June 2006) [69e] (FCO Blog, 11 March – 1 August 2008) [13n] (Kubatana, Operation Mavhoterapi) [55a] (Harare Tribune, 5 August 2008) [33b]
- 10.61 The Harare Tribune reported on 5 August 2008 that the Youth Militia had operated 55 “torture camps” across the country. It was reported that these had been used during and after the elections to torture and rape MDC activists. A list of the bases still operating was published which included locations and the names of Base Commanders. [33b] However, Human Rights Watch reported on 9 June 2008 that many of the torture camps were used by ‘War Veterans’ to commit violence against MDC supporters and those perceived to support the opposition. [69e] In addition to the torture camps, the 'war veterans' were also reported to have set up road blocks near the bases with vehicles being stopped and the occupants being forced to chant ZANU-PF slogans and sometimes being beaten. [89w]

See Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

IMPUNITY OF SECURITY FORCES

- 10.62 Human Rights Watch reported on 12 August 2008 that the youth militia along with 'War Veterans', police and other security services generally did not face sanctions for the their actions. The report noted: "Abuses continue to take place with almost total impunity. Serious crimes are committed without investigation, prosecution or legal redress or compensation for the victims." [69a] (p2) Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment, updated 20 June 2008, who also noted that: "War veterans have been able to act with impunity as the police have refused to restrain their activities." [90f] (Internal Affairs)
- 10.63 Amnesty International Annual Report 2009, Zimbabwe, covering 2008, released on 28 May 2009, observed: "The police were unable or unwilling to act against those responsible for instigating and committing human rights violations against people suspected of voting for the MDC in the 29 March elections. Repeated failure by the authorities to bring to justice people with links to ZANU-PF or members of the security forces allowed the violations to escalate." [14b]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

11. MILITARY SERVICE

- 11.01 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe (Armed Forces, updated: 8 October 2008), noted that Zimbabwe does not have conscription but plans to reintroduce some form of compulsory military service were announced in 2000. “Lack of resources modified this plan ...” and it is unlikely that this situation will change any time soon owing to the state of the economy. [90i]
- 11.02 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), in a letter regarding the termination of military service in the Zimbabwean Army, stated, on 2 June 2005, that it is possible to resign from the Zimbabwean Army although anyone doing so will be required to serve a period of notice. The period of notice will vary depending upon the training that has been provided. “Any man claiming that he has left the Zimbabwe Armed Forces legitimately should have documents of discharge in his possession.
- “Terms and conditions of service are very similar to those in the British Army. Other ranks in the Zimbabwe Army sign on for 3, 7 or 20 years service. They can terminate their service at any time provided all their obligations, current at the time, have been met. Obligations might include time-bars for any training paid for by the military in civilian organisations. If the soldier wishes to leave before any time-bar has expired he will first be required to refund the Service all the charges for the course and the military salary paid to him while he attended the course. Early termination of service also brings penalties to pension entitlements.” [13b]
- 11.03 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that: “Military courts deal with courts martial and disciplinary proceedings only for military personnel. Police courts, which can sentence a police officer to confinement in a camp or demotion, handle disciplinary and misconduct cases. Defendants in these courts have the right to appeal to the Supreme Court.” [2b] (Section 1e)
- 11.04 The USSD 2008 noted that: “The government gave qualified women access to training in the military and national service. Although there were advances for women within the armed forces in recent years, they continued to occupy primarily administrative positions.” [2b] (Section 5)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Conscientious objection

- 11.05 The World Survey of Conscription and Conscientious Objection to Military Service conducted by War Resisters International in 1998, noted that “conscientious objection is legally recognised” in Zimbabwe. Section 24 of the 1979 National Service Act provides for exemption from military service on conscientious grounds, such as religious beliefs, if conscription were to be introduced. It is not clear whether this exemption “applies to professional serving members of the armed forces”. [21]
- 11.06 The FCO, in a letter regarding the termination of military service in the Zimbabwean Army, stated on 2 June 2005 that:

“If a soldier is absent for more than 28 days he will be charged with desertion upon recapture, or his surrender. Absence for less than 28 days is normally dealt with under the lesser charge of ‘Absent Without Leave (AWOL)’ and can be dealt with summarily by the soldier's Commanding Officer, with punishment ranging from restriction of privileges, to small fines or short custodial sentences of a few days’ duration. Desertion is a serious charge to be dealt with by Courts Martial and depending on the circumstances, could result in long custodial sentences e.g. years, forfeiture of all benefits and salary and dishonourable dismissal from the Service. In wartime, of course, the penalties of desertion are very severe indeed. Occasionally, a Commander will not follow the ‘book’ and summary punishments will go beyond delegated powers.” [13b]

- 11.07 The USSD 2008 report noted that defendants in that military had the right of appeal to the Supreme Court. [2b] (Section 1e) However, the USSD 2008 report did not record whether or not such trials met internationally accepted standards.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

12. JUDICIARY

12.01 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe (Internal Affairs, updated: 13 March 2009), noted that: “The legal system is based on a mixture of Roman-Dutch and English common law. Judicial authority is vested in the Supreme Court, the High Court and subsidiary courts including Magistrates' Courts, Local Courts headed by traditional chiefs and headmen and Small Claims Courts.” [90]

ORGANISATION

12.02 Europa World Online (accessed 2 February 2009) noted that there are four levels of courts, the highest being the Supreme Court.

- “The Supreme Court has original jurisdiction in matters in which an infringement of Chapter III of the Constitution defining fundamental rights is alleged. In all other matters it has appellate jurisdiction only. It consists of the Chief Justice, a Deputy Chief Justice and such other judges of the Supreme Court, being not less than two, as the President may deem necessary.
- “The High Court consists of the Chief Justice, the Judge President, and such other judges of the High Court as may from time to time be appointed. Below the High Court are Regional Courts and Magistrates' Courts with both civil and criminal jurisdiction presided over by full-time professional magistrates.
- “The Customary Law and Local Courts Act, adopted in 1990, abolished the village and community courts and replaced them with customary law and local courts, presided over by chiefs and headmen; in the case of chiefs, jurisdiction to try customary law cases is limited to those where the monetary values concerned do not exceed Z.$1,000 and in the case of a headman's court Z.$500.”
- Magistrates' Courts. “Appeals from the Chiefs' Courts are heard in Magistrates' Courts and, ultimately, the Supreme Court. All magistrates now have jurisdiction to try cases determinable by customary law.” [1e]

12.03 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe (Internal Affairs, updated: 13 March 2009), noted that: “The judiciary is headed by the chief justice who, together with other judges of the Supreme and High Courts, is appointed by the president after consultation with the Judicial Service Commission. According to the constitution, a judge may serve until the retirement age of 65 but this is often extended to 70 when a judge is in good health.” [90] The US State Department 25 February 2009, noted that: “The constitution provides that they [judges] may be removed from the bench only for gross misconduct and that they cannot be discharged or transferred for political reasons.” [2b] (Section 1e)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

INDEPENDENCE AND FAIR TRIAL

- 12.04 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that the government used “[various methods] to undermine the independence of the judiciary, including giving farms and homes to judges. On August 1, the government newspaper The Herald reported that the Reserve Bank had given judges luxury cars, plasma televisions, and electricity generators.” [2b] (Section 1e)
- 12.05 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that since the inauguration of the unity government in February 2009, the “Judges are under pressure to comply with ZANU-PF demands, and the police have repeatedly refused to obey government and court orders.” [100a] (p5)
- 12.06 Freedom House in its Freedom in the World 2008 report, Zimbabwe, released in July 2008, stated:
- “While some courts have struck down or disputed government actions, increasing pressure by the regime has substantially eroded the judiciary's capacity to act independently. The accused are often denied access to counsel and a fair, timely trial. The government has repeatedly refused to enforce court orders and has replaced senior judges or pressured them to resign by stating that it could not guarantee their security; judges have been subject to extensive physical harassment. The judicial system has been burdened by the vacancy of nearly 60 magistrate posts, which has caused a backlog of some 60,000 cases.” [96a] (p5)
- 12.07 Amnesty International's Annual Report 2008, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2007, released May 2008, noted that “many judicial officers' salaries were below the poverty line...” leading to high levels of corruption in the judicial system. [14d] (p3)
- 12.08 The USSD 2008 noted that:
- “The constitution provides for the right to a fair trial; however, this right frequently was compromised in practice due to political pressures. Defendants enjoy a presumption of innocence under the law; however, this was not always preserved in practice. Trials were held by judges without juries and were open to the public, except in certain security cases. Every defendant has the right to a lawyer of his or her choosing, but a local attorney reported that most defendants in magistrates' courts did not have legal representation. In criminal cases an indigent defendant may apply to have the government provide an attorney, but this was rarely granted except in capital cases, where the government provided an attorney for all defendants unable to afford one. Litigants in civil cases may request free legal assistance from the Legal Resources Foundation or ZLHR. ... The right to appeal exists in all cases and is automatic in cases in which the death penalty is imposed.” [2b] (Section 1d)
- 12.09 The USSD 2008 continued:
- “Magistrates, who are part of the civil service rather than the judiciary, heard the vast majority of cases. Legal experts said that defendants in politically sensitive cases were more likely to receive a fair hearing in magistrates' lower courts than in higher courts, where justices were more likely to make political decisions. ... most junior magistrates and magistrates in rural areas did not benefit from government patronage. Instead, government sympathizers relied on threats and intimidation to force magistrates, particularly rural magistrates, to rule in the government's favor. Some urban-based junior magistrates had demonstrated a greater degree of independence and granted MDC and civil society activists bail, against the government's wishes. Other judicial officers such as prosecutors and private attorneys also faced political pressure, including harassment and intimidation." [2b] (Section 1e)

- 12.10 The USSD 2008 went on to note that magistrates were sometimes subject to intimidation, beatings and death threats from ZANU-PF supporters. [2b] (Section 1e)
- 12.11 During the year there was some evidence that Zimbabwe's courts did act independently of the government and its supporters, although court rulings were often ignored. An article published in The Times on 1 June 2009 noted the continuing invasions of white owned farms and in one case, that of farmer Ben Freeth, the Zimbabwe High Court had twice ruled against government backed invaders requiring them to vacate the property. The court directed the police to ensure that the order was complied with but this was reportedly ignored. [82b] The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, reported on 28 April 2009 that "Mutare Magistrate Livingstone Chipadze was reportedly arrested for ordering the release of Roy Bennett. He was charged with criminal abuse of office for allegedly contravening ... the Criminal Law Codification and Reform Act ... He was detained at Mutare Central Police Station and released on bail on 7 March 2009. [35b] (p11) " The Mutare Magistrate's Court later ruled that there was no evidence that he had committed any offence when he permitted [the] MDC treasurer ... to pay bail and later signed a warrant for the politician's release from jail." (BBC, 6 March 2009) [3i]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

13. ARREST AND DETENTION – LEGAL RIGHTS

ROLE OF POLICE AND SECURITY APPARATUS

- 13.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 May 2009, noted that:

“The Zimbabwe Republic Police (ZRP) is responsible for maintaining law and order. Although the ZRP officially is under the authority of the Ministry of Home Affairs, in practice the president's office, through the JOC, controlled some roles and missions. The Zimbabwe National Army and Air Force, under the Defense Ministry, were responsible for external security; however, there were cases in which the government called upon them for domestic operations. The Central Intelligence Organization (CIO), under the Ministry of State for National Security, is responsible for internal and external security.” [2b] (Section 1d)

- 13.02 The USSD 2008 report also stated that:

“It was difficult for rank-and-file police to remain impartial due to continued politicization of the force's upper echelons. For example, in the [2008] pre-election period, police officers were reportedly forced to attend ZANU-PF rallies during work hours.” The report went on to note that “... police officers were told that they were not to investigate or arrest ZANU-PF supporters who might have been implicated in political violence. ... There were reports that untrained or unqualified personnel were hired into the police solely because of their support for ZANU PF. There were reports that police and army personnel suspected of being sympathetic to the political opposition were demoted or fired.” [2b] (Section 1d)

- 13.03 The USSD 2008 continued:

“Police were poorly trained and equipped, underpaid, and corrupt. Severely depleted human and material resources, especially fuel, further reduced police effectiveness during the year. Corruption continued to increase in part due to low salaries and a worsening economy.

“Security forces were rarely held accountable for abuses. Frequent allegations of excessive force and torture were often dismissed by senior government officials who claimed that the actions were necessary to maintain public order. In March 2007, after security forces violently prevented a public gathering, Mugabe was widely quoted as saying that “the police have a right to bash” protesters who resist them.

“Mechanisms to investigate security force abuses remained weak. Court orders compelling investigations into allegations of abuse were routinely ignored by authorities. Government efforts to reform security forces were minimal, and training was rarely provided.” [2b] (Section 1d)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

ARREST AND DETENTION

- 13.04 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 May 2009, noted that::

“Arrests require court-issued warrants, and the law requires that police inform an arrested person of the charges before taking the individual into custody; however, these rights were not respected in practice. Although the law requires a preliminary hearing before a magistrate within 48 hours of an arrest (or 96 hours over a weekend), authorities routinely disregarded the law if a person did not have legal representation. Police typically made arrests which may have been politically motivated on Friday, which permitted legal detention until Monday. There were numerous reports of security forces arbitrarily arresting opposition and civil society activists, interrogating and beating them for information about their organizations' activities, and then releasing them the next day without charge.

“Although the Criminal Procedures and Evidence Act substantially reduces the power of magistrates to grant bail without the consent of the attorney general or his agents, a circular issued by the attorney general giving a general authority to grant bail lessened the negative effect of the law in practice. High Court judges at times granted bail independently. The act allows police to hold persons suspected of committing economic crimes for up to four weeks without bail.” [2b] (Section 1d)

- 13.05 The USSD 2008 report also noted:

“Authorities often did not allow detainees prompt or regular access to their lawyers and often informed lawyers who attempted to visit their clients that detainees were ‘not available,’ especially in cases involving opposition members and civil society activists. In several cases police claimed not to know where they were holding a detained individual, which delayed a hearing on bail release. Family members sometimes were denied access unless accompanied by an attorney. Detainees were often held incommunicado. Family members and attorneys often could not verify that a person had been arrested until the individual appeared in court. ... There were reports that victims or witnesses of crimes were detained or charged with the crime after reporting it to police.” [2b] (Section 1d)

- 13.06 Amnesty International's International Report 2009, covering events in 2008, reported that the police colluded with ZANU-PF supporters and illegally detained human rights defenders and opposition activists. Detainees were denied prompt access to lawyers and medical treatment. [14b]

See also Security forces, Arbitrary arrest and detention

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

14. PRISON CONDITIONS

- 14.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“Prison conditions remained harsh and life-threatening. The government’s 42 prisons were designed for a maximum of 17,000 prisoners. In May [2008] the Ministry of Justice, Legal, and Parliamentary Affairs reported that the country’s prisons held between 22,000-24,000 prisoners; however, a local NGO reported that they actually held approximately 35,000 inmates [confirmed by the BBC on 1 April 2009 [3n]]. Prison guards beat and abused prisoners. Poor sanitary conditions and overcrowding persisted, which aggravated outbreaks of cholera, diarrhoea, measles, tuberculosis, and HIV/AIDS related illnesses. Human rights activists familiar with prison conditions reported constant shortages of food, water, electricity, clothing, and soap. According to the 2006 Solidarity Peace Trust and Institute for Justice and Reconciliation report Policing the State, ‘political arrestees are routinely and deliberately overcrowded, with 30 or more people being kept at times in cells intended for six,’ and those ‘who have been severely beaten by the police and have fractures and other injuries, are routinely denied any access to health care or medication for varying periods of time.’ In June then-Deputy Attorney General Johannes Tomana acknowledged overcrowding and stated, ‘jail is not nice. It is not meant to be nice.’ Tomana was appointed Attorney General in December.” [2b] (Section 1c)

- 14.02 The USSD 2008 report noted:

“Food shortages were increasingly serious in most prisons. Some prisoners reported receiving only one small meal a day. According to the Zimbabwe Association for Crime Prevention and Rehabilitation of the Offender, an average of two prisoners died in custody each day. In December the media reported that in some prisons, guards stole food from prisoners. ... “Most prison deaths were attributed to harsh conditions, hunger, and HIV/AIDS. In 2006 a local NGO estimated that 52 percent of prisoners were HIV-positive. In 2006 Zimbabwe Prisons Service Commissioner General Paradzai Zimondi described the mortality rate in prisons as a ‘cause for concern.’ In November the local press reported that some prisoners with hunger-related health conditions were released from prisons.” [2b] (Section 1c)

- 14.03 A number of sources reported that conditions within Zimbabwe’s prisons continued to deteriorate as a lack of funding resulted in shortages of essentials such as food, medication and sanitation. The Zimbabwe Independent noted on 30 January 2009 that the country’s 55 prisons were suffering critical shortages of food, water and electricity. Water supplies at Chikurubi Maximum Security Prison was described as “... erratic, exposing inmates to numerous diseases.” The report also noted that sick inmates with communicable diseases were not being quarantined. [11d] The Standard reported on 30 August 2008 that “scores” of prisoners at Mutimurefu prison (near Masvingo) “... are succumbing to pellagra, which is caused by lack of food, with some reportedly becoming mentally ill.” The article noted that seven inmates had died in one week from illness related to malnutrition. [70b] Some reports stated that prisoners were only receiving one meal a day (The Standard, 22 November 2008) [70c] and that this meal often consisted of

- vegetable soup. (The Standard, 30 August 2008) [70b] SW Radio Africa reporting the aborted humanitarian mission to Zimbabwe by former US President Jimmy Carter and former UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, who were refused entry to Zimbabwe, noted that "... at least 20 people die each day in Zimbabwe's prisons." [53d]
- 14.04 The Standard reported on 22 November 2008 that: "Prisons have started releasing inmates on medical grounds as conditions at most of the country's jails continue to deteriorate amid reports of an upsurge in hunger-related diseases. In Matabeleland North, which includes Bulawayo, at least 200 seriously ill prisoners awaiting trial were released in the past week ..." [70c]
- 14.05 The Times reported on 22 December 2008 that one prison warden at Bulawayo's Khami Prison admitted that his salary was inadequate to support his family and that the only way that they could survive was by stealing food from the prisoners supplies "... or by trading favours for food brought in by [prisoners] families. 'There's no discipline ... We depend on the prisoners to stay alive.'" [82h]
- 14.06 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa's group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch (SITO Report) April 2009, noted that 20 prisoners were released "... from Khami Prison on medical grounds, after the South African Broadcasting Corporation Television 3 (SABC 3) screened a documentary called 'Hell Hole'." [9a] (p3) The documentary shot secretly over a number of months, "... exposed horrific conditions in the country's jails ..." The BBC reported on 1 April 2009 that conditions were so bad in many prisons that prisoners were dying of starvation and diseases resulting from living in crowded and unhygienic conditions. The documentary "... showed how prison staff had converted cells to 'hospital wards' for the dying" and had built "... makeshift mortuaries ...within the prison grounds, where bodies of inmates 'rotted on the floor with maggots moving all around'." [3n] Commenting on the same documentary, a Daily Mail article, dated 2 April 2009, reported "Annah Moyo, a Zimbabwean lawyer who works with the Southern African Centre for Survivors of Torture said conditions in Zimbabwe prisons were 'a form of torture.' She said: 'Everyone knows that if you're sent to prison, your chances of coming out alive are slim.'" [94b] The BBC reported on 5 June 2009 that: "At one prison, Chikurubi, at least 700 of the 1,300 inmates died last year, Zimbabwe weekly The Standard reported in May." However, the article also noted that the International Committee for Red Cross (ICRC) had "... begun distributing food and other supplies [including blankets and soap] to thousands of Zimbabwean Prison inmates." The ICRC hoped to be able to feed 10,000 inmates by the end of the year. [3m]
- 14.07 Concerning children in prisons, the USSD 2008 report noted that:
- "Juveniles were not held separately from adults. The Prison Fellowship of Zimbabwe, a local Christian organization working with former inmates, estimated in 2006 that more than 200 children were living in the prison system with their detained mothers. A two-year-old child who was abducted with his mother from Zvimba South on October 31, and appeared in police custody on December 22, remained in prison with his mother at year's end." [2b] (Section 1c)

Aldo see Death penalty for more information

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

15. DEATH PENALTY

- 15.01 Hands Off Cain (accessed 2 February 2009) noted that Zimbabwe remains a retentionist country. The method of execution is hanging. Since independence from the United Kingdom a total of 244 people had been sentenced to death by the country's High Court between 1980 and 2001, 76 of whom were executed. "Executions were suspended for several years due to lack of a public hangman, but resumed in October 2001 when a candidate was covertly appointed. The last executions were those of four prisoners convicted of murder hanged in June 2003 [see para 16.02 below]. No executions were registered in Zimbabwe in 2004 and in 2005. On December 18, 2008 Zimbabwe voted against the Resolution on a Moratorium on the Use of the Death Penalty at the UN General Assembly." [71a]
- 15.02 On the 8 August 2007, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office reported that the last execution to take place in the country was on 22 July 2005. Prior to that, there were two executions on 4 June 2004. There were a total of 45 prisoners sentenced to death with appeals outstanding. 12 prisoners were on death row, having exhausted all appeals including to the President for clemency. No dates for forthcoming executions was available, although it was noted that the state funded Herald newspaper publishes the details of those executed the day after an execution. [13]
- 15.03 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that: "The right to appeal exists in all cases, and is automatic in cases in which the death penalty is imposed." [2b] (Section 1d)

Also see Prison Conditions above

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

16. POLITICAL AFFILIATION

FREEDOM OF POLITICAL EXPRESSION

- 16.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated:

“The constitution provides citizens with the right to change their government peacefully; however, this right was restricted in practice because the political process continued to be tilted heavily in favor of ZANU-PF, which has ruled continuously since independence in 1980... On March 29, the country held harmonized elections for the presidency, House of Assembly, Senate, and local government.

“As in previous elections in 2000, 2002, and 2005, the preelection period was not free and fair. The environment was characterized by some violence and a media environment that heavily favored Mugabe. Although Tsvangirai was allowed to campaign, the country police did not permit the MDC to hold all planned rallies, and some MDC activists were intimidated and beaten in the weeks before the election... The months leading up to the [Preidential] run-off election [held in June] were marred by widespread violence and intimidation perpetuated by the ZANU-PF government and its supporters.” [2b] (Section 3)

- 16.02 The same source noted “The government routinely interfered with MDC-led local governments. In the March 29 [2008] elections, the MDC won a majority of seats in city councils across the country.” However, the report goes on to note that the Mugabe’s government abused provisions under the ‘Urban Councils Act’ to appoint ‘special interest councillors’ who were primarily ZANU-PF candidates who had lost to their MDC colleagues.” [2b] (Section 3) The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted that: “Democratic space has been severely restricted, and basic human rights such as freedom of expression, assembly and association systematically dismantled.” [13g] (p189)

Political prisoners/politically motivated violence

- 16.03 The USSD 2008 observed:

“There were hundreds of reports of political detainees throughout the year, including opposition officials, their supporters, NGO workers, and civil society activists. Many were held for one or two days and released, others were held for weeks or months. During the year police severely beat and tortured numerous opposition, civil society, and student leaders while in detention.

“At year's end there were at least 18 political prisoners in police custody. All were abducted between October 31 and mid-December and were brought to jails in Harare on December 22 and 23 by the state security agents who abducted them. According to affidavits and testimony from victims, witnesses, and their families, they were abducted and later jailed because of their affiliations with the MDC or membership in a civil society organization. At least nine claimed they were tortured after their abduction. Despite court orders calling on the state to investigate the abductions and torture claims and to release the group, police refused to take action. At year's end an additional 14 persons abducted in the same manner remained unaccounted for, although civil society organizations believed they were also in state custody.” [2b]

(Section 1e)

- 16.04 Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) noted in its Political Violence Report – April 2009, that in the first four months of 2009 levels of political violence had dropped dramatically compared with the same period in 2008 and 2007. In the first four months of 2009 there were 872 reports of recorded political violence. [35a] This compared with 5,471 cases during the same period in 2008 (ZHRF Political Violence Report, December 2008) [35i] and 4,274 during the same period in 2007. (ZHRF Political Violence Report, December 2007) [35z]

For details of the elections and politically motivated violence see Recent Developments and Politically Motivated Violence

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION AND ASSEMBLY

- 16.05 The USSD 2008 noted that:

“The constitution provides for freedom of assembly; however, the government restricted this right in practice. POSA [Public Order and Security Act] does not require permits for meetings or processions, but it requires that organizers notify the police of their intentions to hold a public gathering seven days in advance. Failure to do so results in criminal prosecution as well as civil liability. In January [2008] POSA was amended as a part of constitutional Amendment 18 to require police to go to a magistrate’s court and to state in an affidavit why a public gathering should not take place. Although many groups that conducted meetings did not seek permits, other groups informed the police of their planned events and were denied permission, or their requests went unanswered. Police insisted that their permission was required to hold public gatherings and sometimes approved requests; however, they disrupted many events whether or not they were notified.” [2b] (Section 2b)

- 16.06 The USSD 2008 report also noted that:

“Although the constitution and law provide for freedom of association, the government restricted this right in practice. Organizations generally were free of governmental interference only if the government viewed their activities as non-political. ZANU-PF supporters, sometimes with government support or acquiescence, intimidated and abused members of organizations perceived to be associated with the opposition. The government raided the offices and inquired into the activities of numerous NGOs and other organizations it believed opposed government policies.” [2b] (Section 2b)

- 16.07 Freedom House reported in ‘Freedom of Association Under Threat’, dated 21 November 2008, that:

“Freedom of assembly is severely restricted under the 2002 Public Order and Security Act (POSA). The act obliges organizers to give police seven days’ notice prior to any public meeting, and failure to do so can result in both criminal and civil charges. While the advance notice provisions do not explicitly require police permission, security forces routinely use POSA to declare meetings and demonstrations illegal, arrest and detain demonstrators, impose arbitrary curfews and bans, and obstruct public gatherings with roadblocks and riot police. Consequently, thousands of opposition activists (mostly from the MDC), members of civic organizations (particularly the National Constituent Assembly and Women of Zimbabwe Arise), and trade unionists have been arrested in the past five years.

“Security forces have killed several demonstrators and routinely beat protesters and detainees. A series of ZCTU-led demonstrations in 2006 led to the arrest of 500 people across the country, including almost the entire ZCTU leadership. A number of the union leaders, president Lovemore Matombo and secretary-general Wellington Chibhebhe among them, were severely beaten while in custody. In 2007, police violently dispersed a large prayer meeting organized by the Save Zimbabwe Campaign in Harare; the meeting occurred during a three-month ban on political gatherings. Over 50 people were arrested, and many were badly beaten on site or in police custody, including MDC leader Morgan Tsvangirai and National Constituent Assembly leader Lovemore Madhuku. One MDC leader, Gift Tandare, was shot dead. During the election period in 2008, the government blocked opposition rallies, repeatedly detained MDC leaders, and mounted a systematic campaign of violence in which dozens of activists were apparently killed and many more were beaten or driven into exile.” [96d]

- 16.08 Freedom House reported that security forces continued to disrupt demonstrations by the Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA) group. Restrictions imposed under POSA (Public Order and Security Act) have resulted in hundreds of women being arrested for participating in demonstrations. (Freedom in the World 2008) [96a] (p5) The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) noted in its Political Violence Report – December 2008 that throughout 2008 WOZA activists continued to hold demonstrations against a range of issues such as the economy, access to health care and food aid. WOZA meetings and demonstrations were broken up by the police and were often met with violence. [35]

Also see Public Order and Security Act \(POSA\) for more information of restrictions under the Act.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

OPPOSITION GROUPS AND POLITICAL ACTIVISTS

The Movement for Democratic Change (MDC)

- 16.09 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that the opposition MDC-Tsvangirai and MDC-Mutambara agreed to join a government of national unity with Robert Mugabe's ZANU-PF in February 2009. Although, part of the government, the MDC is still opposed to many of ZANU-PF's policies and wishes to ultimately govern the country alone. [100a] (p2)
- 16.10 The Economist Intelligence Unit's Zimbabwe Country Profile, updated 9 May 2008, noted that:

“The MDC is essentially the only opposition party. The government has made a concerted effort to undermine its parliamentary representatives: many have been harassed by the security forces and periodically arrested on spurious charges. This has prompted a major debate within the party as to whether contesting elections and engaging in democratic opposition makes any political sense, given the country's repressive political climate. These divisions came to the fore during 2005 when the party actually split in two; the faction led by the long-standing MDC president, Morgan Tsvangirai, is the larger one. However, following the disputed 2008 elections, the party's two factions have recombined in order to focus their efforts on deposing Mr Mugabe...[regarding 2008 elections] The official results were to be announced by the Harare offices of the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission's (ZEC), but they arrived very slowly. By April 3rd the official results showed that the Tsvangirai wing of the MDC had won control of parliament with 99 seats to ZANU-PF's 97 seats. It was the first time since Zimbabwe became independent in 1980 that ZANU-PF did not control parliament. The Arthur Mutambara faction of the MDC won ten seats, and the independent candidate, Jonathan Moyo, won a seat in Matabeleland, while three other seats were undeclared because the candidates had died.” [24m]

Please see the March 2009 update of the Zimbabwe Country Report (<http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs09/zimbabwe-260309.doc>) for more detailed information about the MDC over the last few years.

For more information about the problems faced by the MDC in opposing ZANU-PF as an opposition group and now as part of the government see Latest news, Recent developments, Politically Motivated Violence and Human rights – introduction.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

17. FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND MEDIA

OVERVIEW

- 17.01 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that:

“Freedom of speech and the press remain severely constricted, with repressive legislation in place, which inhibits operation of the independent media. The state has detained many journalists and others who are accused of criticising Mugabe or making statements that are prejudicial to the state¹. Coverage of Mugabe's campaign dominated the broadcast and print media during the election period. The state media remains heavily biased in favour of the regime.” [13a] (Freedom of expression and the media)

- 17.02 To demonstrate this last point, The Times reported on 12 February 2009 that in spite of the power sharing agreement between the ZANU-PF and the MDC, the “... state controlled television and radio failed to broadcast ... [Morgan Tsvangirai's] inaugural speech ...” or swearing in ceremony. [82ad]

- 17.03 The Freedom House report, Worst of the Worst 2009, Zimbabwe, released on 3 June 2009, observed that “Freedoms of expression and the press are severely restricted. Journalists are required to register with the state and are routinely subjected to intimidation, physical attacks, arrest and detention, and financial pressure. In 2008, scores of local and foreign journalists were beaten or detained, both before and after the elections.” [96e]

- 17.04 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“The constitution provides for freedom of speech and of the press, but legislation limits these freedoms in the ‘interest of defense, public safety, public order, state economic interests, public morality, and public health.’ The government restricted these rights in practice. Journalists and publishers practiced self-censorship.

“The government continued to restrict freedom of speech, particularly by those making or publicizing comments critical of President Mugabe. Passage of the 2007 ICA increased the government's ability to monitor speech and to punish those who criticized the government.” [2b] (Section 2a)

- 17.05 The Economist Intelligence Unit noted that: “Zimbabwe's press is dominated by Zimbabwe Newspapers, in which the state has a controlling interest and the newspapers are, as a result, little more than mouthpieces for the government. (Economist Intelligence Unit – Zimbabwe Country Profile, May 2008) [24n] (p6)

- 17.06 The BBC News country profile of Zimbabwe, updated on 9 April 2009, stated that “All [TV and radio] broadcasters transmitting from Zimbabwean soil, as well as the main newspapers, are state-run and toe the government line.

“Newspapers operate under restrictive media laws...A range of draconian laws and institutions, along with prison sentences for ‘publishing false news’, are used to clamp down on critical comment. Journalists who fail to register with a government body risk imprisonment.” (BBC Country Profile, 3 December 2008) [59c]

See Treatment of journalists below

17.07 The USSD 2008 also noted:

“Under authority of the Official Secrets Act, Public Order, and Security Act (POSA), or the Criminal Law Act, the government arrested individuals for criticizing President Mugabe in public.

“There were credible reports that CIO agents and informers routinely monitored political and other meetings. Persons deemed critical of the government were frequently targeted for harassment, abduction, and torture.” [2b] (Section 2a)

17.08 The Mail and Guardian reported on 13 November 2006, that: “The Zimbabwe government has directed the country's largest journalism training school to accept only students who have completed a controversial national youth service training programme - blamed by critics for brainwashing youths into zealots of President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zanu-PF party.” The report noted the views of some observers who stated that the government's new directive was “...an open attempt by Mugabe's government to ensure the college that trains the bulk of journalists in the country produces pliable and uncritical journalists.” [6d]

17.09 The Committee to Protect Journalists reported on 10 February 2009 that following pressure from the Southern Africa Development Community, the Government “... agreed to amend the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act, a repressive accreditation law that effectively enabled the government to determine who could and could not report the news.

