

The Bribery Schemes

5. Between in or about August 2011 and April 2013,

DANIEL J. HALLORAN,

the defendant, engaged in separate, but related,

bribery schemes:

a. MALCOLM A. SMITH engaged in a scheme to bribe New York City Republican Party county committee leaders in an effort to appear on the Republican ballot for New York City Mayor in 2013. DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, in exchange for cash payments totaling tens of thousands of dollars, assisted SMITH in bribing committee leaders by arranging meetings with them and negotiating the bribe payments.

VINCENT TABONE and JOSEPH J. SAVINO accepted cash bribes totaling $40,000 in exchange for their agreements to use their offices as Vice Chairman and Chairman of Republican Party county committees to approve and obtain approval for SMITH to run as a Republican candidate for New York City Mayor. During the scheme, SMITH used an undercover FBI agent (the "UC") and a cooperating witness (the "CW") to negotiate and pay the bribes on his behalf.

b. DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, accepted bribes in exchange for his use of his office as a New York City Council Member to allocate City funds to a company he understood was controlled by the UC and the CW; and

THE NEW YORK CITY COUNCIL CONSULTING CONTRACT BRIBE SCHEME

20. On or about September 7, 2012, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, met the CW at a restaurant in Manhattan. During the meeting, HALLORAN explained to the CW that he was seeking matching funds for his congressional campaign from the national Republican Party. The CW offered to give HALLORAN money for his campaign. The CW later asked HALLORAN if he could obtain discretionary funding from the City Council budget for the CW, and HALLORAN said he could. After listing various projects that he funds through City Council discretionary funding, HALLORAN stated, "So now you come in and tell me what we got to do. Not an issue, not an issue." Later in the conversation, HALLORAN said:

That's politics, that's politics, it's all about how much. Not about whether or will, it's about how much, and that's our politicians in New York, they're all like that, all like that. And they get like that because of the drive that the money does for everything else. You can't do anything without the fucking money.

During the meeting, the CW paid HALLORAN $7,500 in cash. Near the end of the conversation, HALLORAN remarked "Money is what greases the wheels — good, bad, or indifferent."

21. On or about September 27, 2012, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, met the CW and the UC at a hotel in Manhattan. During the meeting, the UC gave HALLORAN $6,500 in checks made payable to his congressional campaign that were issued on the accounts of other individuals. The CW later asked HALLORAN for $20,000 from City

Council discretionary funds and HALLORAN said: “Absolutely, that’s easy, that’s not even an issue, not even an issue. . . . In fact, . . . I might even be able to get you more.” HALLORAN then told the CW to provide him with a tax identification number, the name and address of a corporation, and an application for discretionary funding “so that there’s no questions, it raises no flags, and everybody’s got it like it’s gotta be. You do it the right way, not a problem, then you will definitely have my, my member item.” HALLORAN, the UC and the CW then raised their glasses and the CW said, “Pleasure doing business with you.”

22. On or about October 18, 2012, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, met the CW and the UC at a restaurant in Queens. During the meeting, HALLORAN suggested, in substance, that HALLORAN give discretionary money from the City Council to the UC and the CW by granting them a contract to perform consulting work on a senior center in Queens (the “Senior Center Project”). The UC told HALLORAN, in substance, that the UC did not intend to do any work on the project but was instead interested in “basically a no show” job. HALLORAN then told the UC that the Senior Center Project in his district might provide what the UC was looking for. During the meeting, the UC paid HALLORAN $800 in cash.

23. On or about October 23, 2012, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, emailed in interstate commerce to the Holding Company a letter on New York City Council letterhead addressed to three other organizations stating that HALLORAN would allocate City Council discretionary funding up to $80,000 for the Senior Center Project. That same day, HALLORAN sent text messages to the CW requesting, in substance, at least $20,000 from the CW and the UC.

24. On or about November 11, 2012, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, emailed in interstate commerce a letter to the Holding Company on New York City Council letterhead requesting that the Holding Company consult on the Senior Center Project and stating that HALLORAN would allocate up to $80,000 in City Council discretionary funding for the Holding Company's work on the project.

25. On or about the following dates, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, received from the UC and the CW the following payments in connection with the above-described scheme as well as the scheme to bribe New York City Republican Party county committee leaders described below, in the forms and at the locations listed below:

THE CONSPIRACY TO BRIBE NEW YORK CITY POLITICAL PARTY OFFICIALS

26. On or about April 26, 2012, MALCOLM A. SMITH met the CW at a restaurant in Rockland County, New York. During that meeting, SMITH stated that he was considering running for New York City Mayor in 2013 on the Republican Party ballot.

