WEB-DESIGNER SENTENCED TO A YEAR IN PRISON FOR UNLAWFUL COMPUTER INTRUSION CONVICTION

ALBUQUERQUE – This afternoon, a federal judge sentenced Andrew West, 40, of Albuquerque, to a year and a day of imprisonment for his conviction for accessing a protected computer without authorization and with the intention of committing fraud and obtaining money. West will be on supervised release for three years after completing his prison sentence. West also was ordered to pay $5,085.07 in restitution to the victims of his crime.

U.S. Attorney Kenneth J. Gonzales said that West entered a guilty plea to an information charging him with accessing a protected computer without authorization and with the intention of committing fraud and obtaining money in Nov. 2011, in Bernalillo County, N.M.

According to West's plea agreement, in early Nov. 2011, West executed a scheme to defraud an artist who routinely sold his artwork through on-line sales and collected payment using a PayPal account. West admitted that he obtained unauthorized access to the victim's computer system and caused the payments that were intended to go into the victim's PayPal account to be diverted to a PayPal account West created and controlled. Between Nov. 6, 2011 and Nov. 17, 2011, West unlawfully diverted more than $4000 intended for the victim's account to an account that West controlled. Under the terms of the plea agreement, West will pay restitution to the victim of his crime.

The case was investigated by the FBI as part of its Cyber Criminal Computer Intrusion Initiative, and was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney John C. Anderson.
