The DASH Eating Plan

The DASH Diet Eating Plan

Home • The DASH Diet Book • DASH Diet Recipes • Health Links • DASH Diet Tools • Site Map

The DASH diet is recommended to many people with hypertension (high blood pressure) or prehypertension by their physicians. The DASH diet eating plan has been proven to lower blood pressure in studies sponsored by the National Institutes of Health (Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension). The DASH diet is based on an eating plan rich in fruits and vegetables, and low-fat or non-fat dairy. The full DASH diet plan is shown below. New research continues to show additional health benefits of the plan.

In addition to being recommended by your physician, the heart healthy DASH diet is also recommended by:

- The National Institutes of Health
- The American Heart Association
- The 2005 Dietary Guidelines for Americans
- US guidelines for treatment of high blood pressure
- and, the DASH diet formed the basis for the new USDA MyPyramid

The DASH eating plan has been proven to lower blood pressure in just 14 days. Dash response came in people whose blood pressure was only moderately high, including those with prehypertension. For people with more severe hypertension, who may not be able to eliminate medication, the DASH diet can help improve response to medication, and help lower blood pressure. The DASH diet can help lower cholesterol, and with weight loss and exercise can reduce insulin resistance.

The book The DASH Diet Action Plan provides real life solutions to make it easy for people to follow the heart healthy DASH diet. It has 28 days of meal plans (with adjustments for various calorie levels), recipes, guidance for weight loss, how to eat at restaurants, fast food places, etc. and still stay on track. It shows you how to organize your kitchen for the DASH diet, how to read food labels to make good choices.

Don't trust — E-Verify

The voluntary program is an effective way to keep illegal immigrants out of the workforce.

Lamar Smith and Elton Gallegly

Over the last few years, our economy has faced unprecedented challenges, and millions of Americans have lost their jobs. For two years, the unemployment rate has hovered around 9%.

While 26 million Americans are unemployed or underemployed, 7 million individuals work illegally in the United States. On top of all the challenges Americans face today, it is inexcusable that Americans and legal workers have to compete with illegal immigrants for scarce jobs.

Fortunately, there is a tool available to preserve jobs for legal workers: E-Verify. But the program is voluntary. Congress has the opportunity to expand E-Verify — including making it mandatory — so more job opportunities are made available to unemployed Americans.

Created under the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996, E-Verify is a Web-based system that allows employers to electronically verify the work eligibility of newly hired employees. The Social Security numbers and alien identification numbers of new hires are checked against Social Security Administration and Department of Homeland Security records to weed out fraudulent numbers and help ensure that new hires are legally authorized to work in the United States.

The program quickly confirms 96.5% of work-eligible employees. Even though E-Verify is not mandatory, many employers willingly use the program. More than 250,000 American employers currently use it, and an average of 1,360 new businesses sign up each week.

Part of the reason for E-Verify's success is that participating employers are happy with the results. Outside evaluations have found that the vast majority of employers using E-Verify believe it to be an effective and reliable tool for checking the legal status of their employees. In fact, after being subjected to several Immigration and Customs Enforcement I-9 audits, Chipotle now uses E-Verify at all of its restaurants nationwide to help ensure that it hires legal workers.

E-Verify has proved to be much more reliable than the current paper based, error-prone I-9 system. Under the I-9 system, the employer only has to attest that an identification document "reasonably appears on its face to be genuine." The problem is that fake documents are produced by the millions and can be obtained cheaply. This has undermined the I-9 system.

In addition, when the National Federation for Independent Business polled its members, 76% said it would be a minimal or no burden if "there was one telephone number and/or a single Internet website where you could check a new employee's eligibility to work, something like a merchant's capacity to check the validity of a credit card." This describes E-Verify.

And E-Verify recently received an exceptionally high overall customer satisfaction score — 82 out of 100 on the American Customer Satisfaction Index scale. The government's overall satisfaction score is only 69.

With this sort of track record, it is no surprise that 82% of likely voters responding to a recent Rasmussen poll thought businesses should be required to use E-Verify.