27. On or about August 8, 2012, MALCOLM A. SMITH met the CW at the same Rockland County restaurant.

During the meeting, SMITH told the CW, in substance, that he was meeting with the five New York City Republican Party county committee leaders the following week to discuss obtaining a Wilson Pakula certificate from each.

29. On or about November 16, 2012, MALCOLM A. SMITH met with the UC and the CW at a hotel in White Plains, New York. During the meeting, SMITH and the CW discussed SMITH's plan to run for New York City Mayor. SMITH told the CW that one of the Republican Party county committee leaders ("County Chairman #1") was supporting someone else. When the CW suggested that the CW might be able to influence County Chairman #1, SMITH responded: "If you can change him, call me. Seriously." The CW said that the CW knew someone close to County Chairman #1, and SMITH said: "I need you to make that phone call. . . . If you can change him that would be huge." A short time later, SMITH reiterated, "If you can switch him, if you can switch him, that would be huge."

30. Later on November 16, 2012, the UC met DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, in Queens. During the meeting, the UC asked HALLORAN if he knew County Chairman #1. HALLORAN said he knew County Chairman #1 well, and HALLORAN said, in substance, that he could find out what it would take to obtain County Chairman #1's support for a candidate for New York City Mayor. The UC and HALLORAN also discussed HALLORAN contacting JOSEPH J. SAVINO for the same purpose.

31. Later on November 16, 2012, the UC met again with MALCOLM A. SMITH at a hotel in Manhattan to report to SMITH on the UC's discussion earlier that day with DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant. SMITH, referring to County Chairman #1, stated, "I want him done. I want him done. I want him to say, 'You know what, Malcolm, we did make a commitment to you early on We're going back to that.' I want him done." Later in the conversation, the UC said: "Look, what I, what I need to know is, if it's a small thing, that's fine. Do I . . . is this worth going to the bank to . . . ?" SMITH replied: "This is a big thing."

32. On or about January 25, 2013, MALCOLM A. SMITH met the CW in Rockland County, New York. During the meeting, the CW told SMITH that obtaining the Republican Party county committee leaders' support for Smith would cost "a pretty penny" and asked "It's worth any price?" SMITH replied, "Look, talk to me before you close it. But it's worth it. Because you know how big a deal it is."

33. On or about January 25, 2013, an undercover FBI agent ("UC-2") posing as a courier for the UC met with DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, in Manhattan. UC-2 delivered to HALLORAN $5,000 in cash for HALLORAN's agreement to arrange meetings with JOSEPH J. SAVINO and VINCENT TABONE, the defendants.

34. On or about January 31, 2013, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, met the UC at a restaurant in Queens to discuss making payments to VINCENT TABONE and JOSEPH J. SAVINO. HALLORAN told the UC, in substance, that TABONE wanted $100,000 paid to TABONE and $50,000 paid to the Queens County Republican Party. HALLORAN also said that he believed that SAVINO would need to be paid only $15,000 or $20,000.

35. On or about February 1, 2013, DANIEL J. HALLORAN and JOSEPH J. SAVINO, the defendants, met with the UC at a restaurant in Manhattan. The meeting was arranged by HALLORAN. During the meeting, HALLORAN, SAVINO and the UC discussed getting MALCOLM A. SMITH on the Republican ballot as a candidate for Mayor of New York City. SAVINO, in substance, said that if the UC purchased insurance from SAVINO's insurance agency or sent work to SAVINO's law firm that would make things, "very easy." SAVINO also said: "everybody needs to pay their mortgage."

36. Later on February 1, 2013, DANIEL J. HALLORAN and VINCENT TABONE, the defendants, met with the UC in Manhattan. HALLORAN arranged the meeting. During the meeting, TABONE, HALLORAN and the UC discussed the possibility of TABONE obtaining a Wilson Pakula certificate for SMITH.

37. On or about February 5, 2013, the UC spoke by telephone with DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, and HALLORAN reported that he had spoken with, among others, VINCENT TABONE and JOSEPH J. SAVINO, and they had, “agreed to do what [HALLORAN] asked them.”

38. On or about February 8, 2013, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, met in Manhattan with the CW and the UC. During the meeting, HALLORAN gave the following instructions to the CW and the UC: “So, look, you gotta, you gotta get [SAVINO] business but put twenty-five in an envelope. . . . [TABONE] is twenty-five up front, twenty-five when the Wilson Pakula is delivered. So, he wants, and he doesn’t care about [the Queens County Republican Party] getting anything at this point.”