“The amendments, passed by parliament [in January 2008], ostensibly allowed Zimbabwean reporters to work without accreditation and eased entry into the country for international journalists. But the government largely ignored the changes, barring most foreign journalists from entering the country for the election and continuing to enforce the obsolete accreditation provisions. In the run-up to the balloting, the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission denied entry to international media such as the BBC, CNN, Sky News, and South Africa's e.tv. In at least 19 cases documented by CPJ, police used outdated sections of the accreditation law to harass, obstruct, or detain journalists.” [30b]

17.10 Commenting on, and broadly welcoming the signing of the power sharing agreement in September 2008, the Media Institute of Southern Africa (MISA) stated on 18 September 2008 that the government needed to conduct a wider ranging review of current restrictive legislation before real progress could be made. The report noted:

“It is MISA-Zimbabwe’s strong conviction that the Agreement’s desire to free the media space remains illusory and is not easily achievable under the BSA [Broadcasting Services Act] as presently constituted. For instance, under the BSA, as amended in 2007, the issue of foreign investment shall be at the absolute discretion of the minister responsible. This amounts to the retention of the prohibition of foreign funding and foreign ownership in the broadcasting sector, an austere restriction in a sector that is capital intensive notwithstanding the country’s severe shortage of foreign currency... MISA-Zimbabwe is of the view that the new government needs a new law that guarantees the independence of the ZBC, in addition to spelling out its responsibilities, mode of funding, governance structures and its accountability processes to the people of Zimbabwe.” [17d]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Public order and security act (POSA)

17.11 The USSD 2008 noted that:

“In February 2006 the government passed the General Laws Amendment Act (GLAA), which amended sections of POSA to allow authorities to monitor and censor ‘the publication of false statements that will engender feelings of hostility towards – or cause hatred, contempt or ridicule of – the president or acting president.’ The GLAA recommends a prison term for any journalist who “insults the president or communicates falsehoods.” [2b] (Section 2a)

17.12 The USSD 2008 also noted: “The criminal code makes it an offense to publish or communicate false statements prejudicial to the state. Legal experts have criticized this section saying that it imposes limits on freedom of expression beyond those permitted by the constitution.” [2b] (Section 2a)

17.13 The USSD 2008 continued:

“There were credible reports that the permanent secretary minister of information, George Charamba, routinely reviewed state-owned media news and excised reports on the activities of groups opposed to or critical of the government. ...

“POSA and the criminal code grant the government a wide range of legal powers to prosecute persons for political and security crimes that are not clearly defined. The July 2006 enactment of the amended criminal code consolidated a variety of criminal offenses, including crimes against public order, reportedly to amend progressive portions of POSA. However, the Institute for Justice and Reconciliation and the Solidarity Peace Trust reported that almost all the offenses in POSA were transferred to the criminal code, in some cases with drastic increases in the penalties. For example, making a false statement prejudicial to the state now carries a maximum prison sentence of 20 years in prison. Failure to give police the requisite advance written notice of a meeting or demonstration remains an offense under POSA.” [2b] (Section 2a)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

NEWSPAPERS AND JOURNALS

- 17.14 The BBC News country profile of Zimbabwe, updated on 9 April 2009, stated that:

“The press is dominated by two pro-government dailies, the Harare-based Herald and the Bulawayo-based Chronicle, both tightly controlled by the Information Ministry.

“Private publications, which are relatively vigorous in their criticism of the government, have come under severe pressure. A leading private daily, the Daily News, was banned after a legal battle.

“The remaining independent press is largely confined to two weeklies, the Standard and the Zimbabwe Independent. Another weekly, The Zimbabwean, is produced in London and distributed in Zimbabwe as an international publication.

“Because of rampant inflation, cover prices have spiralled and are beyond the reach of many Zimbabweans. Publishers have been hit by escalating printing and newsprint costs.” [59c]

- 17.15 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa’s group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch April 2009 (SITO report), noted a few positive developments concerning the appointments of respected journalists to a number of existing and news publications in Zimbabwe.

“The Herald newspaper is said to be appointing a well respected, veteran journalist William ‘Bill’ Saidi as editor in chief. NewsDay newspapers have appointed veteran journalist Barnabas Thondlana as editor of the newly formed daily publication which is expected to launch in the next few months. Thondlana will lead the third and newest publication in the Zimind group. Moses Mudzwiti is the Managing Editor. Dumisani Muleya, who has been Assistant Editor for The Zimbabwe Independent, becomes the Group Political and Investigative Editor, while Constantine Munyaradzi Chimakure is the News Editor. Chimakure held the same position on The Zimbabwe Independent.” [9a] (p6)

- 17.16 Reporters Without Borders (RWB), 2008 Annual Report, noted that: “A handful of privately-owned publications do still appear, but under tight surveillance, forced to come to terms with the presidential party. ... The management of the few remaining private titles to still appear are under heavy pressure to adopt the political line of the ruling party and to prevent the more critical journalists from working.” In spite of some favourable rulings by Zimbabwean courts, the government continued to block media companies from setting up independent operations. [44g]

- 17.17 The USSD 2008 report stated that:

“There were two main independent domestic weekly newspapers, the Zimbabwe Independent and the Standard, and a semi-independent weekly paper, the Financial Gazette, all three of which continued to operate despite threats and pressure from the government. Another independent weekly paper, The Zimbabwean, was published in South Africa for the Zimbabwe market. The independent newspapers continued to criticize the government and ruling party; however, they also continued to exercise some self-censorship due to government intimidation and the continuing prospect of prosecution under criminal libel and security laws.

“On May 24, armed individuals bombed a truck belonging to The Zimbabwean newspaper that was carrying 60,000 copies of the paper. Government and ZANU-PF party officials had displayed open hostility towards the newspaper, labelling it part of what they call the ‘regime change’ agenda. No one was charged in the attack.” [2b] (Section 2a)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

TELEVISION AND RADIO

- 17.18 The BBC News country profile of Zimbabwe, updated on 9 April 2009, stated that:

“State-run Zimbabwe Broadcasting Corporation (ZBC) operates the country's only TV and radio stations. ZBC formerly had two TV channels; its second network was leased to private station Joy TV which closed in 2002. Some of its programmes were said to have ruffled government feathers.

“Radio is the main source of information for many Zimbabweans. Although there are no private stations, the country is targeted by overseas-based operations.

“The Voice of the People, set up by former ZBC staff with funding from the Soros Foundation and a Dutch organisation, operates using a leased shortwave transmitter in Madagascar.

“Another station, the UK-based SW Radio Africa, aims to give listeners in Zimbabwe ‘unbiased information’.

“From the US, the government-funded Voice of America (VOA) operates Studio 7, a twice-daily service for listeners in Zimbabwe which aims to be a source of ‘objective and balanced news’.

“Radio broadcasts by foreign stations deemed hostile to the government have been jammed.” [59c]

- 17.19 The USSD 2008 reported that:

“Radio remained the principal medium of public communication, particularly for the rural majority. The government controlled all domestic radio broadcasting stations through the state-owned Zimbabwe Broadcasting Holdings, supervised by the Ministry for Information and Publicity.

“The popularity of independent short-wave and medium-wave radio broadcasts to the country continued to grow, despite government jamming of news broadcasts by radio stations based in other countries, including Voice of America and SW Radio Africa.” [2b] (Section 2a)

17.20 The source went on to note that:

“The government controlled the only domestically based television broadcasting station, the Zimbabwean Broadcasting Corporation (ZBC). The NGO Media Monitoring Project of Zimbabwe analyzed the distribution of air time on ZBC before the elections. It found that between March 1 and March 28 [2008], ZBC devoted more than 90 percent of its news bulletins to positive coverage of ZANU-PF. For the March and June elections, ZBC provided over 200 hours of ZANU-PF coverage, and just over 16 of the MDC. Most of the MDC coverage was negative.” [2im] (Section 2a)

THE INTERNET

17.21 The USSD 2008 report noted that: “There were no government restrictions on the Internet; however, the ICA permits the government to monitor all communications in the country, including Internet transmissions. Internet access was available but due to a lack of infrastructure was not widely accessed by the public beyond commercial centers.” [2b] (Section 2a)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

TREATMENT OF JOURNALISTS

17.22 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa’s group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch April 2009 (SITO report), that The Media and Information Commission was closed in January 2009, which suggested that journalists no longer required accreditation, but ZANU-PF officials continue to insist “... that accreditation is still required ...” [9a] (p6)

17.23 New Zimbabwe reported on 18 May 2009 that President Mugabe’s press secretary, George Charamba, had announced that “... the British Broadcasting Corp [BBC] and Cable News Network [CNN] that their journalists are welcome in the country ...” [41a] However, the BBC reported on 9 June 2009 that it continued to be “... banned (the official line is ‘not welcome’) from reporting in the country ...” [3k]

17.24 A government minister admitted that laws were still being used to “criminalise journalism” after two journalists were arrested in early May. (IRIN, 12 May 2009) [10f] Journalists are often subject to police brutality and judicial abuses. (Reporters without Borders, 14 May 2009) [44a]

17.25 Freedom House noted in Freedom in the World 2008 – Zimbabwe, covering events in 2007, released in July 2008, that:

“Journalists are routinely subjected to verbal intimidation, physical attacks, arrest and detention, and financial pressure by the police and supporters of the ruling party. Several journalists were arrested and beaten while covering the government’s crackdown on the MDC in 2007. In April, a cameraman for state television, Edward Chikomba, was abducted, beaten, and murdered, allegedly for leaking footage of Tsvangirai’s beating. Foreign journalists are rarely granted visas, and local correspondents for foreign publications have been refused accreditation or threatened with lawsuits and deportation.” [96a]

- 17.26 The Committee to Protect Journalists, reported on 10 February 2009 that following ZANU-PFs poor showing in the March 2008 elections, the party “... unleashed a brutal crackdown on ... the press.

“Veteran journalist Geoff Hill described the weeks between the first round of voting in March and a runoff in June as ‘the worst time for journalists in Zimbabwe’s history,’ a view expressed by numerous foreign and local reporters. ... The nationwide press crackdown targeted anyone involved with the media: distributors, lawyers who defended journalists, and state broadcasters considered ‘disloyal’ to the ruling party.” [30b]

- 17.27 The Committee to Protect Journalists went on to note that journalists routinely faced verbal intimidation, harassment and arrest and detention under often obsolete laws. Cases were reported where the police arbitrarily arrested and detained journalists for committing the “despicable ... crime of committing journalism”. The same source added “In July [2008], Associated Press photographer Tsvangirai Mukwazhi was severely beaten by police at his home in Harare and temporarily detained at the Southerton Police Station, journalists told CPJ. Police accused the photographer of ‘bringing the country into disrepute,’ but did not lodge charges against him.” Even journalists employed by state owned media companies were targeted where they were considered to have not been supportive enough to the ruling party and its candidates. The report noted that Henry Muradzikwa, chief executive of the state Zimbabwe Broadcasting Corporation (ZBC), was fired and seven employees were suspended for these reasons. [30b]

For updates and further details of problems faced by journalists see the websites of Committee to Protect Journalists and Reporters without Frontiers.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

18. HUMAN RIGHTS INSTITUTIONS, ORGANISATIONS AND ACTIVISTS

- 18.01 Freedom House reported in 'Freedom of Association Under Threat', dated 21 November 2008, that:

"Nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) in Zimbabwe are severely restricted. The Private Voluntary Organizations (PVO) Act, originally introduced by the Rhodesian government and revived in 2002, sets out registration and funding requirements for NGOs. Civic organizations must register with the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare, and the minister appoints a PVO Board, which has extensive powers to scrutinize organizations' officers, finances, and activities. Organizations in violation of board standards may be fined, their registration revoked or amended, or their members imprisoned. In 2005, the finances of scores of NGOs were investigated by interministerial teams that included representatives of the Central Intelligence Organization. Parliament in 2004 passed the Non-Governmental Organizations Act, which bars the registration of foreign NGOs engaged in 'issues of governance,' including human rights organizations, and bans domestic 'governance' NGOs from receiving foreign funding. The act also expanded the definition of NGO to include religious and environmental organizations and private trusts, and created an NGO Council with more oversight powers than the PVO Board. Mugabe declined to sign the act at the time, but many of its provisions have been enforced.

"The government routinely uses the state-owned media to threaten NGOs believed to be aligned with Western interests or the political opposition. In April 2007, the government threatened to deregister all NGOs with ties to Western countries, though no action was taken. Members of politically oriented NGOs are routinely arrested, imprisoned, and assaulted. Security forces have at times prevented humanitarian agencies from delivering aid in rural areas; in June 2008, the government ordered a halt to all nongovernmental humanitarian work, including the distribution of food aid." [96d]

- 18.02 The Human Rights Watch - World Report 2009 (Zimbabwe), dated 14 January 2009, noted that:

"The violence in the aftermath of the general elections [in 2008] created an even more challenging environment for human rights defenders. Many NGOs are perceived by the government of Zimbabwe as being aligned to the MDC [Movement for Democratic Change]. In the capital Harare, the government clampdown forced several NGOs to shut down. In the months after March elections, police raided the offices of NGOs such as the Crisis in Zimbabwe Coalition and the Zimbabwe Election Support Network (ZESN). ZANU-PF supporters attacked hundreds of ZESN election observers, forcing many to flee their homes. Human rights defenders were intimidated and threatened by police and security agents, who in May and June arrested a number of activists, including a prominent human rights lawyer and 13 members of the NGO Women of Zimbabwe Arise." [69c]

- 18.03 Freedom House's report, Freedom in the World 2008, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2007, released in July 2008, noted that the government has used its wide ranging powers [96a] (p5), and the threat of these powers (FCO, 8 August 2007) [131], to manipulate and harasses non-governmental organisations for a number of years. "...nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), particularly those dealing with human rights issues, have faced increasing legal restrictions and extralegal harassment." [96a] (p5)

- 18.04 Amnesty International reported on 6 June 2008, that the government banned all "...field operations by non-governmental organisations (NGOs) in the country. ... Without giving specific reasons for his action, the Zimbabwean Minister of Public Service, Labour and Social Welfare, Nicholas Goche, wrote to all private voluntary organisations and NGOs on 4 June 2008, instructing them to stop their operations." Amnesty International stated that the suspension of NGO field operations would significantly increase food insecurity in the run up to the presidential run-off exposing "...millions of people to hunger... the suspension is yet another attempt by the government to manipulate food distribution for political ends. Suspension of humanitarian operations by NGOs ensures that the government has a monopoly over food distribution through the state-controlled Grain Marketing Board (GMB) during the pre-election period." [14o]
- 18.05 Reliefweb published a news report by the Voice of America (VOA), dated 4 August 2008, that stated that the government had partially lifted its ban on NGO field operations. The article noted that the government had decided to allow "...non-governmental organizations involved in feeding HIV-AIDS patients to resume their work as soon as possible." The Health Minister stated "...that NGOs wishing to resume feeding programs for those battling HIV/AIDs should present themselves to local administrators and request the appropriate authorization. ...a World Food Program official said the United Nations agency is in talks with Harare to provide more aid despite the ban on NGO distribution." [22d]
- 18.06 The Institute for War and Peace Reporting (IWPR) noted on 19 June 2008 that it had "...been inundated with reports that since the beginning of June, NGOs have come under siege from marauding state security agents, with more than a dozen raided in the past week or so and scores of officials arrested." The report noted that NGOs have had offices raided, documents, computers and laptops seized. Individuals have been arrested and harassed with a number of prominent human rights lawyers fleeing the country after receiving threats to their lives. The IWPR stated that one lawyer had "...fled the country after receiving credible information that he was on a list of human rights lawyers targeted for imminent assassination for representing MDC members." Other lawyers have fled the country on the basis of the list. The existence of the list was apparently verified by two separate sources. [77c]
- 18.07 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:
- "A number of domestic and international human rights groups operated in the country, investigating and publishing their findings on human rights cases; however, they were subject to government restrictions, interference, monitoring, and harassment. Domestic NGOs worked on human rights and democracy issues, including lobbying for revision of POSA and AIPPA; election observation; constitutional and electoral reform; increasing poor women's access to the courts; raising awareness of the abuse of children; conducting civic education; preserving the independence of the judiciary; and combating torture, arbitrary detention, and restrictions on freedom of the press and assembly. Major domestic independent human rights organizations included the Crisis in Zimbabwe Coalition, Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum, ZESN, ZLHR, ZPP, NCA, SST, and WOZA.” [2b] (Section 4)

18.08 The USSD 2008 report stated that:

“The government continued to use the state-controlled media to disparage and attack human rights groups. Articles typically dismissed the efforts and recommendations of NGOs that were considered critical of the government as efforts by groups that merely did the bidding of ‘Western governments.’

“During the year police arrested or detained NGO members, often in connection with demonstrations or marches; many were beaten during arrest and tortured while in custody. Some NGO members died in post-election violence.

“The government harassed some NGOs it believed opposed government policies with raids on their offices and investigations into their activities. ...

“The government increased its harassment and intimidation of human rights lawyers during the year. Police often threatened, and in some cases assaulted, lawyers when they attempted to gain access to their clients in police custody. ...

“The government continued to obstruct the activities of organizations involved in humanitarian activities, particularly in rural areas. The government restricted feeding programs and blocked efforts by local and international NGOs to provide humanitarian relief to those affected by Operation Murambatsvina. Following the March 29 [2008] election, NGOs and humanitarian organizations were increasingly denied access by a variety of official and unofficial personnel acting on behalf of the government. ...” [2b] (Section 4)

18.09 The USSD 2008 report continued: “On June 5, Minister Goche suspended all NGO ‘field operations’, specifically referring to the distribution of food aid. Although the suspension technically only covered activities by NGOs and Private Voluntary Organizations (PVOs), activities by other organizations, including churches and UN agencies, were also curtailed by security officials” The NGO suspension ended on 29 August 2008 “... when organizations were allowed to renew their activities but were compelled to adhere to new reporting requirements to maintain valid NGO registrations with the ministry.” [2b] (Section 4)

18.10 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) noted in its annual human rights report covering 2008 published on 26 March 2009, that:

“Human rights defenders in Zimbabwe endured prolonged harassment and violence throughout 2008. Many organisations have had their offices raided, staff members interrogated and arrested, and had to either move offices or close down temporarily. They also have to cope with daily challenges of operating in Zimbabwe, such as lack of power, water and the inflation rate at record levels.

“Protests have been repeatedly suppressed, often violently, and the rule of law disregarded. Despite the risks, human rights defenders have continued to hold demonstrations and to press for change. ...

“Since October, brutality in repressing protests has increased. Police have used tear gas and baton sticks to disperse peaceful protests. For instance, after a peaceful demonstration of women and other civic groups outside political talks on 27 October, 35 people needed medical treatment for beatings, falls and tear gas inhalation, and five were admitted to hospital. ZANU-PF youth abducted 6 victims and took them to the ZANU-PF Provincial HQ where they were beaten. On 18 November, doctors and nurses protested against the deteriorating health sector. Riot police blocked them from marching and eventually dispersed them, with several protestors injured with baton sticks.” [13a] (Human rights defenders and freedom of association)

18.11 The FCO report went on to note that:

“NGOs voluntarily withdrew from the field 10-14 days before the election on 29 March. Resumption of activities was then prevented by the increasing post-election violence. The government of Zimbabwe announced on 4 June that it was suspending the field operations of most NGOs across the country. The ban was finally lifted on 29 August after widespread international criticism and pressure from the EU, UN and others. Humanitarian operations had been severely hampered for over 6 months. More than 1.5 million Zimbabweans had been denied life-saving support. Even after the formal lifting of the ban, NGOs and UN agencies continued to face severe challenges, such as suspension of electronic payments by the Reserve Bank, in gearing up their operations. Food registration was seriously delayed.” [13a] (Interruption and suspension of humanitarian aid)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

ABDUCTIONS OF HUMAN RIGHTS ACTIVISTS

18.12 A number of sources reported the abduction of about 40 MDC activists at the end of 2008. The HRW World Report 2009 stated that since October 2008 “... more than 40 MDC members and human rights activists” were abducted and held illegally. [69c] The HRW report, ‘Crisis without Limits: Human Rights and Humanitarian Consequences of Political Repression in Zimbabwe’, 22 January 2009, observed that the abductions had begun earlier, stating that the first had taken place in November 2008. [69g] (p3) The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa’s group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch (SITO Report) of May 2009 (SITO report) that the first of the abductees was taken on 29 October 2008 and remained unaccounted for. [9b] (8) The Economist Intelligence Unit noted in its Zimbabwe Country Report, dated January 2009, that: “Throughout December [2008] at least 31 opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) supporters, journalists and civic activists were abducted and reported missing for several weeks.” [24o] (p10) On the reasons for the abductions, the HRW report of 22 January 2009 stated that it believed the abductions were “... politically motivated. The Zimbabwean authorities appear to be using these cases [32 individuals] as a pretext to clamp down on the MDC and prevent human rights activists from reporting on human rights abuses.” [69g] (24-26) The Times noted on 11 February 2009 that: “Zanu (PF) looks determined to fight the MDC. Yesterday it arrested two lawyers, Rose Hanzi and Tawanda Zhuwarara, both members of the Zimbabwe Lawyers for Human Rights group who had been helping 30 opposition activists abducted and imprisoned three months ago.” [82k]

- 18.13 Amnesty International’s Report 2009 (AI report 2009) – Zimbabwe, published on 28 May 2009, noted that during 2008:

“Prominent human rights defenders, political activists and their family members were abducted by groups of armed men believed to be working on behalf of or with the acquiescence of the Zimbabwean authorities. The abductions were conducted in broad daylight with total impunity.

“Most of the missing people were found at various police stations in Harare on or around 23 December 2008 after they were reportedly handed over to the police by the men who abducted them, who were members of the security forces. The abducted men and women were then held in police detention. None of the abductors were arrested by the police.” [14b] (p361)

- 18.14 Various reports noted the release of most abductees during the course of 2009; however, a report by the SITO May 2009 report noted that there were serious concerns over the safety of seven political activists and human rights defenders, who were reported to have been abducted between 29 October and 15 December 2008, but who were still unaccounted for, “... raising fears that they may have been murdered.” The report noted the names of the missing abductees and the dates they were reported to have been abducted:

Gwenzi Kahiya	October 29
Ephraim Mabeka	December 10
Lovemore Machokoto	December 10
Charles Muza	December 10
Edmore Vangirayi	December 10
Graham Matewa	December 17
Peter Munyanyi	December 15 [9b] (8)

- 18.15 Noting other detainees, SITO reported that:

“The continued incarceration of [MDC members [32a]] Shadreck Manyere, Chris Dhlamini and Ghandi Mudzingwa has raised questions about the interference from government officials allied to Zanu PF. Their release was originally blocked by the Attorney General Johannes Tomana and Justice Minister Patrick Chinamasa but Justice November Mtshiyi on the 11th ruled that they could make a fresh bail application which was successful on the 13th with the cost of US$1000 each.” [9b] (8)

- 18.16 The Zimbabwe Times reported on 1 May 2009 that Gandhi Mudzingwa and Kisimusi Dhlamini were being “... detained under police guard at the Avenues Clinic in Harare, where they are receiving medical treatment for injuries sustained during their torture by state security agents and the police who abducted them last year.” [32a]

- 18.17 One of the most high profile abductions was that of Jestina Mukoko, national director of the Zimbabwe Peace Project. AI reported that Ms Mukoko was abducted on 3 December 2008 and "...was forcibly taken from her home in Norton, Harare.

"She was seized by about 12 men in plain clothes – some armed with handguns – who identified themselves as members of the Law and Order section of the Zimbabwe Republic Police. Police denied that they had arrested Jestina Mukoko and her whereabouts remained unknown until 23 December when she was found in police custody. She was taken to court on 24 December, accused of recruiting people for military training in Botswana, a charge she denied. At the end of the year, Jestina Mukoko remained in custody. Amnesty International considered Jestina Mukoko to be a prisoner of conscience." [14b] (p361)

- 18.18 The SITO report noted in May 2009, that: "Bail for Jestina Mukoko and 16 others was terminated under provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act but a High Court application had previous bail conditions reinstated upon their release on the 6th. Their trials have been set for June and July. They are all facing charges of terrorism, insurgency, banditry and sabotage under the Criminal Law (Codification and Reform) Act." [9b] (8)

See also Latest news, Recent developments, Political affiliation and Politically Motivated Violence.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

WOMEN OF ZIMBABWE ARISE (WOZA)

- 18.19 Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA) was founded by Jenni Williams in 2003 and is a well respected protest group that campaigns for equal rights for women in Zimbabwean society. (Kubatana.net, last updated: 27 June 2007) [55r] WOZA's website (accessed 12 June 2009) notes that WOZA, an acronym for Women of Zimbabwe Arise, is an Ndebele word meaning 'come forward'. The movement has a countrywide membership of over 70,000 women and men. The majority of WOZA members are low-income earners from urban high-density suburbs. [78a]

- 18.20 The WOZA website went on to note that its activities are:

"Based on the principles of strategic non-violence, through our actions, WOZA creates space to allow Zimbabweans to articulate issues they may be too fearful to raise alone. WOZA has conducted hundreds of protests since 2003 and over 3,000 women and men have spent time in police custody, many more than once and most for 48 hours or more. These frontline human rights defenders are willing to suffer beatings and unbearable conditions in prison cells to exercise their constitutional rights and fundamental freedoms." [78a]

- 18.21 The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum (ZHRF) noted in its Political Violence Report – December 2008 that throughout 2008 WOZA activists continued to hold demonstrations against a range of issues such as the economy, access to health care and food aid. WOZA meetings and demonstrations were broken up by the police and were often met with violence. [35]

- 18.22 The USSD 2008 noted that WOZA demonstrations were often broken up by the police with the use of disproportionate force, with many women being arrested and denied bail. [2b] (Section 1d, 2b & 2d) Human Rights Watch reported on 8 November 2008 that WOZA activists were "... invariably [held] under the Public Order and Security Act." [69] (p34)
- 18.23 Amnesty International's Annual Report 2009, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2008, released on 28 May 2009, stated that members of the women's activist organization Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA) continued to be harassed by police and security forces during 2008. WOZA leader Jenni Williams and other senior leaders were arrested several times during the year with Jenni Williams being unlawfully held for 37 days on one occasion. [14b]
- 18.24 The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa's group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch May 2009 reported that: "WOZA held a demonstration with over 1,000 members on the 18th [May] to highlight the failures of GNU [Government of National Unity]. The demonstration appears to have taken place without violent intervention from the police. [9b] (p3) However, subsequent protests have been broken-up by police with varying degrees of force. (WOZA - Site Archives for Protests, accessed 12 June 2009) [78b]

The Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum website provides a monthly political violence report that records incidents of harassment and violence against WOZA members. The WOZA website also provides regular reports of its activities.

See also Latest news, Recent developments, Political affiliation, Security forces and Women, Violence against women

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

19. FREEDOM OF RELIGION

OVERVIEW

- 19.01 The Freedom House report, Freedom in the World 2008, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2007, released in July 2008 noted that:

“Freedom of religion is generally respected, although church attendance is becoming increasingly politicized. Zimbabwe's economic crisis has propelled a recent boom in attendance, and church groups such as the Solidarity Peace Trust and the Zimbabwe Christian Alliance have been at the forefront of opposition to the Mugabe government. Other church groups, such as the Zimbabwe Council of Churches and the Ecumenical Peace Initiative, are widely perceived as progovernment.” [96a] (p4-5)

- 19.02 The USSD International Religious Freedom Report 2008, Zimbabwe, (USSD RFR 2008), covering events between 1 July 2007 and 30 June 2008, released on 19 September 2008 noted that while the Government continued to maintain good relations with religious groups it “... criticized, harassed, and intimidated religious leaders who were critical of government policies or who spoke out against human rights abuses committed by the Government. Church leaders and members who criticized the Government faced arrest, temporary detention, and, in the case of foreigners, possible deportation.” [2a] (Introduction) The same report also noted “Divisions between mainstream Christian religious groups and practitioners of indigenous religions continued. An interfaith council continued to work towards creating closer ties between different religious groups.” [2a] (Section 1)

- 19.03 The report added that:

“Religious groups continued to be challenged by the Government's restrictive laws regarding freedoms of assembly, expression, and association. Although not specifically aimed at religious activities, the Public Order and Security Act (POSA) continued to be used to interfere with religious and civil society groups organizing public prayer rallies. Although POSA exempts religious activities and events, the Government generally views any public gathering that is critical of the regime as political even if the nature of the event is religious.

“The Government viewed with suspicion missionaries it considered politically motivated. Some missionary organizations occasionally experienced delays implementing humanitarian relief activities and in having their work permits issued.” [2a] (Section 2)

- 19.04 Furthermore, the report stated that:

“The Government does not require religious groups to be registered; however, religious organizations that operate schools or medical facilities are required to register those specific institutions with the appropriate ministry regulating their activities. Religious institutions are allowed to apply for tax-exempt status and duty-free privileges with the Customs Department. These requests were generally granted.” [2a] (Section 2)

- 19.05 The USSD RFR 2008 also stated that:

“The country has a long history of Catholic, Anglican, and Methodist primary and secondary schools. The Government does not regulate religious education in private schools. Since independence there has been a proliferation of evangelical basic education schools. Christian schools, the majority of which are Catholic, constitute one-third of all schools. Islamic, Hindu, and Hebrew primary and secondary schools are also found in major urban areas such as Harare and Bulawayo.” [2a] (Section 2)

19.06 The Afrol Gender Profile – Zimbabwe (accessed on 10 June 2009) noted that “Indigenous African churches that combine elements of established Christian beliefs with some beliefs based on traditional African culture and religion generally accept and promote polygyny and the marriage of girls at young ages; they also generally approve of healing only through prayer and oppose science-based medicine including the vaccination of children.” [73a]

19.07 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“The constitution and law provide for freedom of religion, and the government generally respected this right in practice. The government and the religious communities historically have had good relations; however, the government continued to criticize and harass religious leaders who spoke out against the government's human rights abuses. Church leaders and members who criticized the government faced arrest, detention, and, in the case of foreigners, possible deportation. Although not specifically aimed at religious activities, POSA and other laws continued to be used to interfere with religious and civil society groups organizing public prayer rallies.” [2b] (Section 2c)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Religious demography

19.08 The USSD IRF report observed:

“It is estimated that between 70 and 80 percent of the population belong to mainstream Christian denominations such as the Roman Catholic, Anglican, and Methodist Churches; however, over the years a variety of indigenous churches and groups have emerged from these mainstream denominations. While the country is overwhelmingly Christian, the majority of the population believes, to varying degrees, in indigenous religions as well. Religious leaders reported an increase in adherence to traditional religion and healers.

“Muslims account for 1 percent of the population, primarily in rural areas where Muslim-led humanitarian efforts are often organized. The remainder of the population includes practitioners of Greek Orthodoxy, Judaism, and traditional indigenous religions. There are also small numbers of Hindus, Buddhists, and Baha'is.

“While political elites tend to be associated with one of the established Christian churches, there is no correlation between membership in any religious group and political or ethnic affiliation.” [2a] (Section 1)

RELIGIOUS GROUPS

19.09 The USSD Religious Freedom Report 2008 noted that:

“Practitioners of indigenous religions, including traditional healers, experienced improved relations with the Government. The Government was more inclusive of indigenous religions, of which it has traditionally been suspicious, and tolerant of witchcraft practices, which it had previously attempted to restrict. Unlike in previous reporting periods, President Mugabe made no negative statements about evangelical or indigenous churches, and he also met with leaders from these groups.” [2a] (Section 1)

19.10 The report continued:

“It is estimated that between 70 and 80 percent of the population belong to mainstream Christian denominations such as the Roman Catholic, Anglican, and Methodist Churches; however, over the years a variety of indigenous churches and groups have emerged from these mainstream denominations. While the country is overwhelmingly Christian, the majority of the population believes, to varying degrees, in indigenous religions as well. Religious leaders reported an increase in adherence to traditional religion and healers.

“Muslims account for 1 percent of the population, primarily in rural areas where Muslim-led humanitarian efforts are often organized. The remainder of the population includes practitioners of Greek Orthodoxy, Judaism, and traditional indigenous religions. There are also small numbers of Hindus, Buddhists, and Baha'is.” [2a] (Section 1)

19.11 The report also noted that:

“There were continuing reports of tensions between traditional indigenous religions and mainstream Christian churches. Some indigenous churches' acceptance of polygamy and rejection of modern medicine were common sources of tension. One leader of a traditional religious group reported that he believed that traditional religious leaders were not always consulted or taken seriously by the mainstream religious groups, especially in terms of addressing the country's problems. However, religious leaders from a wide spectrum of churches and groups continued to discuss these matters productively in meetings of the interfaith council and suggested possible areas of cooperation, such as combating HIV/AIDS.” [2a] (Section 3)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

WITCHCRAFT

19.12 The USSD Religious Freedom Report 2008 noted that during the year the Government softened its stance towards indigenous religions which it had previously tried to restrict.

“Practitioners of indigenous religions, including traditional healers, experienced improved relations with the Government. The Government was more inclusive of indigenous religions, of which it has traditionally been suspicious, and tolerant of witchcraft practices, which it had previously attempted to restrict. Unlike in previous reporting periods, President Mugabe made no negative statements about evangelical or indigenous churches, and he also met with leaders from these groups.

“A July 2006 amendment to the Witchcraft Suppression Act (WSA) criminalizes any practice ‘commonly associated with witchcraft,’ but only if that practice is intended to cause harm. Spoken words alone are not considered a witchcraft practice or evidence of illegal activity. The amendment also criminalizes witch hunts, imposes criminal penalties for falsely accusing others of witchcraft, and rejects killing of a witch as a defense for murder. “Attacks on individuals in witchcraft related cases appear to be prosecuted under laws for assault, murder, or other crimes. At the end of the reporting period, there were no new or outstanding cases under the witchcraft law.” [2a] (Section 3)

- 19.13 The USSD RFR 2007, covering events between 1 July 2006 and 30 June 2007, noted that: “Reports of possible ritual killings and mutilations continued to be cited by newspapers and women and children’s rights groups throughout the reporting period. Police usually inquired into these killings; however, limited resources prevented police from conducting many investigations or identifying perpetrators.” [2c] (Section 3)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

20. ETHNIC GROUPS

- 20.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“According to government statistics, the Shona ethnic group makes up 82 percent of the population, Ndebele 14 percent, whites less than 1 percent, and other ethnic groups 3 percent. There was some tension between the white minority and other groups, between the Shona majority and the Ndebele minority, and among the various Shona subgroups. ...

