In 2014, Rwanda made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Rwanda secured funding to continue the Rwanda Demobilization and Reintegration Commission Child Rehabilitation Program, provided funding for districts to implement child protection programs, created District Steering Committees on Child Labor in all 30 districts, and adopted a national anti-trafficking plan of action. The Government also participates in and implements several additional programs to combat the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. However, children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service. Gaps exist in the Government’s enforcement of laws on child labor, and social programs lack adequate safeguards to protect children engaged in domestic service.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Rwanda.

Children are trafficked internally in the country for domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation, and are trafficked externally for agricultural labor. (18, 23)

Although education is free and compulsory, in practice, the costs of uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees may preclude some families from sending their children to school. (17, 25-28)

Rwandan law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. Children working in non-contractual employment do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in contractual employment. (29, 36, 37)

In addition to national-level regulations on child labor, the Kigali City Security Council also has guidelines on child labor. (31) These guidelines prohibit the employment of children in Kigali City as domestic servants, street beggars, porters, bar attendants, hairdressers, and dancers in clubs. It also prohibits using children to make pornographic productions, to sell drugs, and to replace their parents in paid employment. (31) In addition, the guidelines require local authorities to raise awareness of child labor and calls for a census at the local cell administrative level to estimate the prevalence of child domestic workers. (31)

Law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA) employed 30 labor inspectors (1 per district) who work with the Rwandan National Police (RNP), under supervision of district authorities. (17, 38-40) At the national level, MIFOTRA employed two chief labor inspectors, who are supervised by the Directorate General in charge of labor. (12, 38) According to MIFOTRA, one labor inspector per district is not enough to conduct all of the necessary inspections. (46) The MIFOTRA reviews the performance of its labor inspectors every 6 months and provides them with training twice a year on identifying and investigating child labor violations. (12, 17) Labor inspectors hold quarterly district trainings on child labor issues for employers and local authorities. (12, 42) MIFOTRA provided labor inspectors with laptops and funds for Internet service. In addition, half of all labor inspectors received motorcycles and funds for fuel and maintenance. (12) Despite these improvements, MIFOTRA reports that many labor inspectors still lack transportation to carry out inspections. (42, 46) MIFOTRA also requires an annual report on activities from its labor inspectors and audits the disbursement of labor inspection funds to ensure that it matches appropriations. (12)
Inspections may be conducted without prior notice, and labor inspectors may issue warnings, which require correction of the violating condition within 7 days. Otherwise, the labor inspector may ask the authorities to temporarily close the establishment under investigation.(38) Law No. 13/2009 permits labor inspectors to enter workplaces only during normal business hours, even though ILO C. 81, which Rwanda has ratified, notes that inspectors should be able to enter workplaces at all times.(47) Labor inspection reports do not contain information related to the worst forms of child labor.(48) Data regarding child labor inspections, citations, and penalties are not publicly available.(17, 46)

Labor law enforcement agencies at the district level have also been reported to take actions to combat child labor.(49) Performance contracts signed between the President and district authorities also include targets for reducing child labor and increasing school enrollment.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The RNP operates an anti-trafficking unit within the force’s Interpol directorate that is staffed with 15 full-time officers.(12, 17, 18, 50) However, RNP officials report that the unit has insufficient officers to address the problem.(8) In addition, evidence suggests that some RNP staff members are not sensitive to the needs of child trafficking victims, and that some children found engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and market vending were detained in transit centers for months.(12) Some officials also lack awareness and training about the laws on internal trafficking.(8, 50) With support from Interpol, the RNP operates an office at the Kigali International Airport to combat trafficking in persons and it plans to open 13 more offices at border crossings.(12, 51) During the reporting period, the RNP and the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPROF) expanded training and outreach on trafficking in persons to encourage collaboration with investigators.(17)

The Government continued to operate a network of 15 “One-Stop” centers in hospitals and district capitals for victims of gender-based violence and trafficking, including those who have experienced child domestic servitude, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor. These centers provide medical exams, counseling, legal assistance, short-term shelter, and police assistance.(18) In 2014, the RNP referred some child domestic workers and children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation to “One-Stop” centers for police assistance, legal aid, shelter, medical exams, and counseling.(12, 17) Within villages, citizens can report instances of child labor to the RNP or to a local volunteer officer in charge of social affairs. If the officer cannot resolve the problem, it may be referred to the village leader, who in turn may contact the RNP.(42) Although the RNP operates a free hotline staffed by social workers to report incidences of gender-based violence and child abuse, including child labor, it is unknown how many of these complaints were related to child labor.(18, 41, 42)

From June 2013 to June 2014, the RNP arrested and referred 10 suspected human traffickers for prosecution, of which three were convicted under Articles 252 or 255 of the Penal Code and four were acquitted. Between June 2014 and February 2015, the RNP arrested 24 individuals suspected of being involved in human trafficking; of these, 6 were prosecuted, 4 convicted, and 2 acquitted.(18) Research did not find information about the punishments assigned in these cases, and it is unclear how many of these cases, if any, involved child trafficking crimes. The cases against 21 individuals remain pending judicial review or prosecution.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

It is unclear how the Integrated Child Rights Policy (ICRP) and its Strategic Plan are coordinated with the National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor and the 5-Year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. In addition, current budget allocations may not be sufficient for the full implementation of the ICRP.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Rwanda funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

In 2012, MIGEPROF announced that it would begin phasing out Rwanda’s orphanages and integrating children with families across the country. In 2013, MIGEPROF closed four orphanages.\(^{8, 12, 86, 87}\) It is too early to determine the impact that the closing of childcare institutions will have on child labor. The Government aimed to place all children with families and transform existing orphanages into institutions to support children and families in 2014, but it was unable to meet this goal.\(^{88}\)