Last year, the U.S. Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services implemented a photo-matching tool as part of E-Verify. This allows an employer to view a picture of the employee — from a green card, an employment authorization document or a passport — to determine that the employee is in fact the person to whom that Social Security number or alien identification number was issued.

The Department of Homeland Security also recently announced the rollout of the E-Verify self-check system. This will allow job-seekers to check their own employment status and resolve immigration problems before applying for a position. Although E-Verify self-check is available only in a handful of states, it is expected to expand to other states within a year.

E-Verify is a successful tool for employers looking to hire a legal workforce. It also helps reduce the jobs magnet that encourages illegal immigration. In fact, since the implementation of Arizona state legislation requiring the use of E-Verify, the state has seen a 17% decrease in its illegal immigrant population, according to the Public Policy Institute of California.

That's why the House Judiciary Committee is focused on making E-Verify mandatory.

It is crucial that we promote policies that help grow our economy and increase job opportunities for Americans and legal immigrants. This includes building on the successes of the E-Verify program and making it mandatory through a gradual phase-in for all employers. Of course, mandatory E-Verify should be coupled with a "safe harbor" for employers who use the program correctly and, through no fault of theirs, receive an incorrect eligibility confirmation.

As long as opportunities for employment exist, the incentive to enter the United States illegally or to overstay visas will continue and efforts to stop illegal entry at U.S. borders will be undermined. It is time to make E-Verify mandatory.

Rep. Lamar Smith (R-Texas) is the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and Rep. Elton Gallegly (R-Simi Valley) is chairman of the subcommittee on immigration policy and enforcement.

Long Beach's David Garcia took special care of the neediest on his beat, even as he battled cancer.

Ron Pool

Long Beach Police Officer David A. Garcia demonstrated his courage on one of his first days on the force.

It was 1981, and Garcia was a probationary officer under the supervision of a field training officer.

"Pull over the car!" Garcia told the older policeman during a patrol.

When the cruiser stopped, Garcia jumped out and rescued an injured pigeon that was struggling at the side of the road. Placing the bird gently into a box, he directed the training officer to drive to a veterinarian's office.

Other Long Beach police officers say that's the way Garcia was until the very end, when he succumbed Feb. 7 to a long battle with cancer.

The 44-year-old officer would begin every night shift on the city's north side by dedicating pet food from the back of his car and piling it into the trunk of his police cruiser.

As he patrolled Long Beach's darkened avenues, Garcia watched for homeless people with dogs. If the down-and-out person's pet was hungry, Garcia would pull a few cans of dog food from the trunk and leave the owner there would be more if needed.

"He'd stop and find out the dog's name and what kind of care it was getting. He paid for flea collars and for their dogs to go to groomers," said Officer Barb Mortensen, who worked with Garcia for 15 years.

To the uninitiated, Garcia "was no nonsense, the law is the law guy," Mortensen said. "But he'd say, 'Aw, dude need help.' He didn't want anything bad to happen to them."

CARING: Garcia was particularly known for helping homeless people care for their pets.

Garcia regularly left bowls of water and cat food for feral cats living in various city parks and in the police station parking lot. As a result, petrol cars always had tuna cans in them.

often find animals hit by cars in the dark. Dave would always make sure that animal control got there in a timely manner. If they were late, he'd get on the radio and tell them to hurry up," said Officer Marie Talavera, a friend for two decades.

"One homeless man Dave befriended has a dog named Sasha, and occasionally he gets picked up because misdemeanor violations have gone to warrant. Dave wanted to make certain that Sasha was taken care of when his owner was in jail, so he arranged for a lady in a trailer park to take care of the dog on those occasions," Talavera said.

"Dave bought a tag with the lady's name and phone number on it for Sasha. He would pay for her to take Sasha to the groomer's and pay for her flea bath and gas."

Garcia regularly purchased shirts for homeless people and made a point of checking on an elderly Long Beach woman who walked her dog between midnight and 4 a.m. every night.

Garcia was honored by Long Beach officials for