“On March 9 [2008], Mugabe signed the Indigenization and Economic Empowerment Bill into law. The bill's official purpose was to increase participation of indigenous citizens in the economy with the ultimate objective of at least 51 percent indigenous ownership of all businesses. An indigenous Zimbabwean was defined as any person, or the descendant of such person, who before April 18, 1980 – the date of the country's independence – was disadvantaged by unfair discrimination on the grounds of his or her race. The bill was criticized as an attempt to create patronage for ZANU-PF.” [2b] (Section 5)

SHONA

- 20.02 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe, updated 14 October 2008, noted that:

“The Shona are a group of culturally similar peoples living in the eastern half of Zimbabwe, north of the Lundi River. The number of Shona speakers is estimated at over nine million, or 75 per cent of the estimated total population in 2003. In addition, there are several million Shona speakers in Zambia and especially in central Mozambique. The main tribal/dialect groupings are the Karanga (Midlands and Masvingo; about 40 per cent), Zezeru (central Mashonaland; about 31 per cent), Manyika (Manicaland; about 10 per cent), Ndau (Manicaland and Masvingo; about seven per cent) and Korekore (northern Mashonaland; about six per cent). Most of the Ndau and Manyika sub-groups live in Mozambique. A smaller, more distinct group of Shona, the Kalanga (about three per cent), lives near Plumtree and the Botswana border and is divided from the main body by broad areas of Ndebele settlement. Elementary education, Christian missions and partial urbanisation have weakened traditional institutions but barely affected belief in magic and witchcraft. Personal and political relations are largely ruled by a kinship system governed by exogamous clans and localised patrilineages. Descent, succession and inheritance are largely patrilineal. Chiefdoms, wards and villages are administered by hereditary leaders.” [90k] (Demography)

NDEBELE

- 20.03 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe, updated 14 October 2008, noted that:

“The Ndebele of Zimbabwe, or Matabele, are a different group to the Ndebele of South Africa, and are closely related to the Zulu. The Zimbabwean Ndebele numbered about 2.5 million or 20 per cent of the estimated total population in 2003. A husband will allocate land and livestock to his wives; the eldest son of the first wife is the principal heir and inherits this property. They practise the custom of the levirate, in which men inherit the wives and children of their deceased brother.” [90k] (Demography)

- 20.04 Freedom House’s report, Freedom in the World 2008, Zimbabwe, released in July 2008, reported that: “The minority Ndebele ethnic group continues to suffer political and economic discrimination, and Ndebele areas are often targeted by security forces as opposition strongholds. Restrictive citizenship laws discriminate against Zimbabweans with origins in neighboring African countries.” [96a] (p6)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

WHITES

- 20.05 The number of whites remaining in Zimbabwe is estimated to be between a few thousand (Economist Intelligence Unit – Zimbabwe Country Profile 2008) [24n] (p10) and 40,000 (Institute for War and Peace Reporting, 13 January 2009) [77g] having dropped from a peak of about 275,000 in the mid-1970s. [24n] (p10)
- 20.06 The historical injustice over the allocation of land in Zimbabwe gave Robert Mugabe, who in 1999 was suffering waning popularity, a scapegoat with which to boost his popularity. “Until 2002 about 30% of agricultural land was ... white-owned ...” Farm invasions and confiscations have ensured that few farms are now in white ownership. (Economist Intelligence Unit: Zimbabwe Country Profile 2008) [24e] (p15)
- 20.07 The USSD 2008 reported that since the start of the decade, the “... ruling party [has] infringed on the right to due process, citizenship, and property ownership in ways that affected the white minority disproportionately.” The report continued:
- “Throughout the year government-controlled newspapers, radio, and television stations continued to selectively vilify citizens of European ancestry and to blame them for the country's problems. ... The government continued its attempts to attribute the country's economic and political problems to the white minority and Western countries. On some occasions, President Mugabe, members of his government, and the government-controlled media attempted to reignite resentment of the white minority. Ruling party supporters seldom were arrested or charged for infringing upon minority rights, especially those of the white commercial farmers targeted in the land redistribution program.” [2b] (Section 5)
- 20.08 The Institute for War and Peace Reporting noted on 13 January 2009 that:
- “Embattled Zimbabwe president Robert Mugabe is piling more pressure on the country's dwindling white community, with a campaign of intimidation and arrests.
- “Mugabe, who, of late, has been using warlike demagoguery to frighten critics, alleges that the opposition Movement for Democratic Change, MDC, is taking instructions from its ‘white masters’. He has repeated his mantra that the MDC will never rule 'my Zimbabwe', and says he will not surrender the country to white colonialists.

"Mugabe's government has stepped up a propaganda campaign against ... whites ... [accusing them] of training hit squads to overthrow Mugabe and undermine the September 15 power-sharing deal.

"At the same time, the security forces are stepping up verbal and physical threats against whites, jailing some for allegedly fomenting unrest against the regime." [77g]

See also Land reform

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

ASIANS

20.09 Jane's Sentinel Security Assessment – Zimbabwe, updated 14 October 2008, noted that there were around 15,000 Asians living in Zimbabwe. [90k] (Demography) Although they were a smaller group than Zimbabwean Whites, The Independent reported on 10 April 2000 that, during the violence of the campaign for the June 2000 elections, there were reports that racial intimidation was spreading beyond the White-owned farms to include the Asian business community. Pamphlets were reportedly circulated in Bulawayo threatening Indians. [4a]

20.10 In recent years the Country of Origin Information Service (COIS) has found no reports of persecution against Asians and Asian-owned businesses. The Zimbabwe government has in the last few years pursued a 'Look East' policy, concentrating on building-up trade relations with India and China. The Herald, Zimbabwe's main government owned (ZANU-PF supporting) newspaper, published an article on 25 March 2008 noting that the country could expect a rise in tourists from emerging economies in India and China. The report noted that Zimbabwe had a lot to offer Asians, specifically Indian tourists, as the country had "... a vibrant south Asian community ... a lot of local expertise, restaurants and even the temples and mosques that will allow a religiously-minded visitor to keep up their obligations of public worship." [23a]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

FARM WORKERS OF MALAWIAN, ZAMBIAN AND MOZAMBIKAN ORIGIN

20.11 The Zimbabwe Independent noted on 31 August 2001 that there were between 350,000 and 400,000 farm workers in Zimbabwe, who numbered up to two million with their families. Most of these people were third generation Zimbabweans whose grandparents came to Zimbabwe from Mozambique, Malawi and Zambia during the colonial era. Many had "lost contact with their countries of origin" and had "lived on white-owned farms throughout their lives". "War Veterans" targeted these farm workers in their campaign against White ownership of commercial farms. Hundreds of thousands of farm workers were reportedly displaced along with the White owners of commercial farms when squatters occupied the farms. [11c] IRIN News reported in February 2003 that the numbers of commercial farm workers who had been affected by the Government's resettlement programme had increased to around one million. [10ae] The Zimbabwe Independent newspaper called it "ethnic cleansing". [11c]

- 20.12 BBC News reported on 24 August 2005 that historically, many people from neighbouring countries such as Mozambique, Zambia and Nyasaland had migrated in the 1950s and 1960s, some seeking work on white-owned farms in the more developed Southern Rhodesia (Zimbabwe). For a variety of reasons, a number of these people left the farms where they had worked and moved to the larger towns and cities across Zimbabwe. However, as the BBC article explained:

"In the wake of the government's crackdown on illegal buildings and unlicensed traders, Zimbabweans of foreign parentage are finding themselves in a particularly difficult situation.... While thousands of Zimbabweans who can trace their ancestry to a Zimbabwean rural village are being transported to the countryside, those whose parents or grandparents were immigrants are left in limbo. 'To say every Zimbabwean has a rural home is not true,' says Alouis Chaumba, head of the Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Zimbabwe. "Some are the grandchildren of people who came here during the Federation." [3b] (p1-3)

- 20.13 The USSD 2008 report noted that the Government amended the citizenship laws requiring "... all citizens with a claim to dual citizenship to have renounced their claim to foreign citizenship by January 2002 to retain their Zimbabwean citizenship." The report continued:

"The act revokes the citizenship of persons who fail to return to the country in any five-year period. However, the High Court ruled in 2002 that this interpretation does not take into account the fact that a person is not automatically guaranteed foreign citizenship merely because their parents were born in a foreign country, as some countries require a person to confirm their citizenship, in which case they could be rendered stateless. It further held that it is incorrect to presume that when one has a parent or parents that are born out of the country they are citizens of the other country by descent. In addition, some countries, including in southern Africa, do not have a means to renounce citizenship. Independent groups estimate as many as two million citizens may have been disenfranchised by the law, including, those perceived to have opposition leanings, such as the more than 200,000 commercial farm workers from neighbouring countries, and approximately 30,000 mostly white dual nationals. The problem became particularly acute during voter registration in late 2007 and during the 2008 elections when some were denied the right to vote – despite having voted previously – because they could not adequately demonstrate their citizenship." [2b] (Section 2d)

- 20.14 On 10 February 2004 ZWNews reported an MDC claim that Shemi Chimbarara, a farm worker on MDC MP Roy Bennett's farm, was shot and killed by soldiers on 8 February 2004. A group of ZANU-PF supporters, led by Chamunorwa Muusha and Charles Chigamba, a former police officer known as Nasho, burned the house and car of another farm worker. This incident came days after one woman was reportedly raped by Muusha and another woman and a girl were sexually abused by Chigamba. [67b]

- 20.15 BBC News reported on 24 August 2005 that historically, many people from neighbouring countries such as Mozambique, Zambia and Nyasaland had migrated in the 1950s and 1960s, some seeking work on white-owned farms in the more developed Southern Rhodesia (Zimbabwe). For a variety of reasons, a number of these people left the farms where they had worked and moved to the larger towns and cities across Zimbabwe. However, as the BBC article explained “In the wake of the government’s crackdown on illegal buildings and unlicensed traders, Zimbabweans of foreign parentage are finding themselves in a particularly difficult situation... While thousands of Zimbabweans who can trace their ancestry to a Zimbabwean rural village are being transported to the countryside, those whose parents or grandparents were immigrants are left in limbo. To say every Zimbabwean has a rural home is not true,” says Alouis Chaumba, head of the Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Zimbabwe. “Some are the grandchildren of people who came here during the Federation.” [3b] (p1-3)
- 20.16 Kubatana.net in Development Denied: Autocratic Militarism in Post-Election Zimbabwe, dated 28 July 2005, reporting on non-Zimbabweans caught up in Operation Murambatsvina, noted that “Those without Zimbabwean ID were initially taken to fenced holding camps and stored like beasts. The razed suburb of Mbare had many Mozambican traders, Hatcliffe many of the 200,000 displaced Malawian ex-farm workers from the misnamed ‘Land Reform’ of previously white-owned farms.” [55g] (p3)

Also see Internally Displaced People \(IDPs\)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

ALBINOS

- 20.17 IRIN reported on 16 February 2006 that: “Zimbabwe has around 14,000 people living with albinism...” [10b] SNNi.org (Smart News Network International) noted on 7 January 2006 that albinos in Zimbabwe face a great deal of social stigmatization. “Discrimination against albinos, especially women, is rampant in all sectors in Zimbabwe. ‘Most employers call you for an interview and when they see you they just tell you there is no job,’ says Brenda Savanhu, a qualified secretary. ‘They do not tell you the reason, but we know why they are doing it.’”
- 20.18 Many albinos have difficulties affording sun creams and sunglasses needed to protect their sensitive skins, rendering them more prone to skin cancers. The article noted a more worrying situation for albino women; that of men sleeping with them in the mistaken belief that sex with an albino woman will cure them of any sexually transmitted disease (STD). [62] Noting a rise in violence against albino women, ohmynews.com reported on 8 November 2005 that “In Zimbabwe, albinos are not only treated as lepers, there is a rise in the rape of albino women in the belief that if a HIV positive man sleeps with an albino woman, he is automatically cured.” [61] The USSD 2008 report noted that: “NGOs continued to lobby to include persons with albinism in the definition of ‘disabled’ under the law.” [2b] (Section 5)
- 20.19 IRIN reported on 16 February 2006 that: “About 65 percent of people with albinism in Zimbabwe are aged under 20. ‘Mortality is incredibly high – most of our people are aged between 33 to 50 years – very few people live beyond that, and it is sad because skin cancer is curable,' commented John Makumbe [founder of the Zimbabwe Albino Association (ZIMAS)]." The IRIN article also noted that across southern Africa most people with albinism are regarded as "unnatural and even cursed" with discrimination in the workplace being common. [10b]

- 20.20 The Zimbabwean, in an article dated 27 May 2009, reported John Makumbe, chairman of ZIMAS, condemning the recent murder of albino people in east Africa where a belief that body parts such as "... genitals, limbs, breasts, fingers and tongue[s] can bring magic powers ..." Mr Makumbe went on to state that: "... although they haven't received any cases of albino killings for ritual purposes in Zimbabwe, ZIMAS has received several reports of killing of albino babies at birth by parents and sexual abuse of albino women.

"In Zimbabwe we have received many cases of albino babies being killed by their parents who don't like them. There is also sexual abuse of albino women by HIV positive men who believe that if you sleep with these women the virus will disappear,' he said." [99a]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

OTHER ETHNIC MINORITIES

- 20.21 The Lemba or Lembaa [also know in Zimbabwe as the Remba] are a small group of people in southern Africa who while speaking languages similar to their neighbours? To the Shona/Ndebele?, have specific religious practices similar to those in Judaism, and a tradition of being a migrant people with clues pointing to an origin in the Middle East or North Africa. [60] (The Lemba, p1-2) Afrol Gender Profile – Zimbabwe (accessed on 31 August 2006) noted that: "The Remba [or Lemba] ethnic group practice infibulation, the most extreme form of Female Genital Mutilation (FGM)." [73a] (p2)
- 20.22 The World Directory of Minorities (published 1997), noted that, the Shangaan, Venda and Tonga peoples make up about two per cent of the population. The Shangaan and Venda live mainly in the far south of Zimbabwe. In 1985–86 the Government introduced teaching in primary schools in these groups' own languages. In 1995 the national radio station began broadcasting programmes in the three minority languages. [16] [27] (Tribal map)
- 20.23 Mulonga.net reported in an article dated 27 December 2005 that the Tonga form "...the third largest ethnic and language group after the Shona and Ndebele and the most marginalised in the country." [40a] The World Directory of Minorities noted that the Tonga live in north-western Zimbabwe. In the 1950s about two-thirds of their population, some 57,000 people (in both Zimbabwe and Zambia) were moved from their ancestral lands to make way for the Kariba Dam. Tonga leaders claimed that central government investment and relief, including "cultural support such as primary school instruction in the Tonga language" was "inadequate". [16] [27] (Tribal map) IRIN reported on 5 September 2007 that since the construction of the Kariba dam the Tonga suffer from some of the highest levels of unemployment and poverty in Zimbabwe. [10p]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

21. LESBIAN, GAY, BISEXUAL AND TRANSGENDER PERSONS

LEGAL RIGHTS

21.01 The International Lesbian and Gay Association report, State-sponsored Homophobia 2009, released 13 May 2009, observed that sexual relations between men is illegal. Sexual relations between women is not specifically legislated against. The report set out the laws on sodomy, as found in the Criminal Law (Codification and Reform) Act, which was effective from July 2006:

“Section 73. Sodomy

“(1) Any male person who, with the consent of another male person, knowingly performs with that other person anal sexual intercourse, or any act involving physical contact other than anal sexual intercourse that would be regarded by a reasonable person to be an indecent act, shall be guilty of sodomy and liable to a fine up to or exceeding level fourteen or imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year or both.

“(2) Subject to subsection (3), both parties to the performance of an act referred to in subsection (1) may be charged with and convicted of sodomy.

“(3) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that the competent charge against a male person who performs anal sexual intercourse with or commits an indecent act upon a young male person—

- “(a) who is below the age of twelve years, shall be aggravated indecent assault or indecent assault, as the case may be; or
- (b) who is of or above the age of twelve years but below the age of sixteen years and without the consent of such young male person, shall be aggravated indecent assault or indecent assault, as the case may be; or
- (c) who is of or above the age of twelve years but below the age of sixteen years and with the consent of such young male person, shall be performing an indecent act with a young person.” [81] (p46-47)

21.02 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“Although there was no statutory law proscribing homosexual practice, common law prevents homosexual men, and to a lesser extent, lesbians, from fully expressing their sexual orientation and, in some cases, criminalizes the display of affection between men. In 2006 the 2004 amended criminal code became effective, broadening the definition of sodomy to include ‘any act involving physical contact between males that would be regarded by a reasonable person to be an indecent act.’” [2b] (Section 5)

21.03 The Gay Times website (undated), accessed on 2 December 2008, noted that:

“Whilst here is no statutory legislation prohibiting homosexual activities in Zimbabwe, there are criminal offences under Common law which effectively make homosexuality illegal in Zimbabwe. Common Law prohibitions include Sodomy defined as the ‘unlawful and intentional sexual relations per annum between two human males’ and Unnatural Offences defined as the unlawful and intentional commission of an unnatural sexual act by one person with another person. The meaning of ‘Unnatural’ involves a value judgement which can be interpreted how you will. These offences are particularly repressive. Zimbabwean law therefore criminalise sex and even the display of affection between men and criminalises unnatural sexual acts between two persons which in theory could be applied to two women though in practice never has. Although these outdated laws are not always applied, the threat of being caught still hangs over the gay and lesbian community in Zimbabwe. S[ection] 11 of The Censorship and Entertainments has also been used to harass gay people in Zimbabwe. This provides that no person shall import, print, publish, distribute, or keep for sale any publication which is undesirable. A publication is undesirable if it is ‘indecent or obscene or is offensive or harmful to public morals or is likely to be contrary to public health.’” [80b]

- 21.04 With regard to the status of Lesbians in Zimbabwe, the Gays and Lesbians of Zimbabwe (GALZ) website, undated, accessed on 2 December 2008, noted that: “The common law prohibiting consensual lesbian sexual acts had previously fallen into disuse and [t]his law has not been revived by the codification and modification of the criminal law.” [42c]
- 21.05 The Gays and Lesbians of Zimbabwe (GALZ) website, accessed on 17 November 2008, noted that “The Zimbabwean constitution provides for freedom of association. There is nothing illegal about forming an association to cater for the needs and interests of LGBTI [Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender and Intersex] people in Zimbabwe. Government would, therefore, have to resort to illegal means to close down GALZ.” [42b]
- 21.06 No information was found regarding the treatment of transgendered persons in terms of legal rights as a separate group in Zimbabwe.

TREATMENT BY, AND ATTITUDES OF, STATE AUTHORITIES

- 21.07 The Gay Times (accessed on 2 December 2008) noted that: “The last few years have seen attacks of extraordinary virulence on Zimbabwe’s lesbian and gay community, led by Robert Mugabe.” The Zimbabwean government has a history of homophobia extending back to at least 1995. [80b] Behind the Mask (accessed on 2 December 2008) noted that: The Zimbabwean president and government are extremely homophobic to the point of obsession. Mugabe has in the past said of gays: ‘What an abomination, a rottenness of culture, real decadence of culture. [Homosexuals are] repugnant to my human conscience ... immoral and repulsive ... Lower than pigs and dogs ... Animals in the jungle are better than these people because at least they know that this is a man or a woman... I don't believe they have any rights at all.’” [92f] And the USSD 2008 report observed that: “Over a period of years, Mugabe publicly denounced homosexuals, blaming them for Africa's ills.” [2b] (Section 5)
- 21.08 Similar language has been used by supporters of the government. Addressing an election rally in March 2008 at the ZANU-PF headquarters in Harare, Rev Obadiah Msindo informed crowds gathered for the rally that MDC leader, Morgan Tsvangirai, was homosexual. Using homophobic language intended to both ridicule and diminish the standing of the leader of the opposition, the Rev Msindo claimed that Morgan Tsvangirai was the “girlfriend” of both Tony Blair and Gordon Brown and was conducting a sexual relationship with them both. The pronouncements followed similar homophobic language used by President Mugabe against critics of his government. (Afrik.com News, 19 March 2008) [92e]

SOCIETAL TREATMENT AND ATTITUDES

21.09 The Independent noted on the 21 November 2006 that “homosexuality”, which in Shona is called “ngochani”, had historically been widespread and accepted. Only since the colonial period has “homosexuality” become taboo in most African societies. [4c] (p1-2)

21.10 The Gays and Lesbians of Zimbabwe (GALZ) website, accessed on 17 November 2008, noted that:

“Zimbabwe is not the worst place in the world in which to be gay or lesbian even though the President, government officials and church leaders have whipped up a climate of hysterical homophobia. Nevertheless, there is growing tolerance of LGBT in Zimbabwe especially amongst younger people in urban areas who have grown up with the knowledge that gay and lesbian people exist within their midst.” [42b]

21.11 IRIN reported on 26 October 2006 that GALZ has a membership of around 6,000 men and women. The report went on to note that:

“Despite the pervasive homophobia in Zimbabwe, GALZ has seen its membership rise steadily, with about 400 new members joining each year.

“It is apparent that homosexuality exists throughout society, including rural areas,’ said Madzikure. ‘Even if Mugabe does not accept it, it [homosexuality] is there, and it will not go away. We have to accept that it exists, so that we can work together in addressing HIV/AIDS among the gay community.’

“Chairman of the Zimbabwe National Network for People Living with HIV (ZNPP+), Benjamin Mazhindu, called for legislation on homosexuality to be changed. ‘What we need to do is fight for a change of laws so that gays are given recognition. Without that, fighting AIDS among homosexuals will be futile.’” [10q] (p2-3)

21.12 Behind the Mask reported on 18 June 2007 that GALZ had opened a new Gay and Lesbian centre in Bulawayo. GALZ Director, Keith Goddard was reported to have said that the opening of the Bulawayo centre along with the introduction of “affinity groups” across Zimbabwe was a result of the significant growth of the organisation’s membership. Mr Goddard said that “We are definitely growing as more and more people are gaining courage and are comfortable about their sexual orientation in Zimbabwe.” The Bulawayo centre is reported to want to focus on women’s needs. [92c]

21.13 An article posted on the Behind the Masks website dated 13 June 2008 noted “Although homosexual men (including transgender men) are spurned by society, they still maintain the privileges that automatically accrue to them as biological males.” The article went on to consider the situation for lesbians, as women, who “... suffer multiple forms of oppression, some of which relate to their sexuality but most of which relate to the general position of women in society.” (See following section.) [92g] No further information has been identified by COIS with regard to transgender persons.

Lesbians

21.14 Behind The Mask, reported on 13 June 2008, that lesbian and bisexual women often face far more severe discrimination because of the traditional lower status of women in Zimbabwean society. The report noted that while gay men “... are spurned by society, they still maintain the privileges that automatically accrue to them as biological males.” These privileges include the right of free association, whereas “Women... are not at liberty to mix with whom they please and establish unsupervised relationships. This makes it more difficult for lesbian and bisexual women to meet with others like themselves whilst keeping their sexuality hidden from their families.” However, women who were economically independent (generally in the large towns and cities) were reported to be in a slightly better situation. [92g]

21.15 The same source also noted that: “In the rural areas lesbian and bisexual women ...” have little access to a support network.

“With no support network and no information, these women are far more likely to internalise their oppression and believe that they should conform to cultural norms of heterosexual marriage and the bearing of children. Although these women may outwardly concur with their position, they are still forced to accept a lifestyle, which runs entirely contrary to their emotional and psychological needs.

“Although spaces for lesbians and gay men remain limited, men are once again at an advantage. Whilst gay men are generally more accepting of lesbian and bisexual women as social equals and do not view women as sex objects, many still carry with them unconscious prejudices of heterosexual socialisation. ...[one] potential source of sanctuary for lesbian and bisexual women is the women’s movement but, in Zimbabwe, this is deeply divided by conflicting ideologies.”

21.16 The same source noted that the traditional and invented African traditions of many of these organisations further constrict a woman’s freedoms. In addition “The conservative wing of the women’s movement is... heavily influenced by fundamentalist Christian thinking which finds no room for the inclusion of lesbians.” And lesbians “... may even be perceived as a threat since many [women’s] organisations fear to associate with those unpopular both with government and the Christian church.” [92g]

21.17 The report continued

“A woman is not thought of as owning a sexuality independent of the needs of men and the idea of sexual expression not involving penetration is entirely alien to the machismo mentality. For these reasons and others related to the general invisibility of lesbian and bisexual women in public spaces, the majority of Zimbabweans believe that it is illogical for lesbians to exist in African cultures. Those who profess to be lesbian are simply not believed. Women who claim to be independent of men, even for sex, arouse intense anger in those men with deep-seated insecurities about sexual rejection and the need to control. In more traditionally conservative circles, homosexuality may be thought of in terms of illness brought on by demon possession. The cure for a man is exorcism but often the cure for a woman is ..." rape. (Behind The Mask, reported on 13 June 2008) [92g]

Additional information about sexual violence against lesbians, and HIV/AIDs can be found at Women and Children

LGBT social scene

- 21.18 GALZ describes the gay and lesbian social scene in Zimbabwe as "vibrant" and "flourishing". In supporting this view GALZ points to the annual Jacaranda Queen (Drag Queen) competition which has taken place in one form or another since the 1970s; the most recent incarnation of which began in 1995 at the height of government pronouncements against Lesbians and Gays. (GALZ, accessed 23 November 2007) [42d] 'Samantha', the 2005 winner of the competition, was reported as saying on receipt of the prize "I will utilize this opportunity to do charity work and show a better side of our community. I am very happy; I have to call my mother..." [92b] Kubatana reported on 10 November 2007 that the most recent Jacaranda Queen drag pageant was held at Harare's Harry Margolis Hall in November 2007. [55i] Note: The GALZ website was not obtainable when this section was reviewed on 29 May 2009; however, International Gay guide, Spartacus (2009 edition) includes a recent advert for the organisation. [166b]
- 21.19 International Gay guide, Spartacus, confirmed in its 2008 listing for Zimbabwe that there is "... an annual Pride celebration [doesn't state the details but it is likely to be connected to the Jacaranda Queen contest] in September/October each year." In addition, the guide also noted that there were a couple of dance clubs where gay people could meet in the Borrowdale area of Harare. [26a] The 2009 edition of Spartacus confirmed that there were still two gay friendly nightclubs in the Borrowdale area of Harare. [166b] The GALZ website (accessed 23 September 2008) noted that another gay friendly venue was The Book Café in Harare. [42e] The BBC, in an article dated 7 August 2007, described 'The Book Café' as the "... epicentre of Harare's alternative culture." [3]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

22. DISABILITY

- 22.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“The constitution and law prohibit discrimination against persons with disabilities in employment, access to public places, and the provision of services; however, the lack of resources devoted to training and education severely hampered the ability of persons with disabilities to compete for scarce jobs. The law stipulates that government buildings be accessible to persons with disabilities, but implementation has been slow. ... Persons with disabilities faced harsh societal discrimination. Traditional belief viewed persons with disabilities as bewitched, and children with disabilities often were hidden when visitors arrived. In September [2008] the government announced it was reviewing the Disabled Persons Act, the Mental Health Act, and the constitution to align them with the Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities; no further action was taken by year's end.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 22.02 The USSD 2008 continued:

“According to the National Association of Societies for the Care of the Handicapped (NASCOH), persons with disabilities continued to be a forgotten and invisible group in society. For example, although an estimated 10 percent of citizens had disabilities, the sector has largely been marginalized from HIV/AIDS intervention programs. Except for a short period in the 1990s, instructions on the use of condoms have never been distributed in Braille for the visually impaired, and no efforts were made to advertise condoms in sign language for the deaf. There was no HIV/AIDS information in Braille. The organization also reported that only 33 percent of children with disabilities had access to education.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 22.03 The USSD 2008 also noted:

“Operation Murambatsvina in 2005 severely affected persons with disabilities and, according to the UN special envoy's report on the operation, the government held approximately 50 persons with physical and mental disabilities without care at a transit camp separated from the rest of the camp population. The government broadcast a regular, prime-time program on state radio to promote awareness of the rights of persons with disabilities.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 22.04 The National Association of Societies for the Care of the Handicapped (NASCOH) noted in a disability update published on 20 February 2007 that over 1,200,000 people, around 10 per cent of the population of Zimbabwe were considered to be disabled in some way. The disabled population were reported to be among the poorest in society with over 70 per cent of people with disabilities without employment. Many in Zimbabwe still believe that disability is a punishment caused either by angry “... spirits for a wrong committed by a family to another family, bewitching by vindictive or aggrieved parties, a curse for wrongdoing, use of magic gone awry within the family, or use of the disabled member as a sacrificial pawn...” [91]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

23. WOMEN

OVERVIEW

- 23.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 May 2009, noted that:

“In recent years women progressed in health and education but in general were concentrated in the lower echelons of the workforce, especially in the financial industry. Women held positions of importance in the legislative and executive branches of the government. NGOs reported that anecdotal evidence indicated women experienced economic discrimination including access to employment, credit, pay, and owning or managing businesses. However, detailed information was not available.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 23.02 The Department for International Development’s country overview of Zimbabwe (last updated in December 2008) noted that women living in Zimbabwe had the lowest life expectancy of any country in the world. The report noted that AIDS and poor economic conditions had contributed towards an average life expectancy in the country to drop to 34 years. [45b]

- 23.03 The Human Rights Watch, reported on 14 January 2009 that the deteriorating economic and political conditions have led to an escalation in violence against women. The aftermath of the March 2008 parliamentary and presidential elections, that saw the Government and its supporters engaged in a “... systematic campaign of violence ... In an attempt to overturn the vote in the presidential run-off ...” [69c] resulted in large numbers of women becoming victims of political violence. Pambuka News noted in an article dated 4 December 2008:

“In the MDC strongholds such as Manicaland and Mashonaland Central where the government had been trying to violently suppress the opposition, women and girls were raped and abused. In numerous examples, the youth militia and war veterans approached women and asked them to reveal the whereabouts of their husbands or brothers. Women were tortured and abused in order to force them to tell where their husbands were hiding. They raped them or physically assaulted them to force the males, whom they suspected to be opposition supporters, to return home. ... Many other instances were reported where women and girls were abducted for the purposes of supplying youth militia at the bases with sexual services, cooking and cleaning. Several testimonies collected for this study contain clear cases of sexual slavery and torture.” [46a] (p3)

For further information about the situation of girls see Children

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

LEGAL RIGHTS

- 23.04 The USSD 2008 report stated: “The constitution and law provide that no person can be deprived of fundamental rights, such as the right to life, liberty, and security of person, based on [amongst other things] one's... gender... however, the constitution allows for discrimination, primarily against women, on the grounds of 'customary law.'" Discrimination against women remained a problem. [2b] (Section 5)

- 23.05 Freedom House's report, Freedom in the World 2008, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2007, released in July 2008, reported that "Women enjoy extensive legal protections, but de facto societal discrimination and domestic violence persist. ... The prevalence of customary laws in rural areas undermines women's civil rights ... A recent upsurge in gender-based violence spurred renewed calls for the enactment of the Prevention of Domestic Violence Bill, which has lingered in Parliament for eight years [the bill became law in October 2007 – see section on domestic violence below]." [96a] (p6)

For more information on the situation of women see Socio-economic rights (marriage, divorce and inheritance) and laws protecting women, Violence against women.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

POLITICAL RIGHTS

- 23.06 The Afrol Gender Profile – Zimbabwe (accessed on 2 February 2009) reported that historically, women, despite the use of a women-only shortlist, have been underrepresented in government and politics. Until the formation of the current power sharing government, women were only represented in a small number of senior parliamentary positions - deputy speaker, three cabinet posts, three ministers of state, and three deputy ministers. "Women participate in politics without legal restriction; however, according to local women's groups, husbands – particularly in rural areas – commonly direct their wives to vote for the husband's preferred candidates." [73a] (p3)

- 23.07 The USSD 2008 report observed:

"After the March [2008] elections, there were 32 women in the 210-seat House of Assembly. Women won 21 of the 60 elected seats in the Senate, including the president of the Senate. One vice president, one deputy prime minister, four ministers, and two governors were women. Of these 270 elected positions, 53 were filled by women, constituting 19 percent of the total, short of the SADC target for female representation of one-third. In 2006 Rita Makarau became the first woman to hold the position of judge-president of the High Court. Women participated in politics without legal restriction, although according to local women's groups, husbands commonly directed their wives to vote for the husbands' preferred candidates, particularly in rural areas. The ZANU-PF congress allotted women one-third of party positions and reserved 50 positions for women on the party's 180-member central committee, which was one of the party's most powerful organizations." [2b] (Section 3)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC RIGHTS

- 23.08 Behind the Mask reported on 13 June 2008 that women traditionally hold a lower status in society. "Women... are not at liberty to mix with whom they please and establish unsupervised relationships. ... Women who claim to be independent of men, even for sex, arouse intense anger in those men with deep-seated insecurities about sexual rejection and the need to control." However, women were often able to lead an economically independent life Zimbabwe's larger towns and cities. [92g]

23.09 Afrol (accessed 2 February 2009) noted that societal attitudes towards women's rights had improved in recent years. It noted that "... gender issues, which belonged to the private and family sphere, are now discussed in public and abuse is starting to be taken to court." 73a] (p1)

23.10 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 May 2009, noted that:

"Despite laws aimed at enhancing women's rights and countering certain discriminatory traditional practices, women remained disadvantaged in society. Economic dependency and prevailing social norms prevented rural women in particular from combating societal discrimination. Despite legal prohibitions, women remained vulnerable to entrenched customary practices, including pledging young women to marry partners not of their choosing and forcing widows to marry the brothers of their late spouses." [2b] (Section 5)

23.11 The USSD 2008 report also stated that:

"Women and children continued to be adversely affected by the government's forced evictions and demolition of homes and businesses in several cities and towns. Many widows who earned their income in the informal economy or by renting out cottages on their property lost income when their market stalls or cottages were destroyed. Widows faced particular difficulties when forced to relocate to rural areas. Traditionally, women joined their husband's family when married and were considered an unwanted burden by their childhood families. Likewise, they were sometimes unwelcome in their husband's family in rural areas where resources were already strained.