39. On or about February 10, 2013, MALCOLM A. SMITH met with the CW and the UC in a hotel room in Manhattan. The UC told SMITH: “We have all five” and that DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, was “the one to make this whole thing happen.” The UC further stated: “I have a number from every one of them” and that, in total, it would cost in the range of “two hundred grand.” As described further below, SMITH, the UC, and the CW discussed: (a) directing the payments to the committee leaders personally and not to the Republican Party; (b) making partial payments to ensure that the committee leaders actually obtained Wilson Pakula certificates for SMITH; (c) keeping the payments secret; and (d) making an appropriate payment to VINCENT TABONE whose support SMITH thought was particularly important.

40. During the conversation, the UC told MALCOLM A. SMITH that the payments would be made to the committee leaders personally and not to the Republican Party. For example, the UC said: “We’ve gone away from giving some donations to parties. I didn’t want to get involved with that mess.” Later in the conversation, the following exchange occurred:

UC: We’re going to do it in a way that there’s no ties to me. You mean - we’re going to go play golf somewhere, and your [the Committee leaders], your golf bag will be a little heavier when you, when you leave the course.

SMITH: Mm, hmm.

UC: We’ll -- I’ll lose a couple of bets to you, we’ll go to Vegas, and you’ll cash in some chips, whatever. An envelope, you know?

SMITH: I, I just - now there’s, there’s no question that there’s been movement. I mean, I know, you know, believe me.

UC: That’s understatement.

SMITH: The conversations and the calls and, you know, that I’ve gotten from them, and you know. . . .

UC: They want to support you now.

SMITH: Oh, yeah.

The UC also told SMITH that the payments would be to committee leaders who “have financial needs and want to be taken care of.” The UC mentioned that these needs included college tuition for one committee leader and mortgage payments for another.

41. During the conversation, the UC also told SMITH that the payments would be structured so that they would be “half up front” and the “other half” would be after the committee leaders “deliver.” The UC said that he would tell the committee leaders: “[Y]ou’re going to get half now and when you deliver, you’ll get the other half.” In response, SMITH said,

“Right.” Later in the conversation, SMITH cautioned: “I wouldn’t give them more than like ten, just to, just to start out. . . .”

42. During the conversation, the UC and SMITH also discussed that payments would be made so that there would be, “no trace back” to the UC or the CW. SMITH suggested that the payments be made via retainer agreements between the committee leaders and the UC, leaving no connection to SMITH. The UC said that the UC did not want any written contracts to tie the UC and the committee leaders together and SMITH suggested that the retainer agreements could be done “on a handshake.” When the discussion returned to the topic of making sure that the committee leaders actually followed through and delivered the Wilson Pakula certificates, SMITH suggested, “hav[ing] them sign a piece of paper or something.” The UC responded: “No, no, I’m not signing anything,” and SMITH replied: “That’s true, you don’t want to do that.”

43. At one point during the conversation, the CW, the UC and SMITH discussed the possibility of a prominent person endorsing SMITH’s candidacy for mayor. The CW told SMITH that TABONE indicated that he “could deliver” this endorsement for the “right amount.” SMITH responded, “That’s the one we need to do.”

45. Later on February 10, 2013, the UC and the CW met with DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, and MALCOLM A. SMITH. SMITH said to HALLORAN, “You’ve been busy,” and HALLORAN responded that it had been, “a heavy lift.”

46. DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, and the UC had a follow-up conversation after the meeting with MALCOLM A. SMITH described immediately above, during which they discussed scheduling meetings with VINCENT TABONE and JOSEPH J. SAVINO for the purpose of making payments to them. During this follow-up conversation, the UC made a $500 cash payment to HALLORAN.

47. On or about February 14, 2013, during the evening, the UC and the CW met with DANIEL J. HALLORAN and JOSEPH J. SAVINO, the defendants, at a restaurant in Manhattan. At one point during the evening, the UC and JOSEPH J. SAVINO stepped outside of the restaurant so they could meet privately in the UC’s car. In the car, the UC paid SAVINO $15,000 in cash. SAVINO and the UC agreed that the UC would pay SAVINO an additional $15,000 after SAVINO signed a Wilson Pakula certificate for SMITH. During the conversation in the UC’s car, SAVINO, who is a lawyer, proposed that he send the UC a retainer agreement for $15,000 in legal services. The UC told SAVINO, “If you need some bullshit number, or something, to call it . . . just invoice me for something,” and SAVINO responded, “Yeah, absolutely.” The UC elaborated: “If you want a number to call and say somebody answered it, and you spent a couple of hours, whatever you need,” and SAVINO responded, “Fantastic, good.” Shortly thereafter, SAVINO said, “[Another County Chairman is] on board so we already got two.”

