FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA : CRIMINAL NO. 15- 549
v. : DATE FILED: NOVEMBER 19, 2015
COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP : VIOLATIONS:
STEVEN KESSLER : 18 U.S.C. § 371 (conspiracy – 1 count)
: 31 U.S.C. § 5324(a)(3) (structuring – 8 counts)
: NOTICE OF FORFEITURE

INDICTMENT

COUNT ONE

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES THAT:

At all times material to this indictment:

1. Defendant COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP was a licensed check cashing business in northeast Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It offered a variety of consumer financial services, including a check cashing service. It was owned and operated by three individuals, one of whom was defendant STEVEN KESSLER. The three owners were also the only three employees of defendant COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP.
2. Defendant STEVEN KESSLER was a resident of New Jersey who was a partial owner of defendant COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP, and one of its three employees.
3. Jerold J. Cohen, charged elsewhere, ran a sports bookmaking operation in the Philadelphia area for approximately 30 years, accepting bets from others on various sporting events, collecting debts, and distributing winnings. He and defendant STEVEN KESSLER were longtime friends, and defendant KESSLER knew that Cohen was a sports bookmaker and had been one for a long time.

4. Defendant COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP was a domestic financial institution. Title 31, United States Code, Section 5313(a) and regulations implemented pursuant to that section require financial institutions that engage in a currency transaction (e.g., cashing a check) in excess of $10,000 with a customer to report the transaction to the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") on a Currency Transaction Report ("CTR"). CTR reports are required to contain information regarding the identification of the individual cashing a check for more than $10,000 in cash at a financial institution. These regulations also require that multiple transactions be treated as a single transaction if the financial institution has knowledge that they are by, or on behalf of, the same person, and they result in either currency received or disbursed by the financial institution totaling more than $10,000 during any one business day.

5. CTRs are often used by law enforcement and tax authorities to uncover a wide variety of illegal activities such as money laundering and tax fraud. Many individuals engaged in such illegal activities are aware of such reporting requirements and take active steps to cause financial institutions to fail to file CTRs, such as, for example, making multiple cash deposits in amounts less than $10,000 on the same day or on consecutive days. These active steps are often referred to as "structuring." Structuring cash deposits to avoid triggering the filing of a CTR by a financial institution is prohibited by Title 31, United States Code, Section 5324(a).

6. Bettor 1 was an individual who placed wagers with Jerold J. Cohen. Bettor 1 lost large amounts of money on the bets he placed with Cohen, and after negotiating with Cohen about the mechanics of how he would pay his gambling debts to Cohen, Cohen informed Bettor 1 that he knew a check casher who would cash checks for Cohen.

7. To avoid triggering CTR reporting requirements when he converted Bettor 1's checks to cash to settle Bettor 1's gambling debts to him, and thus to conceal from the government the nature of his business and total amount of income, Jerold J. Cohen directed Bettor 1 to make out each of his checks to settle gambling debts for just less than $10,000.

8. Jerold J. Cohen had Bettor 1 write checks payable to "cash" in amounts just under $10,000. Cohen later changed his directions, and instructed Bettor 1 to make the checks out to Bettor 1 with Bettor 1's endorsement on the back of the checks. Cohen explained that the checks should still be made out in amounts of just less than $10,000.

9. Bettor 1 often provided Jerold J. Cohen with multiple checks made out in amounts of just under $10,000 to settle gambling debts to Cohen that totaled more than $10,000.

10. Jerold J. Cohen cashed most of Bettor 1's checks at defendant COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP.

11. From in or about May 2009 to in or about January 2011, in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, defendant conspired and agreed, together and with Jerold J. Cohen and others known and unknown to the grand jury, to commit an offense against the United States, that is, for the purpose of evading the reporting requirements of Title 31, United States Code, Section 5313(a) and the regulations promulgated thereunder, to knowingly structure and assist in structuring transactions with COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP, a domestic financial institution, in violation of Title 31, United States Code, Section 5324(a)(3).

STEVEN KESSLER

MANNER AND MEANS

12. It was part of the conspiracy that defendant STEVEN KESSLER assisted Jerold J. Cohen in structuring his financial transactions with COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP, by cashing many of Cohen's checks himself, by failing to keep business records of most of the transactions, and by making COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP, available to Cohen for his structuring activities.

It was further a part of the conspiracy that:

13. Cohen cashed a total of approximately 76 of Bettor 1's checks at COTTMAN CHECK CASHING, LP, each of them made out in amounts of just under $10,000, for a grand total of approximately $670,175.

14. Defendant STEVEN KESSLER was aware that he would have to report to the government any cash transactions in amounts greater than $10,000 by filing a CTR and knew what it meant to structure cash transactions to avoid the CTR filing requirement.