"The Ministry of Women's Affairs, Gender, and Community Development continued its efforts to advance women's rights. The ministry, through collaboration with local NGOs, continued training workshops for traditional leaders in rural communities to create more awareness on women's issues. Women's Affairs Minister Oppah Muchinguri maintained 'gender units' in every ministry. The government gave qualified women access to training in the military and national service. Although there were advances for women within the armed forces in recent years, they continued to occupy primarily administrative positions. In recent years women progressed in health and education but in general were concentrated in the lower echelons of the workforce, especially in the financial industry. Women held positions of importance in the legislative and executive branches of the government. NGOs reported that anecdotal evidence indicated women experienced economic discrimination including access to employment, credit, pay, and owning or managing businesses. However, detailed information was not available.

"Several active women's rights groups concentrated on improving women's knowledge of their legal rights, increasing their economic power, combating domestic violence, and protecting women against domestic violence and sexual transmission of HIV/AIDS.” [2b] (Section 5)

Family law: marriage, divorce and inheritance

23.12 The USSD 2008 also noted that: “The law recognizes women's right to own property independently of their husbands or fathers; however, many women continued to be unaware of their property and inheritance rights. Divorce and maintenance laws were equitable, but many women lacked awareness of their rights.” [2b] (Section 5)

23.13 Afrol noted, (undated), accessed on 2 February 2009, that:

“The Legal Age of Majority Act (LAMA) and the Matrimonial Causes Act recognize women's right to own property independently of their husbands or fathers. While unmarried women may own property in their own names, women married under customary law are not allowed to own property jointly with their husbands. During the September land conference, women's rights organizations effectively lobbied the Government to agree to create legislation giving married women joint spousal title to property offered under the resettlement program; however, no such legislation had been enacted by year's end ... The Administration of Estates Amendment Act, which came into effect in October 1997, removed inheritance laws unfavourable to widows. Women's groups regard the act as a major step toward ending the unfair and unequal distribution of inherited assets for women. The President signed the new Inheritance Amendment into law. However, in February [2006] the Supreme Court upheld a magistrate court decision that, under customary ethnic law, a man's claim to family inheritance takes precedence over a woman's, regardless of the woman's age or seniority in the family; the Court cited Section 23 of the Constitution, which allows discrimination against women under customary law. Divorce and maintenance laws are favourable to women, but women generally lack awareness of their rights under the law.” [73a] (p1-4)

23.14 Afrol (undated), accessed on 2 February 2009, stated that:

“Women remain disadvantaged in society. Illiteracy, economic dependency, and prevailing social norms subject women to societal discrimination. Customary practices, including the practice of pledging a young woman to marriage with a partner not of her choosing; the custom of forcing a widow to marry her late husband's brother; and the custom of offering a young girl as compensatory payment in interfamily disputes is deeply rooted in Zimbabwe.” [73a] (p1-4)

23.15 Womankind.org noted in Why Zimbabwe (accessed on 17 October 2007) that:

“There are three types of marriages, namely civil marriages, registered customary marriage and unregistered customary marriages. Customary marriages are traditional unions, which are sometimes registered, but which often remain informal. The legal status of a marriage determines the rights of a wife after divorce or the death of a spouse. Nearly a fifth of marriages are estimated to be polygamous: some women see polygamy as preferable to monogamy where they might otherwise be socially excluded due to their unmarried status.” [63]

- 23.16 The same report also noted that “An estimated 80% of marriages in Zimbabwe are ‘customary marriages’, in which a woman’s right to inherit property upon the death of her husband can be severely compromised. Around 18% of women are in polygamous marriages, which further limit a wife’s property rights. Childless widows are often evicted, as are those who refuse to be physically ‘inherited’ by a male relative of their late husbands.” [63]

For related information see Children – Customary marriages

Prostitution

- 23.17 The Institute for War and Peace Reporting noted on 3 July 2008 that the current economic conditions in the country, over 80 per cent unemployment coupled with hyper-inflation, has led many women to turn to the sex industry as the only way of feeding themselves and their families. The report highlighted a number of examples of women who have made the decision to sell sex for food and shelter. [77a]

- 23.18 The USSD 2008 noted that:

“Prostitution is illegal, and several civil society groups offered anecdotal evidence that the country’s worsening economic problems were forcing more women and young girls into prostitution. There were increasing reports that women and children were sexually exploited in towns along the borders with South Africa, Botswana, Mozambique, and Zambia. During the year there were numerous media reports regarding concerted efforts by police to halt prostitution throughout the country. Police arrested both prostitutes and their clients during the year.” [2b] (Section 5)

Reproductive rights - access to abortion

- 23.19 The United Nations Population Division (Department of Economic and Social Affairs) noted, in a report dated 23 November 2005, that abortion in Zimbabwe was only legally sanctioned in the following circumstances:

- to save the life of the mother;
- to preserve the physical health of the mother;
- following rape or incest; and,
- foetal impairment.

Abortion was not available on request or for the following reasons:

- to preserve mental health; and,
- economic or social reasons. [74] (p189)

- 23.20 The UN report went on to note that:

“A legal abortion must be performed by a physician in a designated institution with the permission of the superintendent of the institution. If the pregnancy resulted from unlawful intercourse, a magistrate of a court in the jurisdiction where the abortion will be performed must certify that the alleged intercourse was reported to the police and that pregnancy may have resulted from it. When the abortion is requested because the pregnancy poses a threat to the life or physical health of the pregnant woman, or on grounds of foetal impairment, two physicians that are not members of the same practice must certify to the relevant hospital superintendent that one of these conditions exists. However, if the woman's life is in danger, a physician can perform the abortion in a place other than a designated institution and without a second medical opinion." [74] (p189)

- 23.21 IRIN news reported on 30 March 2005 that the protracted process of satisfying the conditions of the 'Termination of Pregnancy Act (1977)' "... coupled with the fact that legal abortions are not free, have led to a growing 'black market' for the procedure, where back street terminations are often performed by unskilled personnel in unhygienic surrounding." As a result it was reported that 70,000 illegal abortions take place in Zimbabwe every year. One consequence of illegal was a large number of young women (usually between the ages of 15 and 24) seeking post abortion medical assistance. [10m]
- 23.22 The Herald reported on 12 July 2008 that a woman who confessed to "... terminating a seven-month pregnancy was sentenced to perform community service after a Harare magistrate wholly suspended her nine-month prison term" [23f] Another Herald article, dated 14 July 2008, reported that the Director of the Zimbabwe Women Lawyer's Association, Emilia Muchana, called on the government to improve the implementation of the Termination of Pregnancy Act so as to allow women to terminate ..." pregnancies that result from rape. Ms Muchana stated that implementation of the Act was slow with women giving birth to 'unwanted lids' due to delays in granting them the go-ahead to terminate such pregnancies." [23g]
- 23.23 The Herald reported on 27 April 2009 that a 36 year old women was believed to have died while trying to terminate her pregnancy. The news report noted that a post mortem at Chinhoyi Provincial Hospital discovered a cooking stick lodged inside the woman that had perforated a number of her organs. The police stated their belief that the woman had tried to perform an illegal abortion. [23i]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

- 23.24 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, covering events in 2008, published on 26 March 2009, that:

"There were at least three politically motivated rapes, and reports of many women being used as 'sex slaves' at ZANU-PF bases. Throughout the year, women protesters have been regularly beaten and arrested, even when pregnant or with small children. A growing number of cases of women and under-age girls are experiencing sexual violence at the hands of relatives. Women still lag behind men in political and decision-making positions and in education. The UK is funding a number of NGOs who are campaigning specifically for the rights of women and children to be upheld and working to address the growing issue of gender-related violence. DfID has also been supporting the development of a national gender strategy and mechanisms for more harmonised and predictable support for gender equality and women's empowerment." [13a] (Women's and children's rights)

- 23.25 Afrol dated when...accessed 2 February 2009 noted that “Violence against women, especially wife beating, is common. Domestic violence accounted for more than 60 percent of murder cases tried in the Harare High Court in 1998. The media increasingly reports incidents of rape, incest, and sexual abuse of women.” [73a] (p1) The same source also noted that Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) is still practised by a small ethnic group called the Remba [or Lemba]. [73a] (p2)
- 23.26 Trafficking remained a problem in 2008, and women and girls were trafficked for sexual exploitation and domestic servitude. (USSD 2008 report) [2b] (Section 5) More details can be found the section on Trafficking.

Politically motivated violence

- 23.27 The BBC reported on 25 July 2007 that Amnesty International claimed in a new report that “women who oppose Robert Mugabe’s regime in Zimbabwe are suffering increasing violence and repression...” The report also noted that “Detained women human rights defenders have been subjected to sexist verbal attacks, and denied access to food, medical care and access to lawyers... Some have been severely beaten while in police custody, in some instances amounting to torture.” [3be] Freedom House in Freedom in the World – Zimbabwe 2008, reported that ZANU-PF youth militias have used rape, torture and even murder as a political weapon. [96a] (p11)
- 23.28 Freedom House also reported that security forces continued to disrupt demonstrations by the Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA) group. Hundreds of women are reported to have been arrested during recent demonstrations. [96a] (p5)
- 23.29 Various sources reported during the 2008 elections that rape was used by ZANU-PF as a political weapon against opposition supporters. IRIN News reported on 9 July 2008 that:
- Several women, including a 70-year-old grandmother and a 15-year-old girl, have been gang-raped...” In some cases, it was reported that opposition supporters were forced to “donate” women to torture camps to avoid becoming victims themselves. “Rape was being used as a ‘deplorable’ weapon against those perceived as not supporting ZANU-PF. And ‘in many instances, the victims cannot remember the number of people who raped them but it is usually more than 20...” which increased the chances of contracting a sexual transmitted disease. [10u]
- 23.30 Reuters reported on 8 August 2008 that similar events having taken place during and after the elections, with 53 cases of rape having been reported since mid April 2008. Reuters noted that: “More than 50 women, some as young 13 and others as old as 60, have been gang raped and tortured by government-backed militias in Zimbabwe because of their support for the opposition... One 60-year-old woman said she was raped by 18 militia members who told her they wanted her to have a ZANU-PF baby...” The 13 year old girl was reported to have been held at a youth militia camp and used as a sex slave, being repeatedly raped and beaten. [75c]

- 23.31 Freedom House in Freedom in the World 2008, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2008, released in July 2008 reported that: "Sexual abuse is widespread, including the use of rape as a political weapon. ... In July 2007, Amnesty International reported that women oppositionists faced particular brutality by security forces." [96a]

For more information about politically motivated violence see Latest news, Recent developments, Security forces, Political affiliation and Human rights institutions, organisations and activists

Domestic violence

- 23.32 The USSD 2008 noted that:

"Domestic violence against women, especially wife-beating, continued to be a serious problem. In 2006 the Musasa Project, a local NGO that worked for the protection and promotion of women's rights, reported that approximately one-third of women in the country were in an abusive marital relationship. Most cases of domestic violence went unreported due to traditional sensitivities and fear of economic consequences for the family. Authorities generally considered domestic violence to be a private matter and usually only arrested an offender for assault if there was physical evidence of abuse. There were newspaper reports of wife killings, and there were a few reports of prosecutions and convictions for such crimes.

"In October 2007 the government enacted the Domestic Violence Act, which criminalizes domestic violence and provides enhanced protection for victims of abuse; the act was viewed as a milestone by women's rights groups. The law provides for a fine and a maximum prison sentence of 10 years. The Ministry of Women's Affairs and local women's groups coordinated efforts to develop an implementation strategy after the act passed parliament in 2006. ...

"During the year the government continued a public awareness campaign on the act. Several women's rights groups worked with law enforcement and provided training and literature on domestic violence as well as shelters and counselling for women. Local women's rights groups reported that awareness of domestic violence increased; however, the press reported that the act has proven difficult to implement, as the form to report domestic violence to the police is 30 pages long, making it difficult to complete and photocopy." [2b] (Section 5)

Rape

- 23.33 The USSD 2008 continued:

"The law makes rape and nonconsensual sex between married partners a crime; however, few cases of rape, especially spousal rape, were reported to authorities because women were unaware that spousal rape was a crime and feared losing the support of their families, particularly in rural areas. The criminal code defines sexual offenses as rape, sodomy, incest, indecent assault, or immoral or indecent acts with a child or person with mental disabilities and provides for penalties up to life in prison for sexual crimes. Police acted on reported rape cases not associated with political violence, and the government media frequently published stories denouncing rape and reporting convictions. In many cases the victims knew their rapists. The criminal code also makes it a crime to knowingly infect anyone with HIV. Local NGOs dealing with women's rights reported that rape cases were brought to the court and there were convictions; however, statistics were unavailable.”

[2b] (Section 5)

For more information on violence against women (and girls) see Latest news, Recent developments, Security forces, Political affiliation, Human rights institutions, organisations and activists, Children, Violence against children, and Trafficking

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

24. CHILDREN

OVERVIEW

- 24.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“The government's commitment to children's rights and welfare did not improve during the year. Declining socioeconomic conditions, violence, and a dysfunctional education system continued to place more children at risk. According to statistics from UNICEF, one-quarter of the country's children were orphans, and 100,000 children lived in child-headed households. The education system experienced its worst year on record.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 24.02 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that: “... children were not spared the violence meted out by state agents in the electoral period. Children have been beaten, watched their parents be beaten in front of them, been coerced into participating in violence, been displaced and been separated from their parents and carers.” [13a] (Women's and children's rights)

- 24.03 UNICEF reported that there were 6,175,000 children under the age of 18 in 2007. Of that figure, 1,706,000 were under the age of 5. [84a] (accessed 29 May 2009)

Further background information can be found at the following website:
http://www.unicef.org/infobycountry/zimbabwe_1403.html

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Basic legal information

- 24.04 Avert.org, accessed on 29 May 2009, noted that the age of consent in Zimbabwe for males and females was 16 years. [168b] The Zimbabwe Ministry of Youth Development and Employment (accessed 29 May 2009) reported that: “The minimum age of marriage under the Marriage Act is 16 for girls and 18 for boys.” [165a] However, the USSD 2008 reported that: “Customary marriage, recognized under the Customary Marriages Act, does not provide for a minimum marriage age for either boys or girls; however, the criminal code prohibits sexual relations with anyone younger than 16 years of age.” The report also noted that: “The traditional practice of offering a young girl in marriage as compensatory payment in interfamily disputes continued during the year, as did arranged marriage of young girls.” [2b] (Section 5)
- 24.05 The Zimbabwe Ministry of Youth Development and Employment (accessed 29 May 2009) noted that the age of majority was 18, also noting that “... the legal minimum age for employment is 15 and employed children cannot work for more than 6 hours a day.” [165a] The United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child reported on 17 June 1996 that the age of criminal responsibility was 15. Children under the age of 7 years of age are considered incapable of committing a crime with a ‘rebuttable presumption’ that children between 7 and 14 years of age were incapable of committing crimes. [25b] (p2)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

LEGAL RIGHTS

- 24.06 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“Although legislation existed to protect children's rights, it was difficult to administer and enforce, primarily due to a lack of funding and resources. Many orphaned children were unable to obtain birth certificates, which the Child Protection Society reported made it difficult for the children to enrol in school and access health services; however, the government made improvements in 2007 by decentralizing the authority to issue birth certificates to local Registrar General offices throughout the country.” [2b] (Section 5)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN

- 24.07 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that: “A growing number of cases of ... under-age girls are experiencing sexual violence at the hands of relatives.” [13a] (Women's and children's rights)

- 24.08 The USSD 2008, published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“Child abuse, including incest, infanticide, child abandonment, and rape continued to be serious problems during the year. Police statistics showed that child rape tripled between 2005 and 2007. Anecdotal evidence suggested that a relative or someone who lived with the child was the most common abuser. Girl Child Network reported that girls believed to be virgins were at risk for rape due to the belief among some that having sex with a virgin would cure men of HIV and AIDS. In February UNICEF and the government launched the ‘Stand Up and Speak Out’ child abuse awareness and prevention campaign.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 24.09 The BBC reported on 12 June 2009 that: “Growing numbers of children in Zimbabwe are turning to prostitution to survive, the charity Save the Children says. The aid agency says increasing poverty is leading girls as young as 12 to sell their bodies for as little as a packet of biscuits.” [3aa]

- 24.10 UNICEF reported on 27 February 2008 that: “The number of reported cases of children being raped in Zimbabwe has increased by more than 40 per cent in the last three years, according to official police statistics. ... Official police figures show that there were 2192 reported ‘rape cases involving children 16 years and below’ in 2003. In 2006 this surged to 3112, an increase of 42 percent.” The report stated that a willingness among some families to reach a settlement with the perpetrator deepened the existing culture of silence exasperating the problem. As a result, UNICEF and the National Faith Based Council of Zimbabwe announced that they were launching the ‘Stand Up and Speak Out’ campaign to encourage children, families and community leaders to speak out against the problem. [85b]

- 24.11 The USSD 2008 report noted that trafficking of children was a serious problem with girls and boys being trafficked for sexual exploitation in neighboring countries. The report noted that there was limited assistance available to these children, noting that:

“Victims suffering from child or domestic abuse were treated with special procedures in victim-friendly courts, and trafficked persons had the option to take cases before such courts. Local immigration and social services officials referred trafficking victims to NGO-funded centers. Save the Children Norway also offered shelter and referrals for medical attention at the IOM reception centers in Beitbridge and Plumtree for unaccompanied children and trafficking victims.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 24.12 Afrol News (accessed on 31 August 2006) reported that initiation rites practised by the small Remba ethnic group in Midlands province include infibulation, the most extreme form of FGM. [73a]

See also Women, Violence against women, and Trafficking

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

CHILDCARE AND PROTECTION

- 24.13 The USSD 2008, published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“In 2007 the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare and the UNICEF formalized agreements with 21 NGOs to advance the National Action Plan for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (NAP for OVC), designed to ensure that orphans and vulnerable children were able to access education, food, health services, and birth registration and were protected from abuse and exploitation. UNICEF reported that the NGOs involved in the program had reached just over 200,000 OVC with comprehensive support and protection since the beginning of the program. However, the government-imposed NGO ban between June and August negatively affected the program, putting vulnerable children at greater risk.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 24.14 UNICEF noted in At a Glance: Zimbabwe (accessed on 2 February 2009) that Zimbabwe has 1.1 million orphans, the vast majority of whom have been orphaned by AIDS. [85a] (p2) A report by the Institute for War and Peace Reporting, dated 27 January 2009, reported that the number of orphans in Zimbabwe was 1.5 million. [77e]
- 24.15 Kubatana.net (accessed 2 February 2009) noted that there were at least 30 non-governmental organisations throughout Zimbabwe that championed the plight of, and/or provided assistance and shelter for orphaned children. [55o] In addition, a number of other NGOs operated in Zimbabwe, including ‘Mustard seed Communities’, accessed 2 February 2009, which provided residential, medical care, food and education to Zimbabwean Children. However, the assistance they were able to offer was limited. [137a] The Firelight Foundation [72a] and Save the Children were also active in Zimbabwe providing a range of support services for orphans and other children. Services included arranging accommodation for orphaned children, providing food, medication and funding for education. Save the Children (What we do in Zimbabwe – 2008/9) noted that it worked in partnership with a range of organisations including UNICEF, IOM, World Food Programme and local NGOs. [86a]

- 24.16 HIV-AIDS Zimbabwe (HAZ) reported on 18 July 2007 that economic conditions were making it increasingly difficult for the country's orphanages to care for the increasing numbers of children who have lost one or both parents to AIDS. However, the report noted that the Roman Catholic Diocese of Mutare had recently established two children's houses under its 'Home of Hope' initiative. "The two completed homes are part of an on going project to construct 13 homes for OVCs [Orphans and Vulnerable Children]." Each home will house eight children and access to the facility will be via the social welfare department. [93] A report by the Institute for War and Peace Reporting, dated 27 January 2009, noted that grandparents, specifically grandmothers, were often left with the responsibility for raising orphaned grandchildren. The report noted a couple of examples of aged grandmothers left to care for children who had often been orphaned by HIV/AIDS. However, the report noted that UNICEF and the World Food Programme was providing some food and medical aid to these orphaned families, with UNICEF alone providing assistance to more than 250,000 orphans. The ongoing food crisis, with 5.5 million people requiring food aid, has exacerbated the situation for those with HIV/AIDS and the affected households. [77e]
- 24.17 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that it was providing assistance that enabled "Over 150,000 orphans and vulnerable children ... to go to school ..." [13a] (Aid and humanitarian relief)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

CHILD LABOUR

- 24.18 The USSD 2008 report noted that:

"Under the LRAA [Labour Relations Amendment Act], child labor is punishable by a fine, two years' imprisonment, or both; however, child labor was common. Under the LRAA, a child between the ages of 13 and 15 can work as an apprentice or if the work is an integral part of "a course of training or technical or vocational education." The law further states that no person under 18 shall perform any work likely to jeopardize that person's health, safety, or morals. The status of children between 15 and 18 years of age is not directly addressed, but 15 years of age remains the minimum for light work, work other than apprenticeship, or work associated with vocational education."

"The government released the 2004 Child Labor Report in March 2006. According to the survey, approximately 46 percent of children between the ages of five and 17 were engaged in economic activity. The unemployment rate continued to grow, with some estimates as high as 90 percent, which decreased the number of children employed in the formal sector. However, the incidence of children who worked in the informal sector continued to increase as more children worked to fill the income gap left by ill, unemployed, underemployed, or deceased relatives. Children often lacked access to necessary safety equipment and training. Children worked in the agricultural sector, as domestics, in illegal gold and diamond mining, as street vendors, and as car-watchers. In addition there were reports of an increasing number of girls engaged in prostitution. Although the government and NGOs increasingly discussed the problem of child labor in the agricultural, domestic, and informal sectors, concrete data on the number of cases remained difficult to evaluate and confirm. An August 2007 survey by a domestic NGO documenting child labor reported that approximately one-third of children were working. Given the continued economic downturn and reduction in school hours, the organization believes the percentage of children working was higher during the year.

“Most economically active children still worked in the agriculture industry and were also involved in mining, domestic labor, and the informal economy. Children worked in all aspects of tobacco farming, from planting to preparation of leaves for sale; in the forestry regions of the eastern highlands; and on tea and coffee plantations and small farms. Children worked on cotton farms; one NGO reported that school attendance rates declined in cotton growing areas during the harvest. In cities, children commonly worked as street vendors and as guards for parked automobiles. Throughout the country, children, particularly girls, worked as domestic laborers, often for family members. Information on the extent to which child labor occurred in the production of commercial products was not available. At year's end reports emerged that children as young as twelve living near the Chiadzwa diamond mine in Manicaland were working under the guard of security forces in diamond fields. It was unclear if this labor was forced. There was no evidence that children were subjected to some of the worst forms of child labor, including slavery, production of pornographic material, or illicit activities. Children working in agriculture, mining, and as street vendors faced threats to their health and safety.

“Some employers did not pay wages to child domestic workers, believing they were assisting a child from a rural home by providing housing and board. In addition some employers paid the parents for the child's work. Relatives often used AIDS-orphaned children as domestics without pay. There were also reports from NGOs that police rounded up street children and took them to work on farms without pay.

“The Department of Social Welfare in the Ministry of Labor is responsible for enforcing child labor laws, but the department lacked the human resources to carry out inspections or any other monitoring. In 2007 the Ministry of Public Service, Labor and Social Welfare signed a memorandum of understanding with the ILO to collaborate on a multiphase program for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. The program was expected to address child labor issues and the implementation of ILO [International Labour Organisation] Convention 182, including identifying the worst forms of child labor and implementing activities pertaining to the prevention of child labor and the protection of working children. In July the government and the ILO launched a nationwide survey on the worst forms of child labor; the survey had not yet been released at year's end.” [2b] (Section 6d)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

EDUCATION

- 24.19 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that: “Education has been severely disrupted in 2008. ... The education system has not recovered.” [13a] (Women’s and children's rights) IRIN reported on 4 May 2009 that: "According to the UN Children's Fund (UNICEF), school attendance rates dropped from 80 per cent to 20 per cent in 2008." The report noted that a lack of teachers and unaffordable school fees were responsible. However, David Coltart the MDC minister of education announced that the government of national unity was looking at a package of measures to attract teachers back to work and to get children back in classes, including reducing school fees. [10d]

24.20 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that: "Schools have been at a standstill for a year due to lack of funding. Many teachers have emigrated, and only 60,000 of the former 140,000 reportedly remain." One of the first acts of Prime Minister Tsvangirai has been the payment of a "... modest hard-currency retention allowance of [US] $100, a sum many considered inadequate. Teachers agreed to resume work on the promise of more to come, but have threatened to go back on strike if their salaries are not raised quickly." [100a] (p9)

24.21 The USSD 2008 report noted that:

"Primary education is not compulsory, free, or universal for any children. According to the UNICEF Humanitarian Action Report 2008: Zimbabwe, the educational system was 'characterized by low enrolment rates, declining attendance and completion rates, low transition rate to secondary school and insufficient learning spaces, teachers and learning materials.' Many schools attempted to charge school fees in foreign currency, fuel coupons, or even livestock, as the value of local currency continued to fall. Many parents complained that they did not have access to resources to pay school fees. In October the two main teachers' unions jointly called for the school year to be cancelled, labelling it a 'wasted year.' Election preparations, elections, election-related violence, teacher strikes, and teacher salaries that were lower than commuting costs contributed to repeated disruptions to effective learning during the year. One teachers' union estimated students averaged only 23 days of formal instruction in the entire academic year.

"UNICEF estimated 82 percent net primary school enrolment through 2005; however, school attendance declined dramatically during the year. At year's end UNICEF estimated that just 20 percent of children attended school. This decline resulted from severe economic hardship, displacement of thousands of children from their homes as a result of election-related violence, emigration of qualified teachers, the inability to pay school fees, and Operation Murambatsvina. The highest level achieved by most students was primary level education. UNICEF figures through 2005 showed a net secondary school enrolment of 35 percent for boys and 33 percent for girls.

"In most regions of the country, fewer girls than boys attended secondary school. If a family was unable to pay tuition costs, it was most often female children who left school. The Child Protection Society reported that girls were more likely to drop out because they were more readily employable, especially as domestic workers. In 2006, in collaboration with UNICEF and other partners, the government launched a National Girls' Education Strategic Plan to increase the likelihood of achieving universal primary education and ensuring that girls stayed in school." [2b] (Section 5)

24.22 The USSD 2008 continued:

“The government gave preference to national youth service graduates among those entering and those seeking employment in the civil service, especially in the security forces. The stated purpose of the training camps was to instill national pride in youth, highlight the history of the struggle for independence, and develop employment skills; however, news reports quoted deserters as saying that the camps subjected trainees to partisan political indoctrination as well as military training. There were numerous credible reports that graduates were used by the government to carry out political violence.” [2b] (Section 5)

- 24.23 Freedom House noted in Freedom in the World 2008, Zimbabwe, covering events in 2007, released in July 2008, that:

“Academic freedom is limited. All schools are under state control, and education aid is often distributed based on parents' political loyalties. Security forces and ZANU-PF thugs harass dissident university students, who have been arrested or expelled for protesting against government policy. In 2007, several protests by university students resulted in arrests and beatings; police closed the University of Zimbabwe in July. In September, the police defied a High Court ruling to reopen student residences that were kept shut after classes resumed.” [96a] (p6)

- 24.24 IRIN reported on 10 February 2009 that:

“About 94 percent of Zimbabwe's rural schools - where most children are educated - failed to open this year [2009], the UN Children's Fund said on 10 February 2009. ... Widespread disruption of schools began in the aftermath of the March 2008 elections and continued beyond a presidential run-off poll in June, which was not recognized internationally because of the state-sponsored political violence.

“After the elections, many teachers failed to return to their posts as a consequence of salaries made worthless by hyperinflation and a fear of continued political violence.” [10i]

- 24.25 The Times reported on 8 October 2008 that: “In the mid-1990s there was a national O-level pass rate of 72 per cent. Last year it crashed to 11 per cent. Many schools recorded zero passes.” [82a]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

HEALTH AND WELFARE

- 24.26 The Department for International Development's (DFID) country overview of Zimbabwe (accessed on 29 May 2009) noted that: “1 in 12 children die before the age of five: 82 per 1,000 births. Almost 40% of these will die in the first month of life.” [45f]
- 24.27 The Daily Mirror reported on 18 January 2006 that the experience of children and the parents of children with disabilities was often difficult with discrimination of disabled children still very common. The report noted that disabled “...children face a lot of challenges ranging from lack of adequate schooling facilities, transport problems and accommodation...” Most “...disabled children spend the better part of their time indoors as their parents try to hide them for fear of victimisation by their able-bodied counterparts.” The mothers of disabled children are sometimes blamed for their child’s disability with some women being labelled a ‘witch’. [47]

Also see Disability

24.28 The USSD 2008 report noted with regard to displaced and street children that:

“UNICEF estimated that at least 10,000 children were displaced in election-related violence. At year's end NGOs were uncertain how many children remained affected. The continuing economic decline and the government's lack of support for social welfare institutions contributed to a noticeable increase from the estimated 12,000 street children throughout the country. NGOs operated training centers and homes for street children and orphans, and government officials referred children to these centers.” [2b] (Section 5)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

HIV/AIDS

24.29 The Department for International Development’s Key Facts - Zimbabwe (last updated in December 2008) noted that: “Zimbabwe has the highest proportion of children orphaned by AIDS in the world. According to Unicef, more than 25% of all children - some 1.8 million of them - have lost one or both parents.” [45b]

24.30 The USSD 2008, published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“With 1.6 million orphans with HIV/AIDS, the country had the world's highest percentage of orphaned children at one in four, and the number increased during the year. Ninety percent of orphans were cared for by the extended family. Many grandparents were left to care for the young, and, in some cases, children or adolescents headed families and were forced to work to survive. Orphaned children were more likely to be abused, not to be enrolled in school, and to suffer discrimination. Some children were forced to turn to prostitution as a means of income.” [2b] (Section 5)

24.31 IRIN also noted that the collapse of the health services system has meant that previously manageable conditions are developing into full blown AIDS at a much quicker pace. According to UNICEF about 41 percent of child deaths are AIDS-related ...” [10h]

See also Medical issues, HIV/AIDS

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

DOCUMENTATION

24.32 The Zimbabwean Ministry of Home Affairs website, accessed 12 June 2009, provides information regarding the initial registration of births, general registration, fees, processing times, and how to obtain copies/ urgent copies. [18a]

The following link contains information about birth and death certificates.
http://www.moha.gov.zw/index.php?link=rg_death_births

Please see Forged and fraudulently obtain documents for more information about various official documents and forged and fraudulently obtained documents.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

25. TRAFFICKING

25.01 The US State Department's Trafficking in Persons Report, dated 4 June 2008, placed Zimbabwe in tier 2 (Watch List). In effect, there are four tiers, 1, 2, 2 "watch list" and 3. Tier 2 Watch List was a deterioration on last year's report that placed Zimbabwe in Tier 2. The US State Department defined tier 2 as: "Countries placed on the Special Watch List in this Report will be re-examined in an interim assessment to be submitted to the U.S. Congress by February 1, 2009." [2e]

25.02 The report went on to note that:

"The Government of Zimbabwe does not fully comply with the minimum standards for the elimination of trafficking; however, it is making significant efforts to do so. Zimbabwe is placed on Tier 2 Watch List for its failure to provide evidence of increasing efforts to combat severe forms of trafficking over the last year, and because the absolute number of victims of severe forms of trafficking is significantly increasing. The government's efforts to address trafficking at home somewhat diminished during the reporting period, particularly in regard to law enforcement efforts. In addition, the trafficking situation in the country is worsening as more of the population is made vulnerable by declining socio-economic conditions." [2e]

25.03 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

"Trafficking was a serious problem. NGOs, international organizations, and governments in neighboring countries reported an upsurge in Zimbabwean emigrants facing conditions of exploitation. Rural children were trafficked into farms or cities for agricultural labor, domestic servitude, and commercial sexual exploitation, often under the false pretenses of job or marriage proposals, according to one NGO. Reports suggested that those children in desperate economic circumstances, especially those in families headed by children, were most at risk. Women and children were reportedly trafficked for sexual exploitation in towns along the borders with the four neighboring countries. In recent years, women and girls were lured to South Africa, China, Egypt, the United Kingdom, Canada, and Zambia with false employment offers that resulted in involuntary domestic servitude or commercial sexual exploitation. Women and children from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Malawi, Mozambique, and Zambia were trafficked through the country to South Africa. Small numbers of South African girls were trafficked to the country for forced domestic labor." [2b] (Section 5)

25.04 The USSD 2008 report continued:

"Traffickers were typically independent businesspersons who were part of small networks of local criminal groups that facilitated trafficking within the country, as well as into South Africa or other surrounding countries. Anecdotal reporting indicated that traffickers approached a potential victim, usually young women or girls, with the offer of a lucrative job in another part of the country or in a neighboring country. Many young men and boys were exploited by 'guides' when they attempted to cross the border illegally into South Africa to find work. Trafficked citizens often labored for months without pay in South Africa before their 'employers' reported them to authorities as illegal immigrants. Traffickers often transported victims covertly across borders at unrecognized border crossing points. The use of child laborers, especially as farm workers or domestic servants, was common in the country, often with the complicity of family members.

