Deanna

Coleman: Deanna Coleman calling Tom Petters, Wednesday, Sept. 10th at 3:55.

Tom

Petters: Hello.

Coleman: Hi Tom.

Petters: Hi.

Coleman: Um, I talked to Frank.

Petters: (UI).

Coleman: What's that?

Petters: Okay, I'll call you guys back. I'm on the phone with Thane Ritchie. They're about to have a heart attack. What? Frank what?

Coleman: Oh, anyway, he has several purchase orders so I'm on my way back to the office and I'll do, make up two purchase orders for him for today and tomorrow or it'll be probably closer to three.

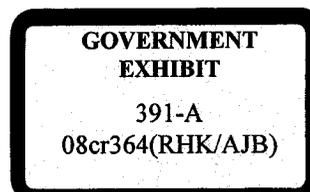

Petters: I thought he didn't want PO's. I was on the email.

Coleman: You're what?

Petters: Sorry, I'm in a really bad frame of mind right now. Sorry, I'm not, don't sound like, I'm just trying to negotiate with Ritchie and I'm about ready to say I'm gotta file bankruptcy and I didn't.

Coleman: Do you want me to do the purchase orders for Frank?

Petters: Um, I don't know. I haven't been, I'm just, my mind is unmeshed in this other thing right now, you know, on the other line, but I'll get on the phone and try to call and get David, with Ritchie trying to settled their deal you know, and it just, I can't tell you Deanna, and it's taking everything I got in my fuckin, to not blow up with Thane, you know?

Coleman: Right.

Petters: Ugh, but we'll get through this, I got one good news, Henry's called Frank twice this afternoon and try to get their letters written up for his fund and for the other fund, so um, my head is so deep, I'm so mad right now, I think I'm gonna have a stroke.

Coleman: Well, should I do the purchase orders then or should I wait?

Petters: I'm trying to decide what it's for, I can't even think, it seriously, I'm not sure if I didn't have a stroke, so what did, what did the purchases orders, you mean the purchase orders are...

Coleman: For rolling the note, because they're 182-183 days today.

Petters: Yeah, but I thought we had to do like 60 purchase orders?

Coleman: Well, there's only two or three of 'em today, I thought it was closer to 20 million, I guess it's only like 14 - 15 million that's due today and tomorrow, and there's another 30 million that's due on Friday, and...

Petters: Yeah.

Coleman: ...then there will be quite a few next week.

Petters: I guess we don't have a choice.

Coleman: So if we can get through today...Yeah.

Petters: Yeah, I guess we don't have a choice. Yeah.

Coleman: So do the purchase orders?

Petters: So if I get these offers put together then you know what we gonna have to do is go work real hard on it, on, on, on, we're gonna have to work real hard on, on, so we're gonna have to work real hard, (UI) 90 days and that's it.

Coleman: Do what, I can't hear you?

Petters: Sell the licenses on Polaroid, ya know, around the world.

Coleman: Oh.

Petters: We gotta go sell them. We got one sold for 350 million already and we gotta go sell more.

Coleman: Right.

Petters: Until then I just gotta get, uh, I'm just sorry I'm in such a bad way right now.

Coleman: When is whatchamacallit coming on the half of Polaroid that we did sell?

Petters: Well, we sold it, we could only get two hundred million and that, you know, probably a hundred, hopefully, a hundred next week, and hopefully a hundred the week after, but I gotta go fly overseas to get it done. Just found that out, ugh, God. So I'm really stressed right at this second, baby.

Coleman: That's okay.

Petters: Nothing about even what you're talking about. I know you're stressed, but uh, let me talk to Thane and I guess we'll do a couple of 'em, I guess that answered your question.

Coleman: Okay. I just wondered if you wanted me to do 'em or not, so....

Petters: Yeah, you know I don't want you to, but I think, I don't know what choice we have, do you?

Coleman: No, I don't.

Petters: I hear ya. Well, it's all the (UI) I know, I gotta get back to this call.

Coleman: Okay, I will talk to you later.

Petters: Thanks, Deanna.

Coleman: Okay.

Petters: Okay, bye.

Coleman: Bye.
