Refugee Protection Division	During a 28 January 2011 telephone interview with the Research Directorate, the military attaché at the Embassy of Ghana in Washington explained that within the Ghana Armed Forces (GAF), military personnel do not receive a different identification card based on their rank. During a 1 February 2011 telephone interview with the Research Directorate, an administrative officer from the office of the military attaché from the Embassy of Ghana in Washington also stated that the army identification card is the same for all military personnel. It contains information such as the name, service number, rank, date of birth, religion, blood group, gender, height and photo of the holder (Ghana 1 Feb. 2011). The administrative officer added that the rank information determines whether the card holder is a simple soldier or not (ibid.).

Research Program	According to the military attaché from the Embassy of Ghana in Washington, military service is not mandatory in Ghana (28 Jan. 2011). A soldier may withdraw at any point as long as it is indicated to the authorities in writing, to avoid being considered a deserter (Ghana 28 Jan. 2011). Deserters who are arrested are court-martialled (ibid.). Corroborating information and information on the length of military service could not be found among the sources consulted by the Research Directorate.