"The government demonstrated interest in combating trafficking; however, it did not devote sufficient resources to investigating and prosecuting cases.

"The primary government authority to combat trafficking was the ZRP which relied on NGOs to alert them to cases. During the year some traffickers were arrested, but none of the arrests resulted in prosecutions. The Interpol National Central Bureau Zimbabwe's 'antitrafficking desk' was staffed with ZRP officers who assisted with international investigations.

"There were reports suggesting that corruption in law enforcement, especially at the local level, directly or indirectly facilitated trafficking. The government took steps during the year to educate and train officials to combat trafficking. Government officials attended International Organization for Migration (IOM) seminars on trafficking during the year. IOM held numerous sector-specific training workshops during the year: four for law enforcement, three for social services professionals, three for faith-based organizations, and three for health and hygiene officials." [2b] (Section 5)

25.05 The USSD 2008 also noted that, with regards to protection:

"Although the government lacked resources to provide protective services on its own, the police Victim Friendly Unit, social services, and immigration officials utilized an established process for referring victims to international organizations and NGOs that provided shelter and other services. The government coordinated closely with the IOM-run migrant reception center in the town of Beitbridge on the border with South Africa, which provided social and reintegration services to the large number of illegal migrants repatriated from South Africa. In May IOM opened a second reception center in the town of Plumtree on the border with Botswana on government-allocated land.

"Victims suffering from child or domestic abuse were treated with special procedures in victim-friendly courts, and trafficked persons had the option to take cases before such courts. Local immigration and social services officials referred trafficking victims to NGO-funded centers. Save the Children Norway also offered shelter and referrals for medical attention at the IOM reception centers in Beitbridge and Plumtree for unaccompanied children and trafficking victims.

The government-run media prominently featured articles about trafficking in persons, and the government had prevention programs to provide alternatives for children at risk. The government also continued to cooperate with the IOM and Interpol in a public awareness radio campaign in five languages that led to the identification of several victims during the year. In December the IOM and local NGO Oasis Zimbabwe launched an antitrafficking hotline." [2b] (Section 5)

25.06 And with regard to prevention, the USSD Trafficking report 2008 noted that:

“The government sustained its previous level of anti-trafficking awareness raising efforts. There is a general lack of understanding about trafficking across government agencies, especially at the local level. However, senior government officials frequently spoke about the dangers of trafficking and illegal migration, and the state-run media printed and aired warnings about false employment scams and exploitative labor conditions. During the year, all four government-controlled radio stations aired an IOM public service announcement eight times each day in five languages during peak migration periods. In January 2008, the government signed a memorandum of understanding with the South African government for a joint project to regularize the status of illegal Zimbabwean migrant farm workers in South Africa’s Limpopo Province and ensure them proper employment conditions. The inter-ministerial anti-trafficking taskforce took no concrete action during the year. Information was unavailable regarding measures adopted by the government to ensure its nationals deployed to peacekeeping missions do not facilitate or engage in human trafficking. Zimbabwe has not ratified the 2000 UN TIP Protocol.” [2e]

- 25.07 The BBC reported on 12 June 2009 that: “There is ... evidence that many girls are being targeted by child traffickers, save the Children’s country director Rachel Pounds says. They are thought to have plans to send young Zimbabwean girls to South Africa to feed the appetite of those attending next year’s football World Cup Finals.” [3aa]

See also Children and Women Prostitution

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

26. TEACHERS

- 26.01 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that: “Education has been severely disrupted in 2008. Teachers were specifically targeted in post-election violence and some schools were taken over as torture bases. The education system has not recovered. UNICEF reported that in October attendance rates for teachers stood at just 40 per cent.” [13a] (Women’s and children’s rights) Amnesty International reported on 1 May 2009 that during 2008 the Progressive Teachers’ Union of Zimbabwe “... recorded the deaths of seven teachers affiliated to the union and the harassment, intimidation and even torture of more than 60 other members. ... None of the reported incidents of torture and ill-treatment of teachers that occurred in 2008 has been investigated and no one has been brought to justice.” Amnesty noted that: “Despite the creation of a power-sharing government in February 2009, teachers in Zimbabwe continue to be victims of harassment and intimidation.” [14a]
- 26.02 For at least 10 years, teachers have been the victims of violent attacks by ZANU-PF supporters, especially around election time, with many teachers accused of supporting the opposition MDC. It was claimed by Africasia on 11 May 2008 that part of the reason for much of the violence directed against teachers arose following the formation of the opposition party, the Movement for Democratic Change, when it “... identified teachers as the perfect messengers for the party, not least because of their work with voter education programmes.” [40b]
- 26.03 The Zimbabwe Standard reported on 10 May 2008 that teachers in ZANU-PF’s strongholds of Mashonaland East, Central and West and Manicaland provinces had born the brunt of violence directed towards “traitors” suspected of supporting the opposition. The article noted examples of threats and violence against teachers, including teachers being made to publicly sing ZANU-PF songs “...and denounce [the] MDC as a puppet of the West. Another teacher, who has since fled to Harare, said the war veterans threatened to throw him in a tank filled with acid if he was seen in the area again because ‘I was a bad influence to society’.” There were also examples of teachers being humiliated and threatened in the presence of their pupils and villagers. The “...usually pro-Mugabe Zimbabwe teachers Association (Zimta) has said it was concerned about the safety of its members” admitting that teachers were being harassed. [20b]
- 26.04 During the worst period of violence during the 2008 elections, The Independent reported on 1 May 2008, that two schoolteachers were beaten to death at a school in the north-western Guruve region (Mashonaland Central). [29a] “According to figures compiled by PTUZ [Progressive Teachers’ Union of Zimbabwe] more than 133 teachers have been assaulted...” and “...67 teachers have been hospitalised...” (Zimbabwe Journalists, 2 June 2008) [143g]
- 26.05 IRIN reported on 10 February 2009 that after the elections, state-sponsored political violence prevented many teachers from returning to work. The “... consequence of salaries made worthless by hyperinflation ...” was also another reason for not returning to work. [10i] The Times reported on 8

October 2008 that: “Six teachers were murdered and thousands assaulted by ZANU (PF) militia in the violence that marred the second-round presidential election on June 27. Schools were looted and turned into torture centres. Teachers disappeared. Many are still unable to return for fear of being disciplined.” [82a]

- 26.06 The Times reported on 8 October 2008 that even after receiving substantial pay increases from the government, teachers in Zimbabwe were still unable to feed themselves with the salary they received. It was reported that salaries were increased “... to the equivalent of £5.70 a month – barely enough for bus fares and bread for days.” [82a] The BBC reported on 27 January 2009 that one teacher it interviewed claimed that as the economy has deteriorated so he has had to look for other work to supplement his income. “I first got a second job around 2002 when our incomes became inadequate – then I started to give extra lessons after school. Then around 2007 it got really bad.” [3t]
- 26.07 The BBC reported on 18 February 2009 that Tendai Biti, Zimbabwe’s new finance minister, announced that all 130,000 government employees, including teachers, would receive a US$100 (£70) a month tax free allowance to help them to pay for essentials. [3ad]
- 26.08 Reliefweb reported on 19 March 2009 that following the formation of the power sharing government, both President Mugabe and Prime Minister Tsvangirai called for teachers to return to Zimbabwe to help rebuild the country. David Coltard, the MDC Minister of Education quickly announced the payment of salary allowances in foreign currency and relaxed conditions for re-joining the education sector. Mr Coltard announced that as a result of these changes there had been a “noticeable influx” of people seeking re-admission to the profession with ministry offices “... inundated with people seeking readmission” [22a]

See also Latest news, Recent Developments and Political affiliation

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

27. MEDICAL ISSUES

GENERAL

- 27.01 Noting the collapse of health services across the country in 2008, various sources reported the closure of hospitals and wards as resources dried up and medical staff left to find employment in other countries. Amnesty International reported on 21 November 2008 that the health "... system is paralysed by shortages of drugs and medical supplies, a dilapidated infrastructure, equipment failures and a brain drain. As a result, ordinary Zimbabweans are unable to access basic health care." Cases of cholera increased significantly during the latter half of 2008 [14h] and the numbers of Zimbabweans dying from AIDS related illnesses increased to 3,000 per week (nearly 160,000 per year). (International Crisis Group, 16 December 2008) [100g] (p8)
- 27.02 Amnesty International went on to note in its report of 21 November 2008 that the country's main referral hospitals, "... including Harare Central, Parirenyatwa and United Bulawayo hospitals, are barely functioning and some wards have even been closed. Two government maternity hospitals in greater Harare have been closed. Many district hospitals and municipal clinics are either closed or operating at minimum capacity. The University of Zimbabwe Medical School closed indefinitely on 17 November." [14h] The University of Zimbabwe Medical School remained closed as of 8 January 2009 because of lack of teaching staff/materials and running water. (The Times (Zimbabwe), 8 January 2009) [32d] The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa's group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch May 2009 (SITO Report) that: "Masvingo General Hospital, Chiredzi Hospital and Gomahuru Psychiatric Centre have ceased admissions of new patients due to a lack of water caused by regular power-cuts." [9b] (p3)
- 27.03 Human Rights Watch noted in its report of 22 January 2009, that:
- "Many district hospitals and municipal clinics in Zimbabwe are currently either closed or operating at minimum capacity. Other aggravating factors include dilapidated infrastructure, equipment failures, and a 'brain drain' of medical professionals. As a result, ordinary Zimbabweans cannot access basic healthcare. The cholera outbreak has been aggravated by the closure in November [2008] of Harare's two main public hospitals, Parirenyatwa and Harare, and a shortage of drugs and medical personnel. The main victims of the health crisis are the elderly, children, women and the chronically ill, including people living with HIV/AIDS. The crisis is such that in November 2008, UNICEF moved into a 120-day emergency mode, focusing on the cholera outbreak and providing emergency health care to children." [69g] (p19)
- 27.04 As hospital wards closed across the country, the Zimbabwean Health Minister admitted that the country's hospitals were "... literally not working." (The Times, 12 December 2008) [82e] Other hospitals, such as Marondera hospital had only one ward still open when The Times reported on 21 December 2008. The hospital had "... no doctors and no medicines, just nurses who are only there because they are scared of being beaten but are not being paid so don't do anything. There's no electricity or water and it is very dirty ..." [82x]

- 27.05 The lack of sanitation and running water caused the already existing cholera outbreak, which had been killing significant numbers since at least August 2007 (News 24, 20 August 2007) [38i], to gain further ground. ZimOnline reported on 26 September 2008 that a "... Zimbabwe doctors' organisation has warned of a looming health disaster in the country's cities ..." as the lack of clean water increased the incidence of diarrhoea and cholera. "The Zimbabwe Association of Doctors for Human Rights (ZADHR) said in a statement this week that a government body charged with providing water in urban areas had failed to do so forcing many residents to rely on unclean water." [49k]
- 27.06 However, the SITO report of May 2009 noted that there were a number of positive outcomes stemming from the formation of the unity government, funding for various humanitarian issues, including healthcare, has been promised by western nations. Even relatively poor neighbouring countries were reported to have pledged funding for essential services, with the Mozambique government reported to donating "... medication to lift critical shortages in public hospitals and clinics." [9b] (p5)
- 27.07 The World Health Organisation (WHO) in Health Action in Crises (published December 2008) noted that: "Average life expectancy has dropped from 65 in 1990 to 43 in 2006. Under-five mortality has increased from 76 per 1000 live births in 1990 to 82 in 2006. HIV/AIDS has fuelled a rapid growth in the number of orphans and vulnerable children, which have now reached over 1.3 million." [97b]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Cholera epidemic

- 27.08 Human Rights Watch reported on 22 January 2009 that cholera, previously only seen in small numbers in Zimbabwe, developed into epidemic proportions from August 2008 as dire economic conditions in the country impacted on the sanitation and health services ability to operate. [69g] (p17-18)
- 27.09 On 5 February the World Health Organisation (WHO) reported that the total number of deaths from cholera had risen to more than 3,300 with nearly 66,000 people infected. In the two days since the last WHO announcement (on 3 February) the organisation had upgraded its figures by 1,038 new cases and 28 deaths as more information became available. (Mail and Guardian, 5 February 2009) [6a] The Economist Intelligence Unit reported in February 2009 that the cholera outbreak was the "... deadliest cholera outbreak in Africa in 15 years and is gaining momentum ... Although cholera is normally both preventable and treatable, the economic and political crisis in Zimbabwe has caused the near collapse of the health services. Some 5.2% of patients catching cholera in the country are now dying, a very high fatality rate for such a treatable disease." [24p] [p10]
- 27.10 ZimOnline reported on 26 September 2008 that a "... Zimbabwe doctors' organisation ... warned of a looming health disaster in the country's cities ..." as the lack of clean water increased the incidence of diarrhoea and cholera. "The Zimbabwe Association of Doctors for Human Rights (ZADHR) said in a statement this week that a government body charged with providing water in urban areas had failed to do so forcing many residents to rely on unclean water.” [49k]

- 27.11 An upswing in the number of reported cholera cases increased throughout 2008. On 9 December 2008 The Times reported that the World Health Organisation (WHO) was predicting that “Up to 60,000 people in Zimbabwe could become infected with cholera if the epidemic ...” got further out of control. The United Nations and its agencies (UNICEF, WHO, UNHCR) were assisting in developing emergency plans in response to the rising infections. [82y]
- 27.12 On 9 June 2009 the World Health Organisation reported that there had been at least 4,276 deaths from cholera and nearly 100,000 had been infected since the start of the epidemic. The source stated that the epidemic has slowed significantly and was likely to be coming to an end. “The number of cases reported per week has decreased from over 8,000 per week at the beginning of February 2009 to about 100 cases per week at the end of May 2009.” Case fatality had also dropped from 6 per cent to 1.5 per cent. [97a]

HEALTH CARE FACILITIES

- 27.13 As mentioned in the section above, Amnesty International noted (on 21 November 2008) that there were dangerous shortages in all areas of the health care system. A shortage of drugs and medical supplies compounded serious problems caused by Zimbabwe’s dilapidated health care infrastructure and brain drain. The country’s main referral hospitals were reported to be “barely functioning” and hospital wards had been closed across the country. “As a result, ordinary Zimbabweans are unable to access basic health care.” [14h]
- 27.14 The US State Department’s Consular Information Sheet – Zimbabwe, updated on 1 April 2009, noted that medical facilities were extremely limited, stating that:
- “The public medical infrastructure has effectively crumbled and medical facilities are extremely limited. There have been several instances where American citizens facing life-threatening illnesses or injuries have been turned away from hospitals because there were not sufficient beds or medical supplies available. Most serious illnesses or accidents require medical evacuation to South Africa. All travellers are strongly urged to obtain medical evacuation insurance coverage prior to arriving in Zimbabwe. Doctors, hospitals and air ambulance medical evacuation services often expect immediate cash payment for health services. Travellers are urged to carry an ample supply of prescription and other medications, as they will not likely be available in Zimbabwe. Provincial hospitals in rural areas, if still operating, have rudimentary staffing, equipment, and supplies, and are not equipped to provide medical care in case of a serious accident. The fuel shortage further diminishes emergency response capabilities. Emergency patients often must arrange their own transportation to medical facilities.” [2g] (p8-9)
- 27.15 The BBC reported on 9 June 2009 that the poor state of the country’s health care service continues to be broken with little or no funding. A BBC journalist, travelling undercover, reported that the equipment in a hospital that he visited “... was in some way broken, missing or collapsed.” Reporting on another healthcare facility, a small clinic in Victoria Falls, the journalist went on to note that: "... I had just finished asking a nurse a string of questions about what provisions they had for patients. Did they, I asked, have bandages, food, drugs, ambulances, phones and sheets? All these questions were answered with a resounding 'no'. I then enquired whether there was anything the clinic did have." The answer was also no. [3k]

- 27.16 Previously, The Telegraph had reported on 2 August 2007 that shortages of medical supplies had caused patients to die from easily treatable conditions; dehydration was reported to be a big killer because many patients were unable to pay for their own medical supplies. The litre of intravenous fluid had cost "... half a civil servant's monthly salary." [5e] The Times, on 11 January 2009, provided examples of treatment prices introduced by the government in the public health sector "... including US$70 (£50) for an overnight stay in hospital. A caesarean will cost US$130 and parents of premature babies will be charged $5 a day for an incubator." The article went on to state that: "Cancer patients will have to find hundreds of dollars for radiation and chemotherapy." [82ae]

See Economy for information about average income.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS

- 27.17 The World Health Organisation (WHO) in Health Action in Crises (published December 2008) noted that: "Staff shortages are critical: 56%, 32% and 92% of doctor, nurse and pharmacist positions are vacant. Brain drain due to poor salaries and working conditions is compounded by qualified personnel being either chronically ill or deceased due to HIV/AIDS." [97b] (p2)
- 27.18 The Times reported, on 11 January 2009, that the crisis in the public health care system, caused by the collapse in the economy, was "... affecting even private hospitals. Doctors are paid in local currency worth less than US$10 a month and have stopped coming to work." [82ae] While The Times reported, on 9 December 2008, that "Many doctors and nurses (in the public sector) have ceased work after not being paid for months as Zimbabwe's economic crisis deepens." A spokeswoman for the UN said that "... three hospitals in Harare are closed due to a lack of personnel." [88y] The Times also reported (21 December 2008) that even when medical staff were in attendance it was often through fear of being beaten for not reporting to work. The article noted one such case where nurses were at the hospital but not working. [82x] The Guardian reported on 6 December 2008 that nurses in the country were earning less than the bus fare to get to work. [34b]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

ACCESS TO DRUGS

- 27.19 The World Health Organisation (WHO) in Health Action in Crises (published December 2008) noted that: "Most clinics and hospitals throughout the country have either run out or are extremely low on their stocks of essential medicines

...” [97b] The International Crisis Group reported on 16 December 2008 that there was an “... acute shortage of drugs, medical equipment and running water.” [100g] (p8) The Times reported, on 21 December 2009, that Matondera Hospital had “no medicines”. [82x]

- 27.20 The US Embassy in Harare noted on its website (accessed on 8 June 2009) that there are many good pharmacies in Harare. The website provides contact details for a selection of pharmacies: Avondale Pharmacy: Avondale Shops, Harare. Tel: 263-4-336642; Chisipite Pharmacy: Chisipite Shops, Harare. Tel: 263-4-494052/497017; Lemon Pharmacy: Avondale Shops, Harare. Tel: 263-4-302755; QV/Baines: 60 Baines Avenue, Harare. Tel: 704020; Shamrock: Avondale Shops, Harare. Tel: 336730/339339. [2d] However, the US State Department’s Consular Information Sheet – Zimbabwe, updated on 18 December 2008, urged travellers to “... carry an ample supply of prescription and other medications, as they will not likely be available in Zimbabwe.” [2g] (p8-9)
- 27.21 However, the BBC reported on the 17 May 2006 that even where drugs were available, there was information to suggest that patients who did not carry ZANU-PF membership cards were refused medication at government-funded public hospitals. [3ah]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

HIV/AIDS

OVERVIEW

- 27.22 An estimated 1.7 million Zimbabweans are living with HIV and AIDS. Of that number, 306,000 (July 2006 estimate) are in need of Anti Retroviral Treatment (ART) (IRIN PlusNews 2009) [10bm] The World Health Organisation (WHO) in Health Action in Crises, published December 2008, noted that: “Although HIV/AIDS prevalence among adults has dropped from 24.6% to 15.6%, the number of deaths attributable to AIDS is estimated at 130,000 every year. A third of the 340,000 people requiring anti-retroviral treatment (ART) are receiving it, compared to 5,000 in 2004.” [97b]
- 27.23 The US President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief reported in the 2008 Country Profile: Zimbabwe, that: “Zimbabwe continues to suffer a severe socioeconomic and political crisis, including unprecedented rates of inflation and a severe ‘brain drain’ of Zimbabwe’s health care professionals. Elements of a previously well-maintained health care infrastructure are crumbling. Zimbabwe’s HIV crisis is exacerbated by chronic food insecurity. Sub-optimal nutrition increases the vulnerability of individuals with compromised immune systems to life-threatening opportunistic infections, such as tuberculosis.” [79]
- 27.24 The Standard reported on 7 March 2009 that even where Zimbabweans were able to access ARV medication, many die because of an inability to afford an adequate diet. The Zimbabwe HIV and AIDS Union reported that Zimbabwe’s food crises has resulted in many Zimbabweans deciding to stop taking ARVs because the drugs were painful to take on an empty stomach. [20c]

Availability of treatment

- 27.25 A senior representative of the Department for International Development (DFID), based in Harare, reported on 12 July 2007 that Zimbabweans returning home after a period away from the country may find it difficult to access ARVs through the public funded programme. “New arrivals in Zimbabwe would have to be able to work the system pretty hard and with some expertise in order to get into a public programme right away.” In obtaining ARVs much will “...depend on where they are in the country, how well they work the system and whether they can make additional payments (both official and illicit).” [45e] The World Health Organisation (WHO) in Health Action in Crises (published December 2008) noted that over 100,000 people were receiving anti-retroviral treatment (ART), which was a significant rise from the 5,000 in 2004. [97b] However, while DFID noted in its ‘Zimbabwe: Major Challenges’ document (accessed 2 June 2009) that “... Zimbabwe has more people living with AIDS without access to treatment than any other country.” [45a]
- 27.26 The Standard reported on 7 March 2009 that many Zimbabweans were unable to access ARV medication because they were firstly unable to afford a CD4 Cell Count. The CD4 Cell Count measures the strength of the immune system and “... determines whether or not, a person living with HIV is put on life prolonging Antiretroviral Drugs (ARVs) and at what stage.” HIV/AIDS activists are campaigning for the new unity government to provide CD4 Cell Counts to Zimbabweans at no cost. [20c]
- 27.27 IRIN PlusNews recorded 19 HIV organisations in Zimbabwe providing assistance to people with HIV/AIDS. (IRIN PlusNews – Country Profile: Zimbabwe, 2009) [10bm]
The following link provides details of these organisations – <http://www.plusnews.org/profiletreatment.aspx?Country=ZW&Region=SAF>
- 27.28 The World Food Programme noted in its ‘Food Security: Overview’, updated in 2009, that it continued to “Promote universal access to the care and treatment of diseases such as HIV/AIDS and tuberculosis through Health-based Safety-Net Activities such as home-based care and food assistance to people on anti-retroviral treatment;” [54c]
- 27.29 On 4 August 2008 the Zimbabwean government announced that it was partially lifting a ban on NGOs operating in the country. The ban, imposed in June, had prevented NGOs distributing food to patients being treated for HIV/AIDS. The Ministry of Health agreed that food distribution operations could begin immediately. (VOA, 4 August 2008) [83b]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Cost and availability of ARVs

- 27.30 Continuing severe economic conditions has resulted in an uneven distribution of ARVs across Zimbabwe. A senior representative of the Department for International Development (DFID), based in Harare, reported on 12 July 2007 that while “...there have been serious shortfalls and interruptions in ARV availability donor partners have worked with the MOHCW [Ministry of Health and Child Welfare] and NAC [National AIDS Council] to build some insulation from the ad hoc drug supply with some success.” From July/August 2007 supplies of ARVs will become more consistent [45d] as funding of US$47 million will be disbursed through a mutli-donor pool over the next three years. [45c] However, ongoing economic problems may result in a lack of fuel to distribute drugs to outlying hospitals and the continuing brain drain from rural centres may also impact upon the numbers treated. [45d]

- 27.31 Private pharmacies appeared to stock most drugs (see paragraph 27.21 above for details of private pharmacies), even the most expensive combinations; however, even the most basic combinations were out of reach of Zimbabweans. While the government was making limited amounts of ARVs available to the general population, there were reports that "... HIV-positive ZANU-PF officials [were] receiving preferential treatment at public clinics and siphoning off drugs meant for public use for their own purposes." (Zimbabwejournalists.com, 22 April 2007) [50d] DFID noted on 12 July 2007 that: "The private sector drug supply is much less reliable and more expensive in Zimbabwe." For varying reasons, the public sector absorbs a large number of private patients each year." [45d] IRIN reported, on 18 January 2008, that "... a one month prescription of Stalenev 30, a common first-line ARV drug, now cost Z$85 million (about US$42.50 at the parallel exchange rate). [10c] Rampant inflation has since placed such drugs further out of reach for most Zimbabweans – see Economy for details of inflation.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Women and children

- 27.32 Avert.com (updated 12 July 2007) noted that:

"... the provision of services to prevent the transmission of HIV between mothers and their children during pregnancy is gradually being scaled up. In 2002 the NAC launched a prevention of mother-to-child transmission (PMTCT) program, which aimed to provide pregnant women with free VCT and give them access to nevirapine, a drug that significantly reduces the chances of transmission occurring. As of September 2005, there were 1346 sites providing PMTCT services nationally.

"The provision of PMTCT services remains severely limited by a lack of funding, and access to nevirapine is low. It is estimated that one hundred babies are infected with HIV through mother-to-child transmission every day in Zimbabwe – one every fifteen minutes." [19a] (p5)

- 27.33 Behind the Mask, reported on 13 June 2008, that:

"It is generally agreed that lesbians are at least risk of contracting HIV if they remain within exclusively lesbian relationships. However, because of gross generalisations within the HIV and AIDS movement relating to lesbian sexual behaviours, African lesbians are placed on the lowest rung when it comes to risks associated with acquiring or transmitting the HIV virus. ...In Zimbabwe, where women do not enjoy control over their bodies or their sexuality and are forced into marriages and into having children, lesbians are put at the same high risk of contracting HIV as their heterosexual counterparts." [92g]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

MENTAL HEALTH

27.34 The WHO Mental Health Atlas – 2005 (accessed on 2 February 2009) states that:

“The mentally ill are entitled to free health services. The country has disability benefits for persons with mental disorders. Details about disability benefits for mental health are not available. Mental illness falls under the category that qualifies for tax credits. ... Primary health care workers have the capacity to handle patients with severe psychosis and refer only those that they feel require specialized services. Most of the rural and district hospitals do not have facilities for inpatient care and only 17 district, provincial and central hospitals have primary care teams.”

With regard to community care facilities the report noted that “There is a shortage of material and staff to sustain the community care programme.”

[Refer to the source document for a list of commonly available psychiatric drugs; however, please note that there is currently a shortage of all drugs due to the lack of foreign currency.] [97c]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

28. HUMANITARIAN ISSUES

LAND REFORM

Overview

- 28.01 The Economist Intelligence Unit's Zimbabwe Country Profile 2008, dated 9 May 2008, noted that:

"Land has always been a central and controversial issue in Zimbabwe because of highly skewed distribution. Until 2002 about 30% of agricultural land was covered by around 4,500 commercial farms, which were mainly white-owned. Acute land pressure in the communal areas, brought about by high population growth rates coupled with the need to correct a historical injustice, has made land redistribution a pressing issue. However, it has really only been raised as an issue for political reasons, notably the president's waning popularity since 1999." [24e] (p15)

- 28.02 The United Nations report of 'Operation Murambatsvina', published on 18 July 2005, placed the question of land redistribution into an historical context, noting that:

"President Mugabe's own contribution to South Africa's independence is especially important. Apparently, had it not been for South Africa's liberation, land acquisition might have come much earlier in Zimbabwe and independently of MDC politics. However, President Nyerere of Tanzania is reported to have prevailed over this issue, arguing that 'a forced land take over in Zimbabwe would forever jeopardize the South African liberation project and that Zimbabweans must wait before they could get back their land'. With Nelson Mandela free, South Africa out of Apartheid and with promised donor assistance to buy back the land not forthcoming, a forced acquisition of land in Zimbabwe was inevitable." [25] (p18)

- 28.03 The issue of land ownership was addressed in the power sharing deal signed by ZANU-PF and the MDC on the 15 September 2008. The agreement states that:

"Recognising that colonial racist land ownership patterns established during the colonial conquest of Zimbabwe and largely maintained in the post independence period were not only unsustainable, but against the national interest, equity and justice.

"Accepting the irreversibility of the said land acquisitions and redistribution.

"Noting that in the current constitution of Zimbabwe and further in the draft constitution agreed to by the parties the primary obligation of compensating former land owners for land acquired rests on the former colonial power.

"The parties hereby agree to:

- conduct a comprehensive, transparent and non-partisan land audit, during the tenure of the seventh parliament of Zimbabwe, for the purpose of establishing accountability and eliminating multiple farm ownerships;

- call upon the United Kingdom government to accept the primary responsibility to pay compensation for land acquired from former land owners for resettlement.” (BBC News, 15 September 2008) [3aw]

28.04 However, in spite of the joint statement of intent, and the subsequent formation of the unity government, sources continued to report the invasion and seizure of farms. (Africa Research Bulletin (ARB), Volume 46 Number 4, dated 1st-30th April 2009) [76b] (17946) (States in Transition Observatory, April 2009) [9a] (p4-5)

Also see Ethnic Minorities: Whites

Recent Land Confiscations

28.05 The Africa Research Bulletin (ARB), Volume 46 Number 4, dated 1st-30th April 2009, reported that despite the SADC Tribunal ruling in 2008 and the Bilateral Investment Protection Agreement (BIPA) between Zimbabwe and France, farm invasions continued.

“Mere days after a ministerial delegation, led by Deputy Prime Minister Mutambara, visited the Chegutu farming community, which has been worst hit by the countrywide wave of farm attacks, the community was hit by fresh violence. Mutambara had ordered that all invasions cease, and that the farmers be allowed to carry on their farming activities. But the orders have been openly flouted, with invasions in the Chegutu farming area escalating. A number of farms have been invaded and locked down, preventing the owners from accessing their property. Workers are viciously beaten and, if they escape, are in hiding. ...

“More than 100 commercial farmers are facing trumped up charges. No effort is being made by the police to stop the illegal takeovers, and in most cases the police have been wholly supportive of the sometimes-violent activities.”

The report went on to note that ZANU-F Senator, Jamaya Muduvuri led an attack on Twyford Farm on 22nd April 2009. [76b] (17946)

28.06 The The Institute for the Democratic Alternative for South Africa’s group, States in Transition Observatory, noted in a report, Zimbabwe Government of National Unity Watch (SITO Report) April 2009 that: “White owned farm invasions led by ZANU-PF supporters continue despite calls from Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai for an immediate end to the attacks. President Robert Mugabe continues to condone the invasions across the country, saying that the land reform will proceed despite the GPA [Global Political Agreement].” The fresh wave of farm invasions is likely to cause a further drop in maize (the country’s staple crop) production by up to 5 per cent. [9a] (p4-5)

28.07 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that: “Continuing efforts by ZANU-PF supporters to displace the few hundred remaining white farmers ...” is having a negative impact on the MDC’s authority while also exacerbating the continuing food crisis. [100a] (p9)

28.08 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

“Disruptions at farms and seizures of property increased and were sometimes violent. Under a government moratorium introduced in January 2007, farmers were given temporary extensions to continue growing crops and to allow for a gradual ‘wind down’ of operations, including harvesting and selling crops. The government in almost all cases took no action to define the period of extension. ...

“In December 2007 the Southern African Development Community (SADC) Tribunal in Namibia, in its first decision since its establishment in 2000, ruled in favor of Michael Campbell, who was contesting the compulsory government acquisition of his farm. The tribunal was set up to ensure that SADC member states, including Zimbabwe, adhere to the SADC treaty and protocols, protect the rights of citizens, and ensure the rule of law. According to the protocol establishing the tribunal, a person can bring a case after exhausting all available remedies or when unable to proceed under domestic jurisdiction. Campbell brought the case to the tribunal after the Supreme Court in Zimbabwe failed to issue a judgment on the case. The tribunal issued an interim protective order, which prohibited the government from evicting or allowing the eviction of or interference with the farm, its owners, employees, or property pending a decision by the tribunal on the issue of the legality of the contested expropriation; government representatives told the three-member tribunal it would abide by the decision.

“However, on January 22, the Supreme Court issued a judgment dismissing the Campbell case. Soon after the ruling, Minister Mutasa declared that the country would only be bound by its laws and decisions of its superior courts.

“In April the SADC tribunal ruled that more than 70 white farmers who had been evicted from their land could remain on their property pending a hearing on their joint application on May 28; their cases effectively joined the Campbell case that was still pending before the tribunal. On June 29, a group of 20 war veterans abducted and assaulted Michael Campbell and members of his family; they were hospitalized for their injuries. The perpetrators also looted the Campbell home and stole their car. On July 18, the tribunal reaffirmed the injunction, condemning the government's recent land seizures, and turning the issue over to the SADC summit for further action. However, the government asserted that it would move forward with prosecutions of the farmers who remained on the land, effectively dismissing the tribunal's authority.