48. Later during the evening of February 14, 2013, the UC spoke separately with VINCENT TABONE at the same restaurant in Manhattan. The UC suggested paying TABONE, “Twenty now, twenty later” and TABONE responded, “I was thinking twenty-five now, twenty-five later.” TABONE also told the UC that he would send the UC a retainer agreement for the money. The UC said that rather than pay a lump sum retainer, he would make an up-front payment and then pay the other “half” later. TABONE stated, in substance, that he was “making [a] commitment” to get SMITH a Wilson Pakula certificate. The UC asked whether TABONE, as the Vice Chairman of the Queens County Republican Party Committee, could deliver a Wilson Pakula certificate, and TABONE said, “I run the Queens County Republican Party. Nobody else runs the party. I run the party.” During the conversation, TABONE frisked the UC in an apparent effort to make sure that the UC was not recording their conversation. The UC was, in fact, recording the conversation.

49. During the evening of February 14, 2013, the UC and VINCENT TABONE stepped outside the restaurant to go to the UC’s car where the UC paid TABONE $25,000 in cash.

50. On or about February 15, 2013, DANIEL J. HALLORAN, the defendant, met the UC at a hotel in Manhattan. During the meeting, the UC paid HALLORAN $15,000 in cash in exchange for HALLORAN having arranged the meetings the day before with JOSEPH J. SAVINO and VINCENT TABONE .

51. On or about February 17, 2013, MALCOLM A. SMITH and the UC had a telephone conversation during which the UC and SMITH discussed paying a bribe to County Chairman #1 and SMITH said, in substance, that County Chairman #1 should receive “less” than VINCENT TABONE and JOSEPH J. SAVINO and that County Chairman #1 should be told that he is receiving less because he would be the fourth chairman to sign a Wilson Pakula certificate, and SMITH only needed three signatures. The UC was in North Carolina when this telephone conversation with SMITH took place.

52. On or about March 21, 2013, MALCOLM A. SMITH met with the UC and the CW in SMITH's New York State Senate office in Albany, New York.

53. The conversation turned to the New York City Republican Party county committee leaders. The UC told SMITH that, "April 3rd, they're going to meet. . . . They're going to get together. . . . They're going to do their little kabuki dance. . . . They're going to discuss it. . . . And they got a hundred thousand dollar reasons to come out and say hey, here we go." SMITH replied, "You gave it to them already?" and the UC responded, "Yeah. Okay, now, no, no, no, I gave them – like we discussed – half. . . . They gotta come through." Later in the conversation the UC said, "Right now they have a small upper hand, because they got the first half of their pay, but then once they get that, we need them to now, now I push their buttons." SMITH replied:

Whatever you gave them, you know, is you know there. And trust me, they don't, even if they screw, let's just say they screwed you and me and said, you know, I'm not doing anything. The worst part about that is, when you screw somebody over money like that, . . . you know, that's the worst . . . you're looking over your shoulder all the rest of your life. . . . You're looking over your shoulder, because, because, not only that, this world is too small

. . . . Yeah, the world is too small. And any time you do that, imagine you came to me and said, Malcolm, they screwed me. . . . I got them already asking me about judgeships, because you know judgeships now come through here, it comes through the governor.

54. Later in the conversation, SMITH said, "If they screw you, they screw . . . Listen, I'd rather them say, you know what, no I'm not gonna do it. But, I know they haven't said that, but they're screwed if they try to play the game and string it along." The CW then said, "I think the only thing is, maybe a shakedown for a little bit more." SMITH responded:

Yeah, but I wouldn't do. I wouldn't touch 'em. I wouldn't. You know what? I'd say I wouldn't even touch that. . . . I'd say absolutely not. I'd say I'm not giving you a freaking dime. I'd say, if I even give you a nickel more, you'd have to stand on the Empire State Building, and drop every person you endorsed, and hold Malcolm up and say he's the best thing since sliced bread. Matter of fact, he's better than sliced bread.

55. The UC said, "What I can do, and we should talk about is, maybe if they want to up the ante a little bit on the back end, but then they're going to have to do more." SMITH responded, "Let's close the deal. I mean, I'm just saying, I wouldn't do anything with them until you close the first deal. I would close it first."

56. Later in the conversation, the UC said, "I may be naive in this back world." SMITH replied, "Business is business. They understand. You don't take somebody's money and just go, you know. Life is too short, I'm telling you, it comes back around fast." The UC said, "And they're all crying about what they, you know they need this, they need that, you know." SMITH then asked, "They are crying about what?" The UC replied, "All this stuff with mon . . . oh, I got a kid in college, I got debt, I got debts, whatever, I got a vacation home." SMITH responded, "You know what you do? Tell him, tell him I got a kid in Albany that needs to be born. So, when you birth him, when you birth my child up in Albany, I'll, I'll help you with your kid."
