The measures further announced that the Speaker of the House had instructed the following counsel to attend and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

H. R. 13274. An act to provide relief in cases of contracts connected with the prosecution of the war, and for other purposes.

H. R. 13462. An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

In the course of his address he said:

...views upon this important question. By certain traditions, the immortal Washington, in his Farewell Address, constructed a bridge across the Roanoke River at or near Wilkesboro, N. C., and it is the duty of those men who represent the people of that country, and it is the duty of those men who represent the people of his constituency, to construct a bridge across the Wisconsin River at or near South Jackson Street, in the city of Janesville, Wis.

Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] in the statement that the President has made the following statement:

On December 2, 1918, he again appeared before Congress in joint session and started his intention of departing immediately for Europe, to pursue his address as follows:

I welcome this occasion to announce my purpose to join in Paris the representatives of governments with which we have been associated in the war against the central empires for the purpose of discussing with them the main features of the treaty of peace.