“On November 28, the SADC tribunal ruled in favor of the 79 farmers in the Campbell case, finding that by barring titleholders from being heard in Zimbabwe's courts, the government violated its undertaking to SADC to uphold the rule of law; the farmers were discriminated against on the basis of race; and the government should compensate three dispossessed landowners by June 30, 2009. Although the tribunal ordered Zimbabwe not to interfere with any applicant still on his or her land or in possession of it when applying for relief, in December the government continued prosecutions of farmers for remaining on state-confiscated farms.” [2b] (Section 1f)

- 28.09 An article published in The Times on 1 June 2009 reported that the opinion of one white farmer, Ben Freeth, who stated his belief that inauguration of the unity government had hastened the demise of white farms. “There is a rush to clear farms of the last white people so that Mugabe can put his men on to the land to control and terrorise the people when the next election comes.” [82b]

- 28.10 In spite of ZANU-PFs and the MDCs power sharing agreement that contained a joint statement of intent on the land issue, it was reported on 25 September 2008 that: "State security agents and former liberation heroes have launched fresh farm invasions and are dispossessing the few remaining white commercial farmers in Zimbabwe. 'Things have progressively gotten worse. There are lots of new offer letters being given out and lots of new invasions. Houses are being broken into by new settlers. The worst affected areas are Manicaland, Masvingo and Mashonaland East, West and Central,' said Commercial farmers Union (CFU) President, Trevor Gifford." (RadioVOP, 25 September 2008) [28a]
- 28.11 ZimOnline reported on 29 September 2008 that: "At least 35 white farmers have been evicted from properties in a fresh wave of farm invasions that highlights continuing instability in Zimbabwe despite a power-sharing deal signed two weeks ago." A spokesman for the Commercial Farmers Union reported that "Things have progressively got worse. There are lots of new invasions. Houses are being broken into by new settlers." Police are reported to have refused to act to prevent or arrest invaders. [49c]
- 28.12 The Scotsman reported on 9 April 2008 that:
- "Gangs of ruling-party supporters have also invaded at least 60 white farms since the weekend, union officials say.
- "The gangs are being transported, they're armed with sticks and machetes, they're giving farmers anywhere between one hour and ten hours to leave,' said Trevor Gifford, the president of the Commercial Farmers' Union. Only about 450 white farmers remain. He said two farms belonging to black farmers had also been seized." [98a]

For recent developments on land reform/evictions see Latest news

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

FOOD SHORTAGES

- 28.13 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that:
- "The food situation remains dire, with some seven million people reportedly having required aid to survive in recent months and humanitarian agencies forced to halve cereal rations to extend stocks due to donor shortfalls. While formerly empty shelves have started to fill again since the currency reform, the number of shoppers with access to foreign currency remains limited, and many basic goods are still out of reach of the poor. Most households have reportedly reduced the frequency of meals, while 12 per cent go entire days without eating. The government estimates that two million tons of maize and some 500,000 tons of wheat per year are required to feed the population, and only about one-fifth of the requirements are on hand. ZANU-PF is believed to still divert food and distribute it on a partisan rather than strict need basis." [100a] (Overview & p9)

- 28.14 Human Rights Watch reported on 22 January 2009 that Zimbabwe is suffering from the worst "... food shortages since 2000 when the Mugabe government embarked on a violent and illegal program of land seizures. ... Food output in Zimbabwe has deteriorated drastically in the past year. The UN World Food Program (WFP) estimates that maize production in 2008 was ... 28 percent below 2007's historically low level." In addition Hyper-inflation "... has eroded the capacity of families to access the little food available on the market, an especially acute problem for people living in urban areas with no access to land." [69g] (p10 - 11)
- 28.15 The World Food Programme (WFP) reported on 30 January 2009 that it was expecting to provide food "... assistance to 5.1 million people across Zimbabwe in February – the highest number of people in a single month since the regional crisis began in 2002." However, because of increased demand and low stocks of food, the WFP stated that it would be reducing rations so that all who required help would receive assistance. It also noted that "... three US sponsored NGOs that also distribute food assistance in Zimbabwe – will assist another 1.8 million beneficiaries – taking the total of planned beneficiaries to around 7 million in both February and March 2009 ..." nearly 60 per cent of the population. [7a]
- 28.16 The World Food Programme (WFP) noted in its 'Food Security: Overview' for Zimbabwe (updated 2008), that: "Food insecurity in Zimbabwe is a result of several factors, including a succession of small harvests, some poor agricultural policies and a declining economy, characterised by hyper-inflation, high unemployment and a rapidly depreciating currency. This is further compounded by the high HIV/AIDS prevalence rate, which has contributed to increasing levels of vulnerability." [54b] (p1)
- 28.17 Human Rights Watch reported on 22 January 2009 that:
- "Zimbabwe has suffered from food shortages since 2000 when the Mugabe government embarked on a violent and illegal program of land seizures. An estimated 5.1 million Zimbabweans - half the population - are expected to need food aid in 2009. Food output in Zimbabwe has deteriorated drastically in the past year. The UN World Food Program (WFP) estimates that maize production in 2008 was 575,000 metric tons – 28 percent below 2007's historically low level. Maize is Zimbabwe's staple but many villagers interviewed by Human Rights Watch in Mashonaland East, West, Masvingo, Midlands and Manicaland provinces said that they were either living on one meal of sadza (maize meal) a day or on wild fruit. ...As a result of severe food shortages, levels of chronic malnutrition among children under age five have increased, so that 28 percent are chronically malnourished. Hyper-inflation ... has eroded the capacity of families to access the little food available on the market, an especially acute problem for people living in urban areas with no access to land. Maize remains unavailable in most shops. Where it is available on the black market, it is pegged to the US dollar, pricing it out of reach for the average Zimbabwean household. When Human Rights Watch researchers visited Zimbabwe in November the price of a 20 kilogram bucket of maize meal was US$20, unaffordable for most people. Only 6 percent of Zimbabweans are employed in the formal sector. Teachers, for example, earn an average of US$4 per month." [69g] (p10 - 11)

- 28.18 During and after the election in March 2008, Human Rights Watch reported that food remained an overtly political subject, with food being seized and distributed on grounds of political affiliation.
- “... ZANU-PF sponsored ‘youth militia’ and ‘war veterans,’ state security forces, and supporters systematically killed livestock, and destroyed and plundered the homes and food granaries (reserves) of thousands of suspected MDC activists and supporters in order to ensure their displacement and inability to vote. An estimated 36,000 Zimbabweans were displaced by the violence and left in need of food, water, and shelter. Looted food was given to soldiers, youth militia, and ZANU-PF supporters at camps that had been set up throughout the country and used to beat and torture MDC supporters.” (Human Rights Watch, ‘Crisis without Limits: Human Rights and Humanitarian Consequences of Political Repression in Zimbabwe’, 22 January 2009) [69g] (p11)
- 28.19 Between June and September 2008 the Government suspended NGOs operating in Zimbabwe. “The suspension limited the ability of humanitarian agencies to determine the true extent of the food crisis, and assess the future needs of the population. It obliged them to delay responding to the food crisis until after the authorities lifted the formal ban ...” (Human Rights Watch, ‘Crisis without Limits: Human Rights and Humanitarian Consequences of Political Repression in Zimbabwe’, 22 January 2009) [69g] (p21)
- 28.20 The Los Angeles Times reported on 26 September 2008 that political bias in the distribution of food had continued well after the general election in March 2008. The article reported a senior member of Zimbabwe’s Grain Marketing Board (anonymously) admitting that “... right down to the district level, food distributions, the only source of maize, had been run by the army, the Central Intelligence Organization, the police and the district administrator. It was more like a campaign tool. Those who were actually supporting the opposition were getting nothing because the CIO wanted to give the grain directly to their supporters ...” [66b]
- 28.21 On the 29 January 2009 the BBC reported that “... the World Food Programme (WFP) has revised up the number of people it says need food aid. It now says seven million Zimbabweans are in need of food aid, up from 5.1 million in June. ... The agency is being forced to halve the cereal rations given to hungry Zimbabweans so that all the people in need can receive aid.” [3p]
- 28.22 USAID reported in its Zimbabwe Food Security Outlook, October 2008 to March 2009, that:
- “Supplies of basic goods on the formal market have remained critical, and the parallel market has remained the major source for most basic commodities, though prices at this market are beyond reach of the majority. Remittances from within the country and the Diaspora have been helping the situation somewhat. The sale of some basic commodities in foreign currency seem to only benefit a very small proportion of the population, as the majority of the populace does not have access to foreign currency. [80a]
- 28.23 The Institute for War and Peace Reporting noted on 15 July 2008 that “The food situation in Zimbabwe’s arid southern province of Masvingo has reached crisis point, with many families unable to access even basic foodstuffs.” Food shortages have led to high mortality rates of those suffering with HIV/AIDS with the report noting "...an upsurge in HIV/AIDS-related deaths... creating increasing numbers of orphans. Many people are returning from the cities to die at home in their villages. ...Aid agencies used to distribute high-protein, high-energy foods which kept opportunistic diseases at bay. Without those foods, people quickly succumb to illnesses," he said. AIDS orphans and the elderly are the most vulnerable groups." [77d]

- 28.24 Following the announcement that an agreement had been reached on forming a government of national unity, the Norwegian Government stated that "... it would give Zimbabwe 40 million kroner (7.02 million dollars, 4.86 million euros) in aid to help the country deal with a lack of food and clean drinking water ..." However, the Norwegians appeared to tie any aid to demands that there was "an end to ... political violence," demilitarisation and the re-introduction of "freedom of the press and association". (africasia, 19 September 2008) [40c] The BBC noted on 17 September 2008 that major western governments are refusing, until the situation is clearer, to "... deliver the major economic rescue plan that is waiting in the wings. Instead, they will try to get a quick agreement for humanitarian aid to counter what they regard as creeping starvation in the country." [3z]
- 28.25 After the Government's decision on 29 August 2008 to lift its ban on aid agencies distributing food (Economist Intelligence Unit, September 2008) [24k] (p11) the International Red Cross was reported to be stepping "... up its distribution of emergency food supplies to Zimbabwe. Trucks carrying some 383 tonnes of aid for 24,000 people travelled through the night after loading supplies in Harare, Bulawayo and Mutare." A spokesman for the Red Cross described the situation as "critical" with up to five million people (around half the population of the country) possibly in need of food assistance. (BBC News, 18 September 2008) [3b]
- 28.26 The United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) reported on 18 September 2008 that it was "... moving quickly to provide assistance to the large needy groups in Zimbabwe ... Already, NGOs and UN agencies are re-establishing operations to provide basic life-saving assistance and expect to reach nearly three million people across the country by October." [51a]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

POLITICISATION OF FOOD

- 28.27 The International Crisis Group (ICG) reported on 20 April 2009, that: "ZANU-PF is believed to still divert food and distribute it on a partisan rather than strict need basis." [100a] (p9)
- 28.28 Political bias continued to be a major issue in Zimbabwe. Amnesty International reported that political affiliation often dictated the treatment an individual received. (Annual Report, 7 August 2008) [14d] Bias in the distribution of food continued in 2008 with food distributions being run by the "... army, the Central Intelligence Organization, the police and district administrators. ... Those who were actually supporting the opposition were getting nothing because the CIO wanted to give ... grain directly to ...

supporters ...” (Los Angeles Times, 26 September 2008) [66b] Kubatana.net reported on 28 July 2005 that following Operation Murambatsvina, many people were moved out of the cities and were returned to their province of origin. On arrival, “They were taken to the Sabhuku (sub-chief), where they were more often than not asked for their ZANU-PF party card...” without which they were denied help and expelled into the wilderness. [55g] (p3) A recent report from ZimOnline, noted on 14 May 2007, that the renewed crackdown on the MDC has led to the deployment of CIO agents in southern, opposition supporting regions, of Zimbabwe. CIO agents were reported to have ordered village chiefs and headmen to compile lists of villagers who support and campaign for the opposition. Demands for these lists were accompanied with threats that individuals who continued to participate in supporting the MDC could be killed. [49bq]

28.29 Amnesty International reported on 6 June 2008, that:

“The government of Zimbabwe has banned field operations by non-governmental organisations (NGOs) in the country. Amnesty International has accused the government of using food for political ends and called on them to immediately lift the ban.

“The suspension of field operations by all NGOs on the order of the Zimbabwean government is likely to increase food insecurity in Zimbabwe and expose millions of people to hunger’, said Amnesty International. The suspension is yet another attempt by the government to manipulate food distribution for political ends. Suspension of humanitarian operations by NGOs ensures that the government has a monopoly over food distribution through the state-controlled Grain Marketing Board (GMB) during the pre-election period.

“Without giving specific reasons for his action, the Zimbabwean Minister of Public Service, Labour and Social Welfare, Nicholas Goche, wrote to all private voluntary organisations and NGOs on 4 June 2008, instructing them to stop their operations. The Minister gave his intention to invoke Section (10), Subsection (c), of the Private Voluntary Organisations Act [Chapter 17:05] as the basis for his action.” [14o]

28.30 The Institute for War and Peace Reporting noted on 15 July 2008 that:

“Since the aid agencies stopped distributing food, the state-controlled Grain Marketing Board, GMB, has been the only source of the staple maize meal. But GMB outlets on the ground are unable to meet the demand, and Masvingo residents say that what maize meal is available it is directed only to those with close ties to the ruling ZANU-PF party. ...

“A miller in Chivi, the most arid district in the province, described how government officials slanted food distribution towards regime supporters.

“Licensed millers purchase South African meal from the GMB at the Beitbridge border post, and then have to take what they have bought to the office of the District Administrator or DA, a government agent who records each consignment. The DA invites village heads and ward councillors to submit the names of residents who need the maize meal. These grassroots-level officials decide who should be awarded the meal, and either accept or refuse money from applicants accordingly. The DA then authorises the sale based on the list of names provided, and only at that point can millers release the maize meal.

“The system is fraught with corruption,’ said the miller, who did not want to be named. “The headman and the councillors alert only their relatives and friends of the availability of the meal, and those who oppose them or the [ZANU-PF] party never appear on the lists taken to the DA.” [77d]

- 28.31 A staff member working for the UK’s Embassy in Harare, confirmed on 10 June 2008, that food was being used to coerce hungry Zimbabweans to vote for the ruling party (Foreign and Commonwealth Office blog, 10 June 2008) and that ruling party supporters were exacting revenge against those suspected of having helped the MDC gain its parliamentary victory on 29th March. (Foreign and Commonwealth Office blog, 18 July 2008) [13n]
- 28.32 Human Rights Watch reported on 12 August 2008 that “...government restrictions on the distribution of humanitarian assistance including food aid...” remained in place. The report went on to note that: “In the past the government has used food aid as a political weapon to discriminate against opposition supporters. The current suspension points to continuing attempts by the government to control the distribution of humanitarian assistance and deny it to perceived supporters of the MDC.” [69a] (p3)
- 28.33 In previous reports (25 July 2007), Amnesty International had documented “...the political manipulation of food aid, noting that food aid was often withheld from those who did not hold a ZANU-PF loyalty card, and was used in attempts to influence election results. In 2007 Amnesty International found that the manipulation of food distribution persists, particularly of GMB maize sold in rural areas.” [14e] This was confirmed by the publication of the Zimbabwe Peace Project’s ‘Food Monitoring Report’ that found that the vast majority of victims of politicised food aid were MDC supporters (around 70 per cent) although there were instances of ZANU-PF supporters being denied food. The report noted that:
- “The major findings emanating from this report are that cases of discrimination on political party affiliation and participation in NGO activities abound in the food distribution process. In all provinces, distribution of food and seed from the Grain Marketing Board was the most polarised aid. Traditional leaders, councillors and community food committees mostly recommended by Zanu PF leaders orchestrated the removal of non-ruling party members from the list of beneficiaries. Beneficiaries were expected to chant ruling party slogans and to produce party affiliation cards before receiving food.” (Zimbabwe Peace Project, September 2007) [95a] (p4)
- 28.34 The Association of Zimbabwe Journalists reported on 8 June 2007 that the Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO) had deployed operatives to the MDC supporting region of Matabeleland South to monitor the activities of NGOs distributing food there. CIO officers were reported to be operating under the cover of various jobs and to have even infiltrated some NGOs. “Government is reportedly concerned that NGOs will meddle in politics and use food aid as a way of turning the people against ZANU-PF and government.” [50f]
- 28.35 The Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) reported in the Zimbabwe Country Report, dated September 2008, that the government’s altered its position on the distribution of food by non-governmental agencies when it announced on 29 August 2008 that it was lifting its earlier ban. The report noted that: “Many aid officials said that the food ban had exacerbated the serious hunger across the rural areas, where more than 65% of Zimbabwe’s 13m people live. Although the ban has now been lifted, the UN World Food Programme (WFP) said that it would take several months to get food delivery personnel back in operation.” [24k] (p11)

- 28.36 As the first (unconfirmed) reports of deaths from starvation began to emerge, The Telegraph suggested on 23 September 2008, that one of the reasons why there may be deadlock in the allocation of ministries is because ZANU-PF do not want to give-up control of ministries that are responsible for distributing food. One senior western diplomat is reported to have said that: “ZANU-PF knows the man who delivers food in this country is king...” [5m]

For recent developments on food security and food aid see Latest news

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

29. FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT

- 29.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that, although the constitution provides for the freedom of movement and travel within and outside Zimbabwe, the Government restricts these rights in practice. The report continued:

“The constitution and law provide for freedom of movement within the country and foreign travel; however, the government restricted freedom of movement, foreign travel, and the rights of IDPs in practice. The government generally cooperated with the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and other humanitarian organizations in providing assistance to refugees and asylum seekers, but interfered with humanitarian efforts directed at IDPs.

“During the year police continued to routinely erect roadblocks staffed with armed police in and around cities and rural districts, especially during election periods and before demonstrations and opposition meetings. In the inter-election period, in particular, security forces were deployed to strengthen roadblocks and border security. Security forces claimed that they were looking for criminals, smuggled goods, and food; however, in many cases, police arbitrarily seized goods for their own consumption.” [2b] (Section 2d)

- 29.02 Human Rights Watch reported on 9 June 2008 that following ZANU-PF’s poor showing at the 29 March elections, its supporters had created ‘no-go’ areas across the country as party activists punish voters for voting for the MDC. The report noted: “ZANU-PF supporters and ‘war veterans’ have created ‘no-go areas’ across broad swathes of the countryside in the provinces of Mashonaland East, Mashonaland West and Mashonaland Central to prevent victims from leaving the provinces, and to prevent foreign journalists and local human rights organisations from reporting on the violence. They have placed barricades across roads leading to villages hit by the violence making the areas inaccessible.” A direct result of this has been that thousands of people are unable to flee the violence. [69e] (p39)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

30. INTERNALLY DISPLACED PEOPLE (IDPs)

- 30.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that:

“According to independent assessments, hundreds of thousands of persons remain displaced within the country as a result of government policies including state-sponsored election-related violence, land reform, and Operation Murambatsvina in 2005. Eight percent of citizens surveyed in mid-2007 said they had moved in the last five years because they were ‘asked to move.’ Nevertheless, the government denies an IDP problem exists. The government does not tolerate use of the phrase ‘internally displaced people’ and instead refers to ‘mobile and vulnerable populations’ (MVPs). The government’s campaign of forced evictions and the demolition of homes and businesses continued during the year.” [2b] (Section 2d)

- 30.02 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office noted in its annual human rights report, published on 26 March 2009, that:

“More than 36,000 were internally displaced in Zimbabwe during the election campaign of 2008. Farm invasions and takeovers, which affect the rights of thousands of farm workers as well as the owners, have continued throughout the year, becoming more frequent during and since the election period. In November, 120 households were ordered to demolish their ‘illegal homes in Victoria Falls.” [13a] (Displacements)

- 30.03 The USSD 2008 reported that:

“The government did not provide assistance to IDPs, established an NGO ban that forbid humanitarian agencies from assisting IDPs or conducting surveys to assess the scope of the problem, and refused to acknowledge that its policies had caused internal displacement. In August [2008], when violence levels in rural areas declined in the wake of political talks, many IDPs returned to or near their homes and were ‘fined’ in food, animals, or money by local ZANU-PF militias.” [2b] (Section 2d)

- 30.04 A report by the Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre, published on 20

- 30.05 The United States Agency for International Development noted in a report dated 15 July 2008 that violence since the elections (held on 29 March and 27 June 2008) has “...forced tens of thousands of Zimbabweans to flee their homes and villages. Most of these internally displaced persons (IDPs) have found temporary shelter with relatives and friends in towns and cities. Some IDPs have sought refuge in so-called ‘safe areas’, supposedly protected by negotiated security arrangements with government and United Nations (UN) agencies. However, state-sponsored militias are now even attacking these ‘safe havens’, sending victims running for their lives once again. With no one to turn to and no place to go, many Zimbabweans are opting to join millions of their countrymen who have fled to an uncertain fate in neighboring lands.” [84a]

- 30.06 Amnesty International stated that, “tens of thousands” have been displaced over the few months before July 2008. (25 July 2008) [14f]

Operation Murambatsvina

- 30.07 On 18 July 2005, the United Nations (UN) published the findings of its fact-finding mission to Zimbabwe which found that Operation Restore Order or Operation Murambatsvina (meaning, “drive out rubbish”) began on 19 May 2005. [25] (p7) International Crisis Group reported that: “Operation Murambatsvina (Restore Order) cost some 700,000 Zimbabweans their homes or livelihoods or both and otherwise affected nearly a fifth of the troubled country's population.” (Zimbabwe's Operation Murambatsvina: The Tipping Point? 17 August 2005) [100c]

Please see the March 2009 update of the Zimbabwe Country Report (<http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs09/zimbabwe-260309.doc>) for more information about Operation Murambatsvina.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

31. CITIZENSHIP AND NATIONALITY

- 31.01 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, stated that the Citizenship Act

“... requires all citizens with a claim to dual citizenship to have renounced their claim to foreign citizenship by January 2002 to retain their Zimbabwean citizenship. The act revokes the citizenship of persons who fail to return to the country in any five-year period. However, the High Court ruled in 2002 that this interpretation does not take into account the fact that a person is not automatically guaranteed foreign citizenship merely because their parents were born in a foreign country, as some countries require a person to confirm their citizenship, in which case they could be rendered stateless. It further held that it is incorrect to presume that when one has a parent or parents that are born out of the country they are citizens of the other country by descent. In addition, some countries, including in southern Africa, do not have a means to renounce citizenship. Independent groups estimate as many as two million citizens may have been disenfranchised by the law, including, those perceived to have opposition leanings, such as the more than 200,000 commercial farm workers from neighboring countries, and approximately 30,000 mostly white dual nationals.” [2b] (Section 2d)

- 31.02 However, correspondence from the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office dated 2 October 2006, noted that they had consulted a respected lawyer in Harare who was of the opinion that: “Only those who had acquired their citizenship by registration can be deprived of it after 5 years continuous absence outside the country.” i.e. categories of citizenship obtained through “...birth or descent, cannot be deprived of their citizenship regardless of how long they remain outside the country.” [13g]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

32. FORGED AND FRAUDULENTLY OBTAINED DOCUMENTS

Identification cards

32.01 CNN reported on 22 November 2001 that the National Registration Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act make it compulsory for people to carry a national ID card, a passport or a driver's licence. People stopped without these documents are liable to a fine or a term of imprisonment. [8a]

32.02 The Zimbabwean Ministry of Home Affairs website, accessed 16 June 2009, states that non-citizens of Zimbabwe can obtain a Zimbabwean ID Card on production of a passport and a residence permit which is 6 months old. [18a]

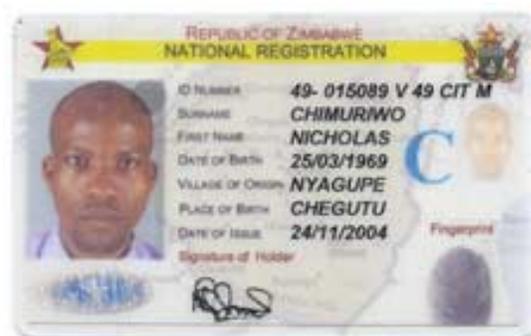

The following link contains information about birth, marriage, death certificates, and travel documents.

http://www.moha.gov.zw/index.php?link=rg_about

32.03 ZimOnline, dated 29 November 2006, noted that the Zimbabwe Registry Office had stopped issuing metal ID cards and had replaced them with plastic, but that they "...had now stopped issuing even the plastic cards ..." because of a lack of resources. [49a] A report published by the Zimbabwe Election Support Network, dated 15 November 2007, appeared to note that plastic ID cards were still not being issued – possibly as a result of a continuing lack of resources. [19a]

32.04 The Foreign and Commonwealth Office reported on the 20 April 2009 that the word Alien on ID cards indicates that the holder is not a citizen of Zimbabwe, but is a non-Zimbabwean national living in the country. [13c]

An example of a Zimbabwe ID Card

[18a]

FORGED AND FRAUDULENTLY OBTAINED DOCUMENTS

32.05 Sources stated that most official documentation was obtainable through fraudulent means. Genuine, official documents, could be obtained either by payment of bribes to corrupt officials (Institute for War and Peace Reporting, 1 June 2007) [77b] (The Herald, 17 April 2009) [23d], or through unofficial contacts on the black market. (The Herald, 21 March 2007) [23h]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

33. EXIT/ENTRY PROCEDURES

Treatment of returned failed asylum seekers

- 33.01 No recent information was found that identified any particular problems for returning failed asylum seekers. In recent months Morgan Tsvangirai has called on Zimbabweans to return to Zimbabwe to re-build the country. [40a] Zimbabweans who had sought asylum in South Africa were reported by one source to be returning home in increasing numbers. [22a]
- 33.02 Reliefweb reported on 19 March 2009 that: "Zimbabwean professionals, many of them teachers, are coming home and seeking readmission into the public service, in response to a move by the country's new inclusive government to pay civil servants in foreign currency and relax conditions for rejoining the sector. The influx is a response to calls from President Robert Mugabe and Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai for the more than three million exiles ... to return to Zimbabwe to help rebuild the country." The report went on to note that during February 2009 over 80,000 Zimbabweans returned to the country from South Africa with most of them holding South African asylum permits. [22a]
- 33.03 On 8th May 2009 Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai, encouraged exiled Zimbabweans at a meeting in South Africa, to move beyond political divisions and help in the rebuilding of the country. Mr Tsavangirai stated that while Mugabe and ZANU-PF had been part of the problem, they were also part of the solution and asked Zimbabweans in exile to be prepared to reconcile their differences so that the country could be rebuilt. [40a]

Morgan Tsvangirai has made further appeals for Zimbabweans to return to Zimbabwe – please see Latest News for details. Details about conditions at Harare Airport can be found at the section on the Central Intelligence Organisation.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

34. EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS

- 34.01 Freedom House reported in 'Freedom of Association Under Threat', dated 21 November 2008, that:

"The right to collective labor action is limited under the Labor Relations Amendment Act (LRAA), which allows the government to veto collective bargaining agreements that are deemed harmful to the economy. Although strikes are allowed in all but 'essential' industries, they require onerous notification and arbitration procedures and are often declared illegal. Managers in all sectors are prevented from striking. The 2005 Labor Amendment Act prevents public-sector employees from joining or forming unions or engaging in collective bargaining, though these restrictions are not enforced. All unions must register with the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare.

"The independent Zimbabwean Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU) has led resistance to Mugabe's rule and was a driving force behind the formation of the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC), the main opposition bloc. The ZCTU has consequently become a target for repression, and its members have been routinely harassed both inside and outside the workplace. In recent years, several hundred ZCTU members have been arrested at demonstrations and meetings, and in 2007, security forces raided ZCTU offices during a countrywide crackdown on the political opposition. The government has created a rival trade-union umbrella organization, the Zimbabwe Federation of Trade Unions, to try to undermine the ZCTU, sometimes using violent tactics."
[96d]

- 34.02 The US State Department Report on Human Rights Practices 2008 (USSD 2008), published on 25 February 2009, noted that:

"There is no national minimum wage except for agricultural and domestic workers. Government regulations for each of the 22 industrial sectors continued to specify minimum wages, hours, holidays, and required safety measures. The minimum wage did not provide a decent standard of living for a worker and family, and more than 85 percent of the population continued to live below the government's poverty line. The Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare is responsible for enforcing the minimum wage; however, monitoring systems were ineffective, and many agricultural and domestic workers were remunerated below the minimum wage. Minimum wages in the formal sector changed continuously as a result of the high inflation rate. During the year, the ILO reported that four of five jobs in the country were in the informal sector, 78 percent of which were in the agriculture. These jobs generally provided extremely low cash income and poor working conditions and did not offer adequate worker protections.

"The maximum legal workweek is 54 hours, and the law prescribes a minimum of one 24-hour rest period per week. No worker is allowed to work more than 12 continuous hours; however, there was little or no enforcement, particularly in the agricultural and domestic worker sectors. The law prescribes that workers receive not less than twice their standard remuneration for working on a public holiday. However, workers were unlikely to complain to authorities about violations due to fear of losing their jobs.

“The public service commission sets conditions of employment in the public sector. Health and safety standards were determined on an industry-specific basis. The government designated the Zimbabwe Occupational Safety Council, a quasi-governmental advisory body made up of six representatives each from the government, employers, and trade unions, to regulate safe work conditions; however, budgetary constraints and staffing shortages, as well as its status as an advisory council, made the council ineffective. The National Social Security Authority (NSSA) continued to experience difficulty monitoring the thousands of work sites across the country; however, it continued to close shops and factories not in compliance. The NSSA reported in 2007 that a high turnover in staff meant that only 20 of 31 safety and health inspector positions were filled to monitor an estimated 14,000 registered factories. In 2007 government media reported 64 workplace fatalities and 5,568 injuries through November. By year's end the government had not taken action to address health risks in the workplace. Workers have a legal right to remove themselves from dangerous work situations without jeopardy to continued employment but in practice risked the loss of their livelihood if they did so.” [2b] (Section 6e)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex A: Chronology of major events

- 1890 British Colony of Southern Rhodesia established; subsequent influx of White settlers, mainly from the United Kingdom and South Africa.
- 1953 Southern Rhodesia united with Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, also British territories, to form the Central African Federation (CAF).
- 1962 White voters in Southern Rhodesia vote into power the Rhodesia Front party, committed to maintaining White rule and achieving independence from the UK.
- 1963 The UK dissolves CAF; Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland granted independence by the UK under majority rule administrations, as Zambia and Malawi respectively.
- Black nationalist opposition splits and Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) led by Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole breaks away from Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU).
- 1965 Rhodesia Front Prime Minister, Ian Smith, makes illegal unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) for Southern Rhodesia from the UK, renaming the territory Rhodesia.
- 1976 ZAPU and ZANU combine their military efforts in the Patriotic Front (PF) alliance
- 1979 Ian Smith's administration concludes an 'internal settlement' with some Black nationalists; Bishop Abel Muzorewa becomes first Black Prime Minister of 'Zimbabwe-Rhodesia'.
December: Lancaster House constitutional conference in London, attended by all parties including the PF produces independence settlement for Rhodesia; Whites to be guaranteed 20 seats in new 100-seat parliament.
- 1980 February: Robert Mugabe's ZANU-PF party wins 57 out of 80 'common roll' seats and Nkomo's PF (ZAPU) wins 20 seats; Bishop Muzorewa's UANC party wins only three seats and Rhodesia Front wins all 20 seats reserved for Whites April: Independence of Zimbabwe – Robert Mugabe of ZANU-PF becomes Prime Minister and Reverend Canaan Banana becomes President, with ceremonial duties only.
- 1982-87 Insurgency in Matabeleland; Government sends mainly Shona Fifth Brigade to quell dissent – thousands killed during Gukurahundi pacification campaign, causing resentment of Government by the Ndebele.
- 1987 Reconciliation between ZANU-PF and ZAPU ends Matabeleland conflict; ZANU-PF and ZAPU merge, keeping ZANU-PF name; reserved seats for Whites abolished; Prime Minister Mugabe becomes executive President.
- 1988 Amnesty proclaimed in Matabeleland, leading to rapid improvement in security; Edgar Tekere expelled from ZANU-PF for persistent denunciation of party leadership and policies.

- 1989 Edgar Tekere founds Zimbabwe Unity Movement (ZUM) in opposition to ZANU-PF.
- 1990 March: Mugabe wins Presidential election, polling 2.03 million votes against ZUM's Edgar Tekere's 413,840; ZANU-PF wins 117 of the 120 contested seats in parliamentary elections, with ZUM taking 20% of the vote and two seats.
- 1990 August: Joshua Nkomo becomes Vice-President, in addition to existing Vice-President Simon Muzenda.
- 1994 ZUM merges with Bishop Muzorewa's UANC; Muzorewa forms United Parties grouping later in year.
- 1995 April: ZANU-PF wins decisive victory in general elections, although eight opposition parties boycott polls – ZANU-PF takes 118 seats and Sithole's ZANU-Ndonga two.
October: Sithole charged with conspiracy to assassinate Mugabe.
- 1996 March: Mugabe wins Presidential elections with nearly 93 per cent of the vote, but turnout less than 32 per cent.
- 1997 July: Criminal charges brought against former President Canaan Banana for alleged sexual assault against a former male employee.
December: Sithole found guilty of plotting to kill Mugabe and sentenced to two years' imprisonment, but released on bail pending appeal.
- 1998 November: Banana convicted on 11 charges of sexual assault, sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in 1/1999 – most of the sentence suspended but Banana to serve a minimum one-year in prison.
- 1999 July: Vice-President Joshua Nkomo dies.
September: Movement for Democratic Change formed.
- 2000 Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole, leader of ZANU-Ndonga, dies
May: Former President Canaan Banana ordered to serve a year in prison for sexually assaulting a male bodyguard.
June: MDC wins 57 of 120 directly-elected seats in parliamentary elections marred by a violent campaign, perpetrated mainly by Government supporters against the opposition MDC and white farmers that leaves 37 people dead November: ZANU-PF holds Marondera West in by-election.
- 2001 January: ZANU-PF wins Bikita West in by-election from MDC; campaign marred by violence.
January: Canaan Banana reportedly released from prison.
April: June 2000 election results in Buzura North, in which ZANU-PF's candidate was declared the winner over MDC leader Morgan Tsvangirai, and in Hurungwe East nullified by High Court; by-elections pending.
July: ZANU-PF holds Bindura in by-election with increased majority; violent campaign and MDC candidate detained by police.
September: MDC wins Bulawayo mayoral elections with landslide majority; ZANU-PF holds Makoni West and Chikomba parliamentary seats in by-elections with increased majority – results emphasise rural-urban political divide.

