LORTON WOMAN CONVICTED OF FAILING TO PAY WITHHOLDING TAXES TO IRS SENTENCED

(Alexandria, Va.) – Celina V. Lord, age 49, of Lorton, Va., who was convicted by a federal jury in Alexandria of failing to pay more than $330,000 in taxes withheld from employees' paychecks, was sentenced today to 21 months in prison, followed by 3 years' supervised release.

John A. DiCicco, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Tax Division, Neil H. MacBride, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, and C. André Martin, Special Agent in Charge of the Internal Revenue Service Criminal Investigation's Washington, D.C., Field Office, made the announcement.

According to court documents and evidence at trial, Lord was the chief financial officer for ASSC, Inc., a company that provided a variety of services such as janitorial supplies, waste management and laundry services. From June 2002 through June 2004, Lord and the president of the company, Linda R. Smith, age 46, of Lorton, Va., failed to pay the Social Security, Medicare and federal income taxes due that had been withheld from the wages of ASSC employees. Lord took on the title of president and managed the day-to-day operations at ASSC for much of that period while Smith was unable to work because of personal and family health problems.

On Sept. 11, 2009, Smith, who had pled guilty to one count of failing to account for, collect and pay over employment taxes and cooperated in the government's investigation, was sentenced to 12 months home confinement and three years supervised release. Both defendants were also ordered to pay restitution of $776,849.47.

This case was investigated by the IRS Criminal Investigation. Assistant United States Attorney Charles Connolly and Trial Attorney Caryn Mark from the Tax Division of the U.S. Department of Justice are prosecuting the case on behalf of the United States.