- 2002 March: President Mugabe re-elected President for six-year term in controversial election following a violent campaign; EU and USA apply selected sanctions against the Zimbabwean Government and officials.
March: Zimbabwe suspended from Commonwealth for one year because of election fraud and violence.
March: Introduction of the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act.
September: Local council elections. Won by ZANU-PF after a campaign. condemned by rights groups.
September: ZANU-PF are also victorious in the Hurungwe West by-election, but similar criticisms are levelled at the ruling party.
October: Learnmore Jongwe, MDC MP and spokesperson dies in Harare prison.
October: Last of Zimbabwe's troops are withdrawn from DRC.
- 2003 February: The trial of Tsvangirai, Ncube and Gasela starts. They are charged with plotting to assassinate Mugabe.
March: Commonwealth continues sanctions until a reassessment takes place in December 2003.
March: National stayaway organised by the MDC. Deemed a success, which brought violent reprisals from the state and its agents.
March: By-elections in Kuwadzana and Highfields. Both won by the MDC.
April: ZCTU strike over massive rises in the price of fuel.
June: Mass action organised by the MDC. The stayaway from work was widely observed, though no evidence of the mass demonstrations that were planned. Again, this resulted in a swift and violent response from the state and its agents.
June: Tsvangirai charge with treason. This means Tsvangirai has two charges of treason outstanding against him.
August: Council and Mayoral elections throughout much of Zimbabwe. Also, by-elections in Makonde and Harare Central. ZANU-PF hold rural Makonde, and MDC hold the urban seat of Harare Central.
September: Simon Muzenda, one of Zimbabwe's two vice presidents, dies.
November: Kadoma by-election. ZANU-PF win the seat from the MDC.
- 2004 January: Tsvangirai takes the stand at his treason trial.
February: ZANU-PF retain the seat of former Vice-President Muzenda in the Gutu North by-election.
February: Tsvangirai trial ends on 24 February 2004. The judgement was scheduled to be handed down on 29 July 2004, but was subsequently postponed indefinitely.
February: Cabinet reshuffle.
March: ZANU-PF win the Kadoma by-election.
May: ZANU-PF win Lupane by-election by 883 votes amid evidence that election was rigged.
May: Government announce expecting bumper harvest and therefore food aid will not be required. Widely perceived to be untrue and that government planned to use food as a political weapon in 2005 parliamentary elections.
July: Verdict in Tsvangirai trial postponed indefinitely when two lay assessors insisted they be fully consulted by trial judge.
July: Tsvangirai subject of assassination attempt.

July: Executive summary of Southern Africa Development Council report on human rights in Zimbabwe published.

August: MDC announce boycotting all elections until electoral reforms in place.

August: Government published bill to restrict operation of human rights NGOs.

August: The Non-Governmental Organisations Bill (NGO Bill), requiring the registration of all NGOs and also restricting the activities of NGOs, approved by parliament.

September: ZANU-PF recapture Seke constituency following the MDC's earlier decision to boycott all elections.

October: Morgan Tsvangirai acquitted on two charges of treason. The acquittal was delivered by the High Court on 15 October.

October: ZANU-PF retains Masvingo constituency. The by-election was called following the death of Eddison Zvogbo, a founding member of ZANU-PF.

November: Zimbabwe Supreme Court rules that the law used to seize white-owned farms is 'legal'.

December: Former Minister of Information, Jonathan Moyo, suggests that failed asylum seekers sent back by the UK could be undercover mercenaries or agents of regime change. Minister of Justice, Patrick Chinamasa says that returned asylum seekers would be welcomed back.

- 2005
- January: South Africa's ruling African National Congress (ANC) and its alliance partners concluded that conditions were not believed to be "conducive" to holding "free and fair elections" in Zimbabwe in March.
- January: Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) announces that they intend to undertake a pre-election fact-finding mission to Zimbabwe. On arrival, the 20-member team is refused entry by immigration officials at Harare's international airport.
- February: President Mugabe announces that the 2005 parliamentary elections will take place on 31 March; he promises to abide by SADC guidelines.
- February: President Mugabe announces that war veterans and traditional chiefs would receive pay increases of 1,400 per cent.
- February: MDC announce that they will participate in the March 31st parliamentary elections.
- 31 March: After a relatively peaceful election campaign, ZANU-PF wins two-thirds of the votes in the parliamentary elections. MDC and International community condemn the election as rigged. South Africa and other African states hail the election as free and fair.
- May: Operation Murambatsvina – Tens of thousands of shanty dwellings and illegal street stalls are destroyed as part of a "clean up" programme.
- July: The UN send a fact-finding mission to Zimbabwe to report on Operation Murambatsvina, the subsequent report estimates that the clear-up operation has left about 700,000 people homeless. Access to food and medical treatment for those who have been evicted is described as precarious.
- 28 July: Vice President, Joyce Mujuru announces that "Operation Murambatsvina is now complete".
- 2 August: Prosecutors drop remaining treason charges against opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai.
- 13 August: Three weeks after the official cessation of Operation Murambatsvina, the US ambassador to the United Nations food agencies claimed that people who had been caught up in Operation Murambatsvina were dying of hunger.

August: Constitutional Amendment Bill passed by parliament. The proposed Bill will reintroduce a second parliamentary chamber (Senate) and fast track all future land seizures removing a landowners' right to appeal to the courts. The Bill will also allow the government to prevent Zimbabweans from leaving the country; commentators believe that this will be used to confiscate opposition members' passports.

November: MDC leader Morgan Tsvangirai declared a boycott of the Senate elections scheduled for the end of November. The pro-senate wing of the MDC, led by MDC secretary general Welshman Ncube, responded that Mr Tsvangirai did not have the authority to make such a decision - and a group of 26 MDC members registered their candidacy for the elections in defiance of the party leader. The rift in the party escalates as the two factions exchanged, through the media, increasingly harsh words.

27 November: Ruling Zanu-PF party wins an overwhelming majority of seats in a newly-created upper house of parliament, the Senate. The opposition MDC splits over its leader's decision to boycott the poll.

December: After a four-day visit, UN humanitarian chief Jan Egeland says Zimbabwe is in "meltdown".

9 December: The Zimbabwean government announced that the country's annual inflation rate rose to 502.4 per cent in November.

2006 January: Zimbabwean judge Benjamin Paradza, due to be sentenced by the High Court for corruption, was reported to have 'gone missing'. Mr Paradza, who faces three years in prison or a fine, claims that he was being targeted for delivering judgements that were not in favour of the government. Mr Paradza is seen by many as the last truly independent judge in Zimbabwe.

February: Arthur Mutambara is elected president of the pro-senate faction of the MDC.

22 February: Robert Mugabe celebrates his 82nd birthday.

March: IMF maintains Zimbabwe sanctions. The IMF postponed a decision to expel Zimbabwe after it repays $120m of its debt to the Fund and pledged to clear the rest by November 2006. The IMF stated it will review its relation with Zimbabwe in September.

10 March: Zimbabwe's inflation hits a record high of 782 per cent.

May: Year-on-year inflation exceeds 1,000 per cent.

June: Information and Publicity Minister, Tichaona Jokonya, died on the 24 June after collapsing in a bath tub following kidney dialysis treatment.

July: Opposition MP Trudy Stephenson (pro-senate faction) attacked by MDC supporters loyal to Morgan Tsvangirai. A report published by Morgan Tsvangirai's faction of the MDC claims that the CIO was responsible for the attack.

August: As a result of spiralling inflation, new banknotes, with three noughts deleted from their values, are introduced; inflation exceeds 1,204 per cent, a report from the International Monetary Fund states that it expects inflation to exceed 4,200 per cent in 2007.

September: Riot police disrupt a planned demonstration against the Government's handling of the economic crisis. Union leaders are taken into custody and later hospitalised, allegedly after being tortured.

October: ZANU-PF win the Chikomba and Rushinga parliamentary by-elections on 7 October 2006.

November: Local government elections - ZANU-PF take 1,247 wards (482 of which were taken unopposed). The MDC (Pro and Anti-Senate factions) take only 82 wards.

December: ZANU-PF party conference approves a plan to move presidential polls from 2008 to 2010, effectively extending Mr Mugabe's rule by two years.

2007 12 February: Zimbabwe's annual inflation leapt to a new record 1,593.6 per cent in January, showing no respite in a crisis marked by chronic shortages of foreign exchange, food and fuel and unemployment of more than 80 per cent.

19 February: Armed riot police dispersed around 50,000 Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) supporters who had gathered to hear Morgan Tsvangirai launch the party's campaign for next year's presidential election. There were reports that police had indiscriminately beaten up opposition supporters.

11 March: Police and security forces suppress a prayer meeting called by the MDC in the Harare suburb of Highfield. Opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai is hospitalised with a head wound after his arrest at a rally. One man is shot dead as riot police move to disperse the gathering.

28 March: Heavily armed Zimbabwe police officers storm the Headquarters of the MDC at Harvest House. 80 people, including senior MDC officials, were arrested and taken to Harare Central Police Station, where many claim that they were beaten and or tortured.

4 April: Edward Chikombo, a journalist with reported links to the opposition, was found murdered. The killing was thought to be linked to the smuggling out of the country television pictures of the badly injured opposition leader.

26 May: Riot police again storm Harvest House this time arresting MDC youth members. 211 youth members were arrested with reports of beatings and interrogation before the 211 youth members were released without charge.

June: Nine men are charged with treason for plotting a coup. Their lawyer says they were planning to form a political party.

Ruling ZANU-PF and opposition MDC hold preliminary talks in South Africa.

26 June: Industry and International Trade Minister Obert Mpofu orders retailers to shift prices back to where they were on June 18. This cut prices by around 50 per cent.

20 November: Former Prime Minister Ian Smith dies.

December: Mugabe attends EU-Africa summit, where he is criticised over his rights record. British Prime Minister Gordon Brown boycotts the meeting over Mugabe's presence.

Mugabe is endorsed as ZANU-PF candidate for forthcoming elections.

2008 January: Presidential and parliamentary elections are set for 29 March.

March: Mugabe defeated in first round of presidential polls. Opposition MDC wins parliamentary elections.

May: Electoral Commission announces presidential run-off election to be held on 27 June. Mr Tsvangirai says there should be no need for second round, insisting he won outright in first round, but agrees to take part in run-off.

June: Government bans food aid distribution, accusing aid agencies of campaigning for the opposition. Morgan Tsvangirai pulls out of the presidential election run-off citing escalating violence against MDC supporters. Robert Mugabe subsequently wins the presidential election – he is the only candidate.

September: On 15 September, Robert Mugabe, Morgan Tsvangirai and Arthur Mutambara signed a power sharing deal that provided for Mugabe to remain as president with Tsvangirai assuming a new post of prime minister. By the 29 September no agreement had been reached regarding the allocation of cabinet posts in government.

December: Around 40 opposition and civil society leaders are abducted.

2009 February: The MDC agrees to enter a government of National Unity. Morgan Tsvangirai is sworn in as Prime Minister on 11 February.

March: Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai's wife, Susan, dies in a car crash. In conciliatory remarks at her funeral service a few days later, President Mugabe calls for an end to the "days of violence" in Zimbabwe.

Retail prices fall for the first time after years of hyperinflation, according to government statistics for January and February 2009. [3ag]

May: The Zimbabwean African People's Union (ZAPU), a wing of ZANU-PF, announced that it had formally split from the ruling party. [67a]

June: Morgan Tsvangirai announces that the 'acrimony is over' between him and President Robert Mugabe and urges Zimbabweans to put their differences behind them to rebuild the country. [3v]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex B: Political organisations

ZANU-PF

The Economist Intelligence Unit Country Profile 2008 noted that:

“At independence ZANU-PF’s ideology was initially Marxist-Leninist, but from the late 1980s in line with the fall of communism the president did reluctantly allow a move towards market-oriented economic policies. As the political crisis in Zimbabwe has intensified in recent years, Mr Mugabe has reverted to more revolutionary language, notably the need to complete the chimurenga (the revolution by which he came to power) through the redistribution of land. He has also at various times called for the nationalisation of mines and industries.

“Since early 2005 a worrying trend within Zimbabwe has been Robert Mugabe’s increasing use of the military in virtually all areas of government. In addition, many important state-owned corporations are headed by retired military officers. Although this has helped to shore up and maintain the president’s authority, it has led to other problems. In particular, although Mr Mugabe believes that he can rely on the military to be loyal to him, the increased militarization of government is promoting divisions within ZANU-PF that will be difficult to heal in the long run. In addition, although senior army commanders may be loyal to Mr Mugabe, the rank and file are becoming restive and fed up with inadequate pay and living standards, and an increasing number are leaving.” [24n] (p4-5)

Movement for Democratic Change (MDC)

The Economist Intelligence Unit Country Profile 2008 noted that:

“The MDC is essentially the only opposition party. The government has made a concerted effort to undermine its parliamentary representatives: many have been harassed by the security forces and periodically arrested on spurious charges. This has prompted a major debate within the party as to whether contesting elections and engaging in democratic opposition makes any political sense, given the country’s repressive political climate. These divisions came to the fore during 2005 when the party actually split in two; the faction led by the long-standing MDC president, Morgan Tsvangirai, is the larger one. However, following the disputed 2008 elections, the party’s two factions have recombined in order to focus their efforts on deposing Mr Mugabe.” [24n] (p5)

(Please see Section 4 – MDC and Annex D for information about the rival factions of the MDC.)

ZANU-Ndonga

The late Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole, who led ZANU before Robert Mugabe, set up ZANU-Ndonga. The party held two seats in Parliament prior to the elections in June 2000.

Liberty Party/Liberty Party of Zimbabwe

The Liberty Party of Zimbabwe (LPZ), and a breakaway faction styling itself simply the Liberty Party (LP), is a minor party that contested a handful of seats in Matabeleland in the June 2000 elections. The leader of the LPZ is Canaan Zinothi Moyo. The LPZ contested 13 seats (including one seat, Umzingwane, where two candidates stood as LPZ) and the LP eight.

The highest vote achieved by the LPZ in any seat in June 2000 was in the Bubi-Mguza constituency in Matabeleland North, where the LPZ candidate received 889 votes. However, the small ZAPU party received 1,272 votes and the seat was won by the MDC with nearly 13,000 votes. The only party receiving fewer votes than the LPZ in Bubi-Mguza was the breakaway LP, which polled 223 votes. The LPZ polled a total of 2,997 votes in the 13 seats that it contested, and the LP polled 791 votes in total in the eight seats that it contested.

LPZ leader, Canaan Z Moyo contested the Pelandaba constituency in Bulawayo and he received 54 votes. The seat was won by the MDC with over 16,000 votes. The ZAPU candidate received 270 votes in Pelandaba and the UP candidate received 57 votes. The candidate of the breakaway LP was the only candidate to receive fewer votes than Moyo, with 35 votes.

A Liberty Party candidate in the election for executive Mayor of Bulawayo in September 2001 polled just 390 votes, compared to nearly 61,000 for the MDC candidate and nearly 13,000 for ZANU-PF. Liberty Party candidates has historically received very few votes.

Zimbabwe Union of Democrats [ZUD]

The ZUD leader, Margaret Dongo, was the MP for Harare South prior to the June 2000 elections. She failed to come to an agreement with the MDC for the June 2000 elections and the seat was won convincingly by the MDC, with Dongo coming third with only 951 votes, behind the ZANU-PF candidate. ZUD fielded 16 candidates in the 2000 elections but did not win any seats.

ZAPU (Zimbabwe African People's Union) [ZAPU 2000]

ZAPU, or ZAPU 2000, was formed as a resurgent group of the former ZAPU party of the late Joshua Nkomo in 1999. The party advocates a federal system for Zimbabwe, with considerable powers devolved to Matabeleland. The party was unable to agree an electoral alliance for the June 2000 elections with the MDC, as the latter does not support a federal structure. ZAPU candidates stood in most constituencies in Matabeleland and Bulawayo in June 2000 but failed to win any seats.

In early January 2002, ZAPU leader Agrippa Madlela announced that he would not contest the March 2002 presidential election so as to avoid splitting the opposition vote in Matabeleland and backed MDC leader Morgan Tsvangirai for the presidency. Madlela alleged that ZANU-PF was targeting him for 'elimination' ahead of the election. His decision split ZAPU into two factions. Paul Siwela, leader of a splinter group, announced his candidature for the presidency, standing for ZAPU.

United Parties [UP]

The United Parties (UP) grouping was established by Bishop Muzorewa, leader of the UANC, in 1994 after UANC's merger with the Zimbabwe Unity Movement (ZUM). UP boycotted the 1995 general elections. In the presidential elections in 1996, Bishop Muzorewa was denied permission to withdraw his candidacy prior to the ballot and received 4.7 per cent of the vote. UP has failed to win any seats in subsequent elections.

Conservative Alliance of Zimbabwe

Successor to the Rhodesia Front, supported by sections of the White population

National Alliance for Good Governance [NAGG] – their leader, Shakespeare Maya, contested the March 2002 presidential election. The party also contested the Kuwadzana and Highfields constituency by-elections in March 2003.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex C: Prominent people: past and present

Robert Gabriel Mugabe

Shona, first Prime Minister of independent Zimbabwe 1980–87, first executive President 1987 to present, leader of governing ZANU-PF party.

Morgan Tsvangirai

Shona, President of opposition MDC, previously Secretary-General of Zimbabwe Conference of Trade Unions (ZCTU) and one-time ZANU-PF party official.

Gibson Sibanda MP

Vice-President of MDC and leader of MDC MPs in Parliament.

Simon Vengayi Muzenda

ZANU-PF, former Vice-President of Zimbabwe. Died September 2003.

Joseph Msika

ZANU-PF, one of two Vice-Presidents of Zimbabwe, replaced Joshua Nkomo after his death in 1999.

Joyce Mujuru MP

ZANU-PF, one of two Vice-Presidents of Zimbabwe, replaced Simon Vengayi Muzenda in December 2004. In recent years she has positioned herself as the front runner in any possible take over.

Solomon Mujuru

Husband of Vice-President Joyce Mujuru, Solomon Mujuru was the military commander of the ZANLA forces prior to independence. In spite of his retirement from the army in 1992 and from parliament in 2000 he remains an influential figure within the country; he remains a member of ZANU-PF's Politburo and Central Committee.

Professor Jonathan Moyo MP

Ndebele, Former ZANU-PF Minister of State for Information and Publicity. The only non-party affiliated member of parliament.

Professor Welshman Ncube MP

Ndebele, Secretary-General of the pro-senate MDC, MP for Bulawayo North. He is the main driving force of the Mutambara faction.

David Coltart MP

White Zimbabwean, prominent human rights lawyer, MDC MP for Bulawayo South and Shadow Justice Minister.

Chenjerai 'Hitler' Hunzvi MP

Leader of war veterans in farm occupations, elected as ZANU-PF MP for Chikomba in June 2000; died in June 2001.

Ian Douglas Smith

Prime Minister of colonial Southern Rhodesia in 1960s, illegally declared independence (UDI) of Rhodesia from UK in 1965, PM until 1979, he died on 20 November 2007.

Joshua Nkomo

Ndebele, leader of ZAPU until party's merger with ZANU-PF in 1987, Vice-President of Zimbabwe from 1990 until his death in 1999.

John Nkomo

John Nkomo is seen as a possible successor to Mr Mugabe. He is currently the national chairman of ZANU-PF and commands considerable respect within the party. He could well become the second vice-president if the current incumbent, Joseph Msika, is forced to retire because of ill health.

Reverend Canaan Banana

First, non-executive, President of Zimbabwe 1980–1987; sentenced to a year in prison in 2000 for sexually assaulting a male employee, Released from prison January 2001.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa

Prime Minister of 'Zimbabwe-Rhodesia' under power-sharing 'internal settlement' in 1979, former leader of UANC, leader of United Parties since 1994, United Methodist Church's Bishop of Zimbabwe.

Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole

Former leader of ZANU, latterly leader of small ZANU-Ndonga party, died 2000.

Margaret Dongo

Leader of Zimbabwe Union of Democrats (ZUD), MP for Harare South until lost seat in June 2000 elections.

Edgar Tekere

Former ZANU-PF Secretary-General, expelled from party 1988 for denouncing plans for one-party state, founded opposition Zimbabwe Unity Movement 1989 and unsuccessfully challenged Mugabe for Presidency in 1990.

Tarugarira Wilson Khumbula MP

ZANU-Ndonga MP for Chipinge South, the only MP not from ZANU-PF or MDC elected in June 2000

Border Gezi

Former ZANU-PF Minister for Youth, Gender and Employment Creation. Initiated the National Youth Service programme, the members/graduates of which are sometimes called Border Gezi's, or Green Bombers or Taliban.

Constantine Guveya Chiwenga (General)

Commander of Zimbabwe Defence Forces (since 1 January 2004).

Vitalis Zvinvashe (General)

Commander of Zimbabwe Defence Forces, 1994–2003.

Pius Ncube

Roman Catholic Archbishop of Bulawayo, Zimbabwe, widely known as a human rights advocate and an outspoken critic of President Robert Mugabe. Heads a multi-denominational church coalition that seeks to improve the conditions of Zimbabweans. He received a Human Rights Award from Human Rights First on 23 October 2003, for speaking out against torture and confronting the Mugabe government. In September 2007 Pius Ncube was implicated in an adultery scandal, thought by many to have been inspired by the CIO, and subsequently resigned as Archbishop of Bulawayo.

Arthur Mutambara

President (leader) of the pro-Senate faction of the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC). Mutambara holds a PhD from Oxford University in Robotics and Mechatronics, and held professorships in that field in several US institutions. In the late 1980s, he rose to prominence at the University of Zimbabwe, leading the first anti-government student protests since independence.

Wellington Chibebe

Mr Chibebe has been leader of the Zimbabwe Congress of Trades Unions (ZCTU) since 2001.

Gideon Gono

As head of the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe, he is the main driver of economic policy. He appears to have the ear of the president, and has retained his position in spite of mild criticism of government economic policy and the ongoing decline in the economy. Some commentators suggest that he is a contender for the presidency when Mugabe steps down.

Emmerson Mnangagwa

Former head of the CIO, Emmerson Mnangagwa was until 2005 the prime contender to succeed Mr Mugabe. He was sidelined after too closely contesting the power of Mr Mugabe in the battle to appoint a new vice-president in 2005. However, Mugabe has kept Mnangagwa in the party and recently was said to favour Mnangagwa over Joyce Mujuru in an eventual take over.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex D: Government of National Unity

Under the terms of the power sharing agreement Robert Mugabe remains head of state as President. Morgan Tsvangirai (leader of the larger opposition group MDC-M) was sworn in as prime minister on February 11th with Arthur Mutambara (leader of the splinter opposition group MDC-M) being sworn in as deputy prime minister on the same day. Zimbabwe's new cabinet was sworn in on February 13th. (Economist Intelligence Unit, 13 February 2009) [24f] The rest of the information is provided by the following sources: (BBC News, 12 February 2009) [3ae], (CIA, 27 May 2009) [56b] and (Reuters, 9 February 2009) [75d].

HEAD OF STATE & PRIME MINISTER

President	Robert Mugabe (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Vice President	Joseph Msika (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Vice President	Joyce Mujuru (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Prime Minister	Morgan Tsvangirai (MDC-T) [56b]
Deputy Prime Minister	Arthur Mutambara (MDC-M) [24f]
Deputy Prime Minister	Thokozani Khupe (MDC-T) [75d]

MINISTERS AND MINISTERS OF STATE

Mugabe and Tsvangirai agreed the following list of new ministries on 13 September 2008 (see below). [75b] On 13 February 2009, The Herald, published a full list of names of appointees to the Cabinet and junior ministries. However, the source did not state which portfolios had been allocated to whom. [23] A copy of the list can be found at the following link: <http://allafrica.com/stories/printable/200902130014.html>
<https://www.cia.gov/library/publications/world-leaders-1/world-leaders-z/zimbabwe.html>

Finance	Tendai Biti (MDC-T) [3ae]
Home Affairs (Shared)	Kembo Mohadi (ZANU-PF) [3ae]
Home Affairs (Shared)	Giles Mutsekwa (MDC-T) [3ae]
Foreign Affairs	Simbarashe Mumbengegwi (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Defence	Emmerson Mnangagwa (ZANU-PF) [3ae]
Justice and legal Affairs	Patrick Chinamasa (ZANU-PF) [3ae]
Constitutional and Parliamentary Affairs	Eric Matinenga (MDC-T) [3ae]
Lands, Agriculture and Resettlement	Joseph Made (ZANU-PF) [3ae]
Deputy Minister	Roy Bennet (MDC-M) [3ae]
Environment, Natural Resources and Tourism	Francis Nhema (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Economic Planning and Development	Elton Mangoma (MDC) [56b]
Transport	Nicholas Goche (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Local Government, Urban/Rural Development	Ignatius Chombo (ZANU-PF) [56b]
National Health and Social Amenities	Henry Madzorera (MDC-T) [3ae]
Public Service	Elphas Mukonoweshuro (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Higher and Tertiary Education	Stanislaus Mudenge (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Education, Sports and Culture	David Coltart (MDC-M) [56b]
Energy and Power Development	Elias Mudzuri (MDC) [56b]
Mines and Mine Development	Obert Mpofu (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Water Resources and Management	Samuel Nkomo (MDC) [56b]
Public Works	Theresa Makone (MDC) [56b]
Public Service	Elphas Mukonoweshuro (MDC-T) [56b]
Youth Development, Indigenisation ...	Savior Kasukuwere (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Industry and Commerce	Welshman Ncube (MDC-M) [56b]

Information Communication Technology	Nelson Chamisa (MDC-T) [56b]
Enterprises and Parastatals	Joel Gabbuza (MDC) [56b]
Science and Technology	Henri Dzinotywei (MDC-T) [56b]
Media, Information and Publicity	Webster Shamu (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Women's Affairs	Olivia Muchena (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Regional Integration and International Trade	Priscila Misihairabwi-Mushonga (MDC-M) [56b]
Labour and Social Services	Paurina Gwanyanya-Mpariwa (MDC) [56b]
Tourism	Walter Mzembi (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Min. of State President's Office	Didymus Mutasa (ZANU-PF) [56b]
Min. of State Prime Minister's Office	Gordon Moyo (MDC-T) [56b]
Governor, Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe	Gideon Gono (ZANU-PF) [56b]

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex E: MDC party symbols and slogans

The MDC's symbol is an open hand, palm outstretched. The party's slogan during the June 2000 parliamentary election campaign was 'Chinja Maitiro, Maitiro Chinja' in Shona and 'Guqula Izenzo, Izenzo Guqula' in Ndebele. The closest English translation is 'Now is the time, fight for change, support the Movement'.

(See source document [12b] for an illustration of the symbol – hard copy only)

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex F: List of abbreviations

AI	Amnesty International
CEDAW	Committee on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women
CPJ	Committee to Protect Journalists
EU	European Union
FCO	Foreign and Commonwealth Office (UK)
FGM	Female Genital Mutilation
FH	Freedom House
GDP	Gross Domestic Product
HIV/AIDS	Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome
HRW	Human Rights Watch
ICG	International Crisis Group
ICRC	International Committee for Red Cross
IDP	Internally Displaced Person
IFRC	International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies
IMF	International Monetary Fund
IOM	International Organisation for Migration
MSF	Médecins sans Frontières
NGO	Non-Governmental Organisation
OCHA	Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs
ODIHR	Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights
ODPR	Office for Displaced Persons and Refugees
OECD	Organisation of Economic Cooperation and Development
OHCHR	Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights
OSCE	Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe
RSF	Reporteurs sans Frontières
STD	Sexually Transmitted Disease
STC	Save The Children
TB	Tuberculosis
TI	Transparency International
UN	United Nations
UNAIDS	Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS
UNESCO	United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
UNHCHR	United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights
UNHCR	United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees
UNICEF	United Nations Children's Fund
UNODC	United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime
USAID	United States Agency for International Development
USSD	United States State Department
WFP	World Food Programme
WHO	World Health Organization

Return to contents
Go to list of sources

Annex G: References to source material

The Home Office is not responsible for the content of external websites.

Numbering of source documents is not always consecutive because some older sources have been removed in the course of updating this document. (If applicable)

- [1] Europa Publications Ltd/Europa World Online
- b Area and Population (Zimbabwe). Date accessed 10 February 2009.
 - c Africa South of the Sahara 2005, 34th Edition, London September 2004
 - d Recent History (Zimbabwe). Date accessed 4 February 2009.
 - e Judicial System (Zimbabwe). Date accessed 2 February 2009.
 - h The Republic (Zimbabwe). Date accessed 19 February 2009.
 - i The Constitution (Zimbabwe). Date accessed 19 February 2009.
 - j Declaration of Rights (Zimbabwe). Date accessed 4 February 2009.
- [2] United States Department of State
<http://www.state.gov>
- a International Religious Freedom: Zimbabwe, 19 September 2008
 - b Human Rights Practices, Zimbabwe 2008, 25 February 2009
 - c International Religious Freedom: Zimbabwe, 14 September 2007
 - d US Embassy Harare: Pharmacies. Date accessed 8 June 2009.
 - e Trafficking in Persons Report – Zimbabwe, 4 June 2008
 - g Consular Information Sheet (Zimbabwe), 1 April 2009
Date accessed 2 June 2009
 - l Zimbabwe’s Manmade Crisis: dated 12 March 2006.
- [3] British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), BBC News Online
<http://www.bbc.co.uk/>
- a Zimbabwe’s inflation steams ahead – 9 June 2006. Date accessed 12 June 2006.
 - b Zimbabwe’s unwanted ‘foreigners’ – 24/08/2005. Date accessed 24/08/2005.
 - c Zimbabwean court frees 180 women – 7 November 2006. Date accessed 09/11/2006.
 - d Attempt to kill Mugabe rival – 2/7/04. Date accessed 26/08/2004.
 - e Zimbabwe ‘facing fresh violence’, 9 June 2009. Date accessed 10 June 2009.
 - f Zimbabwe judge slams police – 6/8/04. Date accessed 16/03/2005.
 - i Zimbabwe judge held over MDC bail – 6 March 2009. Date accessed 2 June 2009.
 - j Zimbabwe inflation ‘incalculable’ – 27 November 2007. Date accessed 28 November 2007.
 - k Under Zimbabwe’s skin – 9 June 2009. Date accessed 10 June 2009.
 - l Harare’s counter-culture café, 7 August 2007. Date accessed 23 September 2009.
 - m Aid for starving Zimbabwe inmates – 5 June 2009. Date accessed 8 June 2009.
 - n Zimbabwe ‘seeks jail crisis aid’ – 1 April 2009. Date accessed 2 April 2009.
 - o Zimbabwe welcomes back refugees – 17/12/2004. Date accessed 21/09/2005.
 - p Zimbabwe abandons its currency, 29 January 2009.
Date accessed 30 January 2009.
 - q Zimbabwe mourns ‘mother of struggle’ – 10 March 2009. Date accessed 22 June 2009.
 - r Zimbabwe’s torture training camps – 27/2/04. Date accessed 15/09/2004.
 - s Mugabe calls for national healing, 18 April 2009. Date accessed 20 April 2009.

- t Harare teacher: I can't afford to work, 27 January 2009. Date accessed 27 January 2009.
- u What lies behind the Zimbabwe demolitions? – 26/07/2005. Date accessed 19/09/2005.
- v Tsvangirai: Mugabe acrimony over – 4 June 2009. Date accessed 9 June 2009.
- w Zimbabwe MP dead in prison – 22/10/02. Date accessed 24/04/2003.
- x Zimbabwe admits land chaos – 17/10/03. Date accessed 16/09/2004.
- y Zimbabwe launches $200,000 note – 31 July 2007. Date accessed 31 July 2007
- z Zimbabwe deal: 'Good, bad and ugly' – 17 September 2008. Date accessed 17 September 2008.
- aa Zimbabwe girls trade sex for food – 12 June 2009. Date 12 June 2009.
- ab Abuses in Zimbabwe 'still go on' – 30 May 2009. Date accessed 1 June 2009.
- ac Mugabe says talks 'inconclusive' – 11 August 2008. Date accessed 4 August 2008.
- ad Zimbabwe pays wages in US dollars – 18 February 2009. Date accessed 1 July 2009
- ae MDC nominee 'on treason charge', 13 February 2009. Date accessed 23 February 2009.
- af 'Thousands of blacks' evicted in Zimbabwe – 30/8/01
- ag BBC Timeline: Zimbabwe, updated 9 April 2009. Date accessed 11 May 2009.
- aj Zimbabwe police hound journalists - 15/02/05. Date accessed 21/09/2005.
- al Another blow for Zimbabwe's Moyo - 03/01/05. Date accessed 21/09/2005.
- an How loyal is Zimbabwe's army? – 10/1/02
- ao Food imports head into Zimbabwe – 14/07/2005. Date accessed 22/07/2005.
- ar Zimbabwe judge free on bail – 18/2/03. Date accessed 06/10/2005.
- aw Zimbabwe deal: Key points – 15 September 2008. Date accessed 15 September 2008.
- ax Zimbabwe to get more UN food aid – 02/12/2005. Date accessed 02/12/2005.
- ay Zimbabwe's 'outsider' faction leader – 27/02/2006. Date accessed 08/03/2006.
- az Zimbabwe admits 'errors' on land – 01/11/2005. Date accessed 02/11/2005.
- ba Country Profile: Zimbabwe – 13/01/2006. Date accessed 21/03/2006.
- bc Zimbabwe to cut prices 'by half' – 26 June 2007. Date accessed 2 August 2007
- be Zimbabwe's women 'face brutality' – 25 July 2007. Date accessed 25 July 2007.
- bj Zimbabwe police jailed for 'bias' – 21 March 2008. Date accessed 25 March 2008.
- bl Zimbabwe cabinet talks 'deadlock' – 18 September 2008. Date accessed 18 September 2008.
- br Zimbabwean activist 'beaten up' – 8 April 2008. Date accessed 8 April 2008
- bu Zimbabwean poll officials detained – 8 April 2008. Date accessed 8 April 2008.
- bs 'Huge violence' in Zimbabwe poll – 9 April 2008. Date accessed 9 April 2008.
- bt Legal fight over Zimbabwe recount – 13 April 2008. Date accessed 14 April 2008.
- bv Zimbabwe emergency talks called – 9 April 2008. Date accessed 14 April 2008.
- bx Zuman condemns Zimbabwe poll delay – 9 April 2008. Date accessed 9 April 2008.
- cj Militias 'to rig Zimbabwe poll' – 9 May 2008. Date accessed 9 May 2008.

[4] The Independent newspaper (UK)

<http://www.independent.co.uk/>

- a Zimbabwe Asians are next to face race threats – 10/4/00
- c The new struggle for equality: Gay rights (and wrongs) in Africa – 21 November 2006. Date accessed 12 January 2007.
- e Zimbabwe undercover: how Mugabe is burning opponents out of their homes – 12/06/2005 Date accessed 13/06/2005.

- g Zimbabwe opposition leader 'beaten unconscious by police' – 13 March 2007. Date accessed 14 March 2007.
- h The big question: Are there any signs of an end to Mugabe's rule in Zimbabwe – 13 March 2007. Date accessed 14 March 2007.
- i Injured Tsvangirai vows to fight on for change in Zimbabwe – 14 March 2007. Date accessed 14 March 2007.
- j Zimbabwe journalist murdered 'over leaked Tsvangirai pictures' – 4 April 2007. Date accessed 4 April 2007.

[5] The Daily Telegraph newspaper (UK)

<http://www.telegraph.co.uk>

- a Morgan Tsvangirai crash 'was designed to eliminate leader', 9 March 2009. Date accessed 9 March 2009.
- c Zimbabwe's morgue-like airport – 22 May 2006. Date accessed 11/11/2005.
- d Morgan Tsvangirai to return to Zimbabwe for wife's funeral, 9 March 2009. Date accessed 9 March 2009.
- e Zimbabwe's hospital system 'beyond help' – 2 August 2007. Date accessed 2 August 2007
- k Robert Mugabe has upper hand over Morgan Tsvangirai in new Zimbabwe government – 16 September 2008. Date accessed 22 September 2008.
- l Zimbabwe's opposition 'co-operating in their own demise' – 21 September 2007. Date accessed 13 November 2007.
- m Zimbabwe starves as Robert Mugabe stalls on new government – 23 September 2008. Date accessed 24 September 2008.

[6] Mail and Guardian newspaper (South Africa)

<http://www.mg.co.za/>

- a WHO: Zimbabwe Cholera cases pass 65 000 mark, 5 February 2009. Date accessed 21 February 2009.
- c Mugabe law will curb church and charities – 2/8/04. Date accessed 02/08/2004.
- d Zim media school ordered to enrol Mugabe 'zealots' – 13 November 2006. Date accessed 14/11/2006.
- m 'I was in a Zimbabwe death squad' – 5 April 2007. Date accessed 12 April 2007.

[7] World Food Programme

<http://www.wfp.org/stories/wfp-operational-update-Zimbabwe>

- a Lean Season in Zimbabwe Sees Hunger Rising, 30 January 2009. Date accessed 30 January 2009.

[8] Cable News Network (CNN)

<http://www.cnn.com/>

- a Zimbabwe makes ID cards compulsory, 22 November 2001. Date accessed 16 June 2009.

[9] Institute for Democratic Alternative for South Africa (Idasa)

<http://www.idasa.org.za/>

- a States in Transition Observatory - GNU Watch Zimbabwe: April 2009, Date accessed 29 May 2009.
- b States in Transition Observatory -GNU Watch Zimbabwe: May 2009. Date accessed 29 May 2009.

[10] Integrated Regional Information Networks (IRIN), United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs

<http://www.irinnews.org>

- b Too white to be black – the challenge of albinism – 16 February 2006. Date accessed 19 October 2006.
- c Doctors protest condition of health system – 14 November 2006. Date accessed 14/11/2006.
- d Zimbabwe: Making schools work – 4 May 2009. Date accessed 30 June 2009.
- e Tit for tat violence flares up – 23 February 2009. Date accessed 22 June 2009.
- f Laws used to ‘criminalise journalism’, minister – 12 May 2009. Date accessed 30 June 2009.
- h Zimbabwe: Children on the edge of survival, 20 January 2009. Date accessed 18 February 2009.
- i Zimbabwe: 94 percent of schools fail to open, 10 February 2009. Date accessed 23 February 2009.
- m Abortion figures underscore need for more reproductive health education – 30 March 2005. Date accessed 28 September 2007.
- p The Tonga: Left high and dry – 5 September 2007. Date accessed 13 September 2007.
- q Homophobia raises HIV risk for gays – 26 October 2006. Date accessed 23 November 2007.
- ae Displaced farm workers urgently need aid – 13/2/03. Date accessed 14/02/2003.
- af Zimbabwe: Inflation at 6.5 Quindecillion Novemdecillion Percent, 21 January 2009. Date accessed 10 February 2009.
- ai Operation Glossary – a guide to Zimbabwe’s internal campaign – 1 May 2008. Date accessed 2 May 2008.
- bm Country Profile: Zimbabwe 14 January 2009. Date accessed 14 January 2009.

[11] Zimbabwe Independent newspaper

<http://www.theindependent.co.zw>

- d Prisons in Derelict State – Zacro, 30 January 2009. Date accessed 19 February 2009.
- f Five more join sanctions list – 20 April 2007. Date accessed 7 June 2007.

[12] Movement for Democratic Change (MDC), Zimbabwe

<http://www.mdczimbabwe.org>

- a Restart: Our Path to Social Justice – 01/04
- b Symbol and slogan (undated)

[13] Foreign and Commonwealth Office

<http://www.fco.gov.uk>

- a Human Rights Annual Report 2008 – 26 March 2009. Date accessed 29 May 2009.
- b Zimbabwean Army - email correspondence – 26/05/2005.
- c ID Cards – email correspondence – 20 April 2009.
- g Email correspondence – 2 October 2006.
- j Email correspondence – 8 August 2007.
- k Email correspondence – 24 August 2007.
- l Email correspondence – 8 August 2007.
- n FCO bloggers: Global conversations – 19 March to 1 August 2008. Date accessed 6 August 2008.

[14] Amnesty International

<http://www.amnesty.org/>

- a Zimbabwe teachers working in fear – 1 May 2009. Date accessed 30 June 2009.
- b Annual Report 2009: Zimbabwe (covers 2008). Date accessed 30 May 2009.
- d Annual Report 2008: Zimbabwe (covers 2007). Date accessed 7 August 2008.

- e Between a rock and a hard place: women human rights defenders at risk – 25 July 2007. Date accessed 25 July 2007.
 - f Climate of fear in Zimbabwe persists despite deal – 25 July 2008. Date accessed 4 August 2008.
 - h Zimbabwe's health system in chaos, 21 November 2008. Date accessed 3 December 2008.
 - o Zimbabwe accused of using food for political gain – 6 June 2008 Date accessed 11 August 2008
- [15] Inter Press News Agency
<http://allafrica.com>
- a 'Dollarisation' of Economy Hitting Poor Hard, 24 January 2009 Date accessed 26 January 2009.
- [16] World Directory of Minorities
 Minority Rights Group International, London 1997
- [17] Media Institute of Southern Africa
<http://www.misa.org/>
- d Freedom of expression addressed in Zanu-PF/MDC agreement – 18 September 2008. Date accessed 22 September 2008.
- [18] National post
<http://www.nationalpost.com>
- a Zimbabwe faces collapse, starvation, 15 October 2008 Date accessed 15 October 2009.
- [19] Avert.com
http://www.psufasa.org/info_map/full%20documents/mresearchdocs/Zimbabwe/zimbabwe%20country%20report.doc
- a Country Review: HIV/AIDS in Zimbabwe. Date accessed 1 February 2009.
- [20] Zimbabwe Standard newspaper
<http://www.thestandard.co.zw/>
- a Police Roadblocks Rile Motorists, 24 January 2009. Date accessed 26 January 2009.
 - b Teachers flee terror in rural schools – 10 May 2008. Date accessed 14 August 2008.
 - c Aids activists bemoan lack of resources – 7 March 2009. Date accessed 8 June 2009.
 - f Hardships saddle children's home – 13/7/03. Date accessed 15/07/2003.
- [21] War Resisters' International – Refusing to Bear Arms, a World Survey of Conscription and Conscientious Objection to Military Service, London September 1998 <http://www.wri-irg.org/>
- [22] Reliefweb
<http://www.nzherald.co.nz>
- a Exiles start to return, 19 March 2009. Date accessed 1 July 2009.
 - d Zimbabwe government lifts NGO food aid ban for HIV/AIDS programs – 4 August 2008. Date accessed 5 August 2008
- [23] The Herald newspaper
<http://www.herald.co.zw/>

- a Tourism sector should prepare for new markets, 25 March 2008. Date accessed 8 June 2009.
- b Zimbabwe Press Review – 21/9/02 via BBC Monitoring. Date accessed 16/10/2002.
- c Full Cabinet List Out, 13 February 2009. Date accessed 19 February 2009.
- d Clerk appears in court – 17 April 2009. Date accessed 15 June 2009.
- f Woman sentenced to community service for abortion, 12 July 2008. Date accessed 23 February 2009.
- g More women in Zimbabwe access reproductive health care, 14 July 2008. Date accessed 23 February 2009.
- h Three jailed for stealing, forging documents, 21 March 2009. Date accessed 15 June 2009.
- i Cooking stick found inside woman's body, 27 April 2009. Date accessed 1 July 2009.

[24] Economist Intelligence Unit

- a Country Report: May 2009
- e Country Profile: 2007
- f Zimbabwe politics: GNU deal?, 13 February 2009. Date accessed 179 February 2009.
- i Country Report: July 2008
- k Country Report: September 2008
- l May 2008
- m April 2008
- n Country Profile 2008
- o Country Report: January 2009
- p Country Report: February 2009

[25] United Nations

<http://www.unhcr.ch>

- a Report of the fact-finding mission to Zimbabwe to assess the scope and impact of Operation Murambatsvina – 18/07/2005
- b Summary record of the meeting: Zimbabwe. 17/06/96 CRC/C/SR.294. (Summary Record). Convention on the Rights of the Child.

[26] Spartacus

- a Spartacus (Gay Travel Guide): Zimbabwe 2008. Date accessed 27 September 2008.

[27] Die Volker Afrikas Atlas

Geographischer Dienst, Germany 1998 – map of ethnic groups of Zimbabwe (hard copy only)

[28] Radiovop

<http://www.radiovop.com>

- a Fresh farm seizure – 25 September 2008. Date accessed 26 September 2008.
- b Election terror masters plead for protection – 28 May 2009. Date accessed 17 June 2009.

[29] Independent Online

<http://www.int.iol.co.za/index.php>

- a Two Zim teachers killed: unions – 1 May 2008. Date accessed 14 August 2008.

[30] Committee to Protect Journalists

<http://www.cpj.org/>

- a In Zimbabwe, purported list names 15 journalists for surveillance – 28 September 2007. Date accessed 26 November 2007.
- b Attacks on the Press in 2008: Zimbabwe, released on 10 February 2009. Date accessed 12 February 2009.

[31] Washington Post

<http://www.washingtonpost.com/>

- a Zimbabwe's security sector – 28 March 2008. Date accessed 1 June 2009.

[32] The Zimbabwe Times

<http://www.thezimbabwetimes.com/>

- a Lawyers turn on Mutsekwa, Mohadi – 1 May 2009. Date accessed 17 June 2009.
- d Zimbabwe keeps its school doors closed, 8 January 2009. Date accessed 13 January 2009.
- e Political violence resurges in Masvingo – 27 February 2009. Date accessed 22 June 2009.

[33] Harare Tribune

www.hararetribune.com

- a A resurgence of ZANU-PF militia political violence in Zimbabwe – 12 March 2009. Date accessed 20 March 2009.
- b The list: Operational ZANU-PF militia torture camps – 5 August 2008. Date accessed 7 August 2008.

[34] The Guardian

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/>

- b A month ago, the hospitals were overflowing. Now they lie empty, 6 December 2008. Date accessed 13 January 2009.
- d Police accused of torturing jailed activists, 27 December 2008. Date accessed 13 January 2009.

[35] Zimbabwe Human Rights NGO Forum

<http://www.hrforumzim.com>

- a Political Violence Report April 2009 – dated 2 June 2009
- b Political Violence Report March 2009 – dated 28 April 2009
- g If you can't join them, beat them! Post election violence in Zimbabwe – 5 May 2008
- j Political Violence Report November 2008, 18 December 2008
- l Political Violence Report December 2008, 13 February 2009
- n Damn Lies? Gross Human Rights Violations During April 2008, 9 August 2008.
- z Political Violence Report December 2007 – dated 13 February 2008

[36] The Commonwealth Secretariat

<http://www.thecommonwealth.org>

- a Zimbabwe's withdrawal from the Commonwealth – 12 December 2003. Date accessed 24 January 2007.

[37] Sokwanele – Zvakwana – Enough is Enough

<http://www.sokwanele.com/node?page=1>

- a ZEC: Final results for the 60 Senate seats elected by votes. Date accessed 17 April 2008.
- b ZEC: Final results for the House of Assembly. Date accessed 17 April 2008.

- [38] News24 (South Africa)
<http://www.news24.com>
i Diarrhoea outbreaks hit Zim – 20 August 2007. Date accessed 20 August 2007.
- [39] Manchester University, School of Environment and Development
http://www.sed.man.ac.uk/idpm/staff/bracking_sarah.htm
Academic staff profile – Dr Sarah Bracking. Date accessed 08/09/2005.
- [40] Africasia
<http://www.africasia.com/> a Mugabe claims set for landslide victory in one-man vote – 29 June 2008.
Date accessed 7 August 2008.
b Zimbabwe teachers on frontline of violence – 11 May 2008.
Date accessed 14 August 2008.
c Zimbabwe teachers on frontline of violence – 11 May 2008.
Date accessed 22 September 2008.
- [41] NewZimbabwe.com
<http://www.newzimbabwe.com/> a CNN, BBC welcome in Zimbabwe – Mugabe’s spokesman – 18 May 2009.
Date accessed 19 May 2009.
d Interview Part 4: Prof Moyo and Thornycroft – 16 January 2007. Date accessed 1 February 2007.
- [42] Gays and Lesbians of Zimbabwe
<http://www.galz.co.zw>
b FAQ. Date accessed 17 November 2008.
c GALZ and the Law. Date accessed 2 December 2008.
d Zim Pride: Jacaranda Queen. Date accessed 23 November 2007.
e GALZ & the Zimbabwe Human Rights Scene. Date accessed 23 September 2008.
- [43] ZimbabweGuardian
<http://www.talkzimbabwe.com> b MDC supporters allege harassment in the UK – 28 June 2008.
Date accessed 14 August 2008.
- [44] Reporters sans Frontières
<http://www.rsf.org/>
a Three journalists arrested, held overnight the freed on bail – 14 May 2009.
Date accessed 30 June 2009.
g Zimbabwe Annual Report 2008. Date accessed 25 February 2008.
- [45] Department for International Development
<http://www.dfid.gov.uk> a Major challenges. Date accessed 2 June 2009.
b Key Facts: Zimbabwe – December 2008. Date accessed 6 January 2009.
c Country Profile: Zimbabwe – June 2007. Date accessed 30 July 2007.
d Email correspondence from DFID official in Zimbabwe – 12 July 2007.
e Email correspondence from DFID official in Zimbabwe – 12 July 2007.
f Key Facts: Zimbabwe. Date accessed 2 June 2009.
- [46] Pambazuka News
<http://www.pambazuka.org/en/>

- a Zimbabwe: The Feminization of Violence, 4 December 2008. Date accessed 9 February 2009.
- [47] The Daily Mirror
<http://www.zimmirror.co.zw>
 Disabled children living miserably – 18 January 2006. Date accessed 1 February 2006.
- [48] Worldpress.org
<http://www.worldpress.org>
 Under siege: Zimbabwe's Human Rights Activists – 12 March 2006. Date accessed 9 May 2006.
- [49] ZimOnline
<http://www.zimonline.co.za/>
- a Cash crisis forces Harare to suspend issuing of passports – 26 November 2006. Date accessed 16 June 2009.
- b Mugabe withdraws allowances for chiefs backing MDC – 26 July 2007. Date accessed 26 July 2007.
- c Special panel to decide fate of banned Zim paper – 18 October 2007. Date accessed 18 October 2007.
- k Doctors warn of looming health disaster in Zim cities – 26 September 2008. Date accessed 26 September 2008.
- ba Mugabe hikes pensions for war veterans – 2 February 2007. Date accessed 2 February 2007.
- bc New farm invasions show instability in Zim – 29 September 2008. Date accessed 29 September 2008.
- bq MDC says Mugabe stepping up terror campaign – 14 May 2007. Date accessed 14 May 2007.
- cs Police officers demoted for setting free MDC activist – 20 July 2007. Date accessed 20 July 2007.
- ct Tsvangirai wants delimitation of constituencies after talks – 8 November 2007. Date accessed 8 November 2007.
- [50] Zimbabwejournalist.com
<http://www.zimbabwejournalists.com>
- d Zimbabweans' desperate quest for AIDs drugs – 22 April 2007. Date accessed 24 April 2007.
- f CIO intensifies spying operations on NGOs – 8 June 2007. Date accessed 18 July 2007.
- [51] United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA)
- a Humanitarian affairs and emergency relief coordinator – 18 September 2008. Date accessed 22 September 2008.
- [52] Veritas Trust
- b Constitution of Zimbabwe Amendment (No. 18) Act, 2007
- [53] SW Radio Africa
<http://www.swradioafrica.com>
- a Tsvangirai recovering, but devastated by loss of Susan – 7 March 2009. Date accessed 23 June 2009.
- b Army units deployed in rural areas last year, are still there – 3 June 2009. Date accessed 23 June 2009.
- c Buhera police in weekend arrest of 25 MDC supporters – 23 September 2008. Date accessed 26 September 2008.

- d Jimmy Carter says SADC ineffective in dealing with country, 24 November 2008. Date accessed 19 February 2009.
- ai Cashless Zimsec enlist soldiers and police to mark examinations – 30 October 2007. Date accessed 31 October 2007.

[54] World Food Programme

<http://www.wfp.org/>

- b Food security: Overview. Date accessed 12 August 2008.
- c Food security: Overview (Zimbabwe) - Date accessed 2 June 2009.

[55] Kubatana.net

<http://www.kubatana.net/>

- a Operation Mavhiterapapi (who did you vote for?). Date accessed 11 August 2008.
- g Development Denied: Autocratic Militarism in post-election Zimbabwe – 28/07/2005. Date accessed 08/09/2005.
- i The Jacaranda Queen, 10 November 2007. Date accessed 16 October 2008.
- o Organisations Participating in the Orphan Programmes Sector – Organisation Fact Sheet. Date accessed 17 February 2009.
- r Women of Zimbabwe Arise (WOZA) – 27 June 2007. Date accessed 19 July 2007.

[56] CIA

<http://www.cia.gov/cia/publications/factbook/geos/zi.html>

- a The World Factbook: Zimbabwe. Last updated 5 May 2009. Date accessed 13 May 2009.
- b Chief of state and cabinet members of foreign governments – 27 May 2009. Date accessed 11 June 2009.

[57] Revolutionary and Dissident Movements of the World. 4th edition –
John Harper Publishing 2004. Zimbabwe.

[58] Briefing paper by Dr Diana Jeater

Dr Diana Jeater, Principal Lecturer in African History at the University of the West of England. Briefing held at the School of Oriental and African Studies on 30 March 2007.

[59] BBC World Service

<http://www.bbc.co.uk>

- c Country Profile, updated 7 April 2009. Date accessed 1 May 2009.

[60] Haruth.com

<http://haruth.com/JewishLemba.html>

The Lemba: The story of the Lemba people – 15/10/1999. Date accessed 21 February 2007.

[61] ohmynews.com

<http://english.ohmynews.com>

The Agony of Albinos in Cameroon – 08/11/2005. Date accessed 7 March 2006.

[62] The Smart News Network International (SNNi)

<http://www.bernama.com>

Life not so rosy for Albino women – 07/01/2006. Date accessed 07/03/2006.

- [63] Womankind
<http://www.womankind.org.uk>
Why Zimbabwe? Date accessed 28 September 2007.
- [64]
- [65] The Solidarity Peace Trust
<http://www.solidaritypeacetrust.org.za> a National Youth Service Training – shaping youths in a truly Zimbabwean manner – 5/9/03.
- [66] Los Angeles Times
<http://www.latimes.com> b Zimbabwe's food crisis is escalating, 27 September 2008.
Date accessed 2 February 2009.
- [67] ZWNews.com
<http://www.zwnews.com>
a Dumiso Dabengwa, ZAPU interim Chairman – 17 May 2009. Date accessed 17 June 2009.
b Worker killed at Charleswood – 10/2/04. Date accessed 10/02/2004.
- [68]
- [69] Human Rights Watch
<http://www.hrw.org>
a They beat me like a dog: Political persecution of opposition activists and supporters in Zimbabwe – August 2008. Date accessed 12 August 2008.
b You will be thoroughly beaten: The brutal suppression of dissent in Zimbabwe – November 2006.
c World Report 2009 – Zimbabwe, 14 January 2009. Date accessed 29 January 2009.
e Bullets for each of you: State-sponsored violence since Zimbabwe's March 29 elections – 9 June 2008. Date accessed 12 August 2008.
g Crisis without Limits - Human Rights and Humanitarian Consequences of Political Repression in Zimbabwe January 2009.
- [70] The Standard newspaper
http://www.thestandard.co.zw/read.php?st_id=2512
b Zimbabwe: Seven Prisoners Starve, 30 August 2008. Date accessed 19 February 2009.
c Zimbabwe: Prisons Release Inmates to Avert Starvation And Death, 22 November 2008. Date accessed 19 February 2009.
- [71] Hands off Cain
<http://www.handsoffcain.info> a Against the death penalty: Zimbabwe 2007. Date accessed 2 February 2009.
- [72] The Light Foundation
<http://www.firelightfoundation.org/Grants-Countries/Grants-Zimbabwe.htm> a Grants Awarded – Grants Awarded in Zimbabwe. Date accessed 17 February 2009.
- [73] Afrol News
<http://www.afrol.com>

- a Gender Profiles: Zimbabwe. Date accessed 10 June 2009.
- [74] United Nations Population Division
<http://www.un.org/esa/population/publications/abortion/>
 Abortion policy: Zimbabwe- 23 November 2005. Date accessed 18 October 2007.
- [75] Reuters
<http://www.alertnet.org>
- b FACTBOX –Zimbabwe’s new cabinet ministries, 13 September 2008. Date accessed 19 February 2009.
- c Zimbabwe militias accused of raping dozens – 8 August 2008. Date accessed 11 August 2008.
- d Zimbabwe parties focus on alliances, not economy, 9 February 2009. Date accessed 13 February 2009.
- [76] Africa Research Bulletin
 b Volume 46 number 4: April 1 – 30 2009
- [77] Institute for War & Peace Reporting
http://www.iwpr.net/africa_index1.html
- a Zimbabwe Crisis Reports – 3 July 2008. Date accessed 4 August 2008.
- b Passport shortage breeds corruption – 1 June 2007. Date accessed 15 June 2009.
- c Zimbabwe Crisis Reports – 19 June 2008. Date accessed 4 August 2008.
- d Southern province hit by food shortage – 15 July 2008. Date accessed 5 August 2008.
- e Grandmother take on care of AIDS orphans – 27 January 2009. Date accessed 23 February 2009.
- g Zimbabwe’s whites Targeted Again, 13 January 2009. Date accessed 29 January 2009.
- i MDC supporters take revenge – 25 February 2009. Date accessed 30 March 2009.
- p New Zimbabwe Talks Fail To Break Ministries Impasse, 20 January 2009. Date accessed 30 January 2009.
- q New power-sharing agreement brings hope, 29 January 2009. Date accessed 30 January 2009.
- r Mugabe’s day of prayer – 23 June 2006. Date accessed 15 May 2007.
- [78] Women of Zimbabwe Arise
<http://wozazimbabwe.org/>
 A preliminary report on political violence against members of Women of Zimbabwe Arise [WOZA] – September 2007. Date accessed 5 November 2007.
- [79] US President's Emergency Plan For Aids Relief
<http://www.pepfar.gov/press/countries/profiles/116349.htm>
 2008 Country Profile: Zimbabwe. Date accessed 2 February 2009.
- [80] Gaytimes
<http://www.gaytimes.co.uk>
 b Zimbabwe. Date accessed 2 December 2008.
- [81] International Lesbian and Gay Association
 State-sponsored Homophobia 2009, released on 13 May 2009 http://www.ilga.org/statehomophobia/ILGA_State_Sponsored_Homophobia_2009.pdf Date accessed 1 June 2009

- [82] TIMES online
www.timesonline.co.uk
- a Zimbabwe chaos wipes out education for 4.5 million pupils, 8 October 2008. Date accessed 28 October 2008.
 - b Robert Mugabe's thugs chanted: 'We will eat your children' – 1 June 2009. Date accessed 9 June 2009.
 - e Mugabe: 'There is no Cholera in Zimbabwe', 12 December 2008. Date accessed 8 January 2009.
 - h Zimbabwe's inflation means jail wardens steal from prisoners to stay alive, 22 December 2008. Date accessed 8 January 2009.
 - k Morgan Tsvangirai vows to fight Robert Mugabe's regime from the inside, 11 February 2009. Date accessed 11 February 2009.
 - x Zimbabwe: despair in the time of cholera, 28 December 2008. Date accessed 8 January 2009.
 - y Zimbabwe cholera epidemic could hit 60,000, 9 December 2008. Date accessed 8 January 2009.
 - z The extent of the suffering in Zimbabwe 'has reached Auschwitz proportions', 6 December 2008. Date accessed 10 February 2009.
 - ad Morgan Tsvangirai given a hero's welcome after being sworn in, 12 February 2009. Date accessed 12 January 2009.
 - ae Zimbabwe's sick forced to pay with US dollars, 11 January 2009. Date accessed 8 February 2009.
- [83] newsVoA.com
<http://www.voanews.com/english/africa/2005-02-23-voa43.cfm>
- a Despite release of high profile prisoners, Zimbabwe activists remain behind bars – 17 march 2009. Date accessed 22 June 2009.
 - b Zimbabwe Government Lifts NGO Food Aid Ban for HIV/AIDS Programs, 4 August 2008. Date accessed 5 August 2008.
 - l Britain eyes Zimbabwe 'indigenization,' presses EU for rights envoy – 11 October 2007. Date accessed 15 October 2007.
 - o Political violence said rising in Zimbabwe despite political accord – 24 September 2008. Date accessed 26 September 2008.
- [84] United States Agency for International Development
<http://www.reliefweb.int/rw/rwb.nsf/db900SID/ONIN-7GRQSE?OpenDocument>
- a The crisis in Zimbabwe and prospects for resolution – 15 July 2008. Date accessed 5 August 2008.
- [85] UNICEF
www.unicef.org
- a Zimbabwe statistics. Date accessed 29 May 2009.
 - b News Note: a national campaign in Zimbabwe against child abuse, 27 February 2008. Date accessed 17 February 2009.
- [86] Save the Children
<http://www.savethechildren.org.uk/en/939.htm>
 What we do in Zimbabwe 2008/09
- [87] AP Reeler (Former Director – Amani Trust)
 'The role of militia groups in maintaining ZanuPF's political power' March 2003
http://www.db.idproject.org/Sites/idpSurvey.nsf/WebResources?ReadForm&Country=Zimbabwe&p=SU_rvcod

- [88] CVNI.com
Sixty-second edition of the N&O column / Spooks newsletter, Intelligence profile: Zimbabwe, 3 July 2003 Date accessed 18/03/2005.
<http://www.cvni.net/radio/nsnl/nsnl062/nsnl62zw.html>
- [89] The Zimbabwe Situation
www.zimbabwesituation.com
h Zimbabwe & South Africa spy deal: How safe is the diaspora? Date accessed 07/02/2006.
m Desperate effort to save MDC. Date accessed 15/02/2006.
w War vets continue to harass MDC supporters – 1 August 2008. Date accessed 7 August 2008.
y Confusion over Zimbabwe-South Africa spy deal – 24/11/2005 aa Inflation runs berserk – 29 September 2006. Date accessed 30 September 2006.
ab Farm invasions continue – 28 September 2006. Date accessed 29 September 2006.
aj CIO infiltrate UK groups – 14 July 2005. Date accessed 15 May 2007.
ao Army will drive voters to the polls – 25 June 2008
Date accessed 4 August 2008.
- [90] Jane's Sentinel Southern Africa
a Executive Summary – 13 March 2009. Date accessed 11 May 2009.
c Security and Foreign Forces – 25 January 2007. Date accessed 18 August 2008.
d Executive Summary – 26 April 2007. Date accessed 15 May 2007.
e Internal Affairs, updated 13 March 2009. Date accessed 11 May 2009.
f Army – 7 January 2008. Date accessed 3 June 2008.
g Internal Affairs – 7 January 2008. Date accessed 3 June 2008
h Executive Summary – 7 January 2008. Date accessed 3 June 2008.
i Armed Forces, updated 8 October 2008.
j Geography, updated 14 October 2008.
k Demography, updated 14 October 2008.
l Internal Affairs, updated 13 March 2009. Date accessed 11 May 2009.
m Security and Foreign Forces, updated 25 January 2007.
- [91] National Association of Societies for the Care of the Handicapped (NASCOH)
<http://www.nascoh.org.zw/>
Poverty, a way of life for people with disabilities – 20 February 2007. Date accessed 20 November 2007.
- [92] Behind the Mask
<http://www.mask.org.za>
b Samantha crowned the new Miss Jacaranda – 15 October 2005 Date accessed 28 February 2005.
c GALZ opens new centre in Bulawayo – 18 June 2007. Date accessed 23 November 2007.
e Politicians branded 'gay' by pastor, 19 March 2008. Date accessed 3 November 2008.
f About Zimbabwe. Date accessed 2 December 2008.
g The position of lesbian and bisexual women, 13 June 2008. Date accessed 29 October 2008.

- [93] HIV/AIDS Zimbabwe Charity
Making a difference by remaining the same: Part 1 May-June 2007 site visits to Zimbabwe – 18 July 2007. Date accessed 20 July 2007.
- [94] The Daily Mail
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/pages/live/dailymail/home.html?in_page_id=1766 a Thanks a million Mr. Mugabe: Zimbabwe on the brink of economic meltdown – 26 October 2007. Date accessed 29 October 2007.
b Life in Mugabe's Hell Hole: Zimbabwe Jail exposed in secret film ... – 2 April 2009. Date accessed 2 April 2009.
- [95] Zimbabwe Peace Project
http://www.eepa.be/wcm/dmdocuments/ZPP_0709XX_Zimbabwe.pdf
a Partisan distribution of food and other forms of Aid: A National Report, November 2007. Date accessed 30 November 2007.
b Early warning report on human rights and food related violations – December 2008. Date accessed 30 May 2009.
- [105] Freedom House
a Freedom in the World – Zimbabwe (2008). Date accessed 4 August 2008.
d Freedom of Association Under Threat – Zimbabwe, 21 November 2008. Date accessed 7 January 2009.
e Worst of the Worst: The World's Most Repressive Societies 2009.
- [97] World Health Organisation
<http://www.who.int/en/> a Cholera in Zimbabwe: update 4 – 9 June 2009. Date accessed 22 June 2009.
b Health Action in Crises: Zimbabwe. Updated December 2008
c Mental Health Atlas – 2005. Date accessed 07/03/2006.
- [98] The Scotsman
<http://news.scotsman.com> a Mugabe is 'punishing voters who rejected him', opposition claims, 9 April 2008. Date accessed 22 February 2009.
- [99] The Zimbabwean
www.thezimbabwean.co.uk a ZIMAS condemns albino murders – 27 May 2009. Date accessed 25 June 2009.
- [100] International Crisis Group
www.crisisgroup.org
a Engaging the inclusive government – 20 April 2009.
c Zimbabwe's Operation Murambatsvina: The Tipping Point? 17/08/2005
e Zimbabwe: A regional solution? – 18 September 2007
f Zimbabwe <http://www.crisisgroup.org/home/index.cfm?id=1233> (Date accessed 4 August 2008)
g Ending Zimbabwe's Nightmare: A Possible Way Forward, 16 December 2008.

Return to contents
Go to list of sources