INFORMATION

COUNT ONE

THE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY CHARGES THAT:

INTRODUCTION

At all times relevant to this information:

1. The integrity of sporting contests rests on the fundamental principles of fairness, honesty, and respect for the rules of competition. To ensure fair outcomes, these contests depend upon genuine competition, free from corruption, manipulation, and bribery. In 1964, Congress enacted the Sports Bribery Act, codified at Title 18, United States Code, Section 224, to prohibit bribery in sporting contests, recognizing that corrupt influences undermine these principles and erode public confidence in the legitimacy of sport. This statute helps ensure that the organizing institutions, governing bodies, players, coaches, bettors, and fans can trust that every sporting contest is decided on merit, not by corruption.

2. The National Collegiate Athletic Association (“NCAA”) was a non-profit organization that governed college sports and sporting contests in the United States. Collectively, there were more than 350 NCAA Division I colleges that fielded more than 6,000 sports teams and provided opportunities for more than 170,000 players to compete in NCAA sports each year. The NCAA set and enforced rules promoting integrity, sportsmanship, and fair competition. Those rules included specific prohibitions on players, coaches, and other individuals associated with an NCAA sports team from participating in any sports wagering activity, including providing information to individuals involved in or associated with any type of sports wagering activities concerning intercollegiate, amateur, or professional athletics competition.

3. Under NCAA rules, players could earn money for the use of their name, image, and likeness (“NIL”) through activities such as endorsements, sponsorships, and appearances. Division I players were also permitted to enter the “transfer portal” each year and transfer schools without penalty, and players frequently moved between schools in the hopes of obtaining more money through NIL activities or collectives and more opportunities on another team.

4. The Chinese Basketball Association (“CBA”) was the governing body for basketball in China and the name of the country’s top professional basketball league. The CBA comprised more than 300 players in its top men’s league and about 20 teams, which represented cities and corporations throughout China.

5. Gambling outlets such as casinos, online wagering businesses, offshore betting houses, and illegal bookmakers, or “bookies,” accepted wagers on sporting contests, including basketball games. These gambling outlets, often known as sportsbooks, used a “point spread” for sporting events such as basketball games, so that bettors could place wagers based on the relative performance of a team rather than simply betting on which team would win. The point spread was the predicted scoring difference between the two opponents in a sporting contest. The point spread defined which team was the favorite and which team was the “underdog,” that is, the predicted losing team. For a bettor to win a wager placed on the favorite team, the favorite team had to win by more than the point spread number. For a bettor to win a wager placed on the “underdog” team, the “underdog” team had to either win the contest, or lose by less than the point spread number. For example, if Team A was the “underdog” team by three points, then a bettor who bet on Team A would have won the wager if Team A either won the game, or if Team A lost the game by one or two points. Gambling outlets provided point spreads for the outcome of the entire game or a portion of the game, such as the first half or second half, allowing bettors to place multiple bets on a single game. In sports betting, to “cover” a point spread meant a team performed in a way that satisfied the conditions of the point spread set by oddsmakers.

6. Among the options for those wagering on sporting events with gambling outlets, individuals could also bet on games without regard to the point spread, by simply betting on a particular team to win a game. Those bets were called “money line” bets. Individuals could also make “parlay” bets, which were bets comprising two or more individual bets. To succeed on a parlay bet the bettor had to win all the bets made in the parlay. Parlay bets paid out at a higher rate than bets on individual games because they were more difficult to win.

7. A basketball game, or portion of a game, could be manipulated, or “fixed,” by, among other means, a single player or multiple players on one team agreeing to influence the game’s outcome, generally by underperforming or otherwise trying to limit the number of points scored by their team. This allowed individuals gambling on the score of the game, who were working with the players “fixing” the game, to profit by placing a wager on the game with a higher degree of certainty as to the game's outcome. Such a scheme, customarily called "point shaving," involved an effort by a player or players to underperform in a game, or by some other means, to ensure that their team scored only a certain number of points during a game or during a portion of a game. The players involved in fixing a game altered their performance, or supported their teammates altering their performances, based on the point spread on that game so that their team would not "cover" the spread.

8. Defendant COREY HINES, a resident of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was a basketball player in the NCAA. During the 2024-2025 season, defendant HINES was a guard on the Alabama State University Hornets Men's Basketball Team ("Alabama State").

THE SCHEME

9. From at least in or about September 2022 through at least in or about February 2025, in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and elsewhere, defendant along with others known and unknown to the United States Attorney, carried into effect, attempted to carry into effect, conspired with others to carry into effect, and aided and abetted the carrying into effect, the attempt to carry into effect, and the conspiracy to carry into effect, a scheme in commerce to influence by bribery sporting contests, that is, Chinese Basketball Association ("CBA") men's basketball games and National Collegiate Athletic Association ("NCAA") men's basketball games, with defendant HINES engaging in this scheme in connection with Alabama State men's basketball games, with knowledge that the purpose of this scheme was to influence in some way those contests by bribery.

COREY HINES, a/k/a "C.J.,"

MANNER AND MEANS

It was part of the scheme that:

10. Beginning in or about September 2022, a group of individuals known to the United States Attorney (“the fixers”) worked together to recruit and bribe players to help influence or “fix” CBA games through “point shaving” during the 2022-2023 season. The fixers bribed CBA players to fix games and then, through various gambling outlets, placed large wagers on those games against the teams whose players they had bribed.

11. After profiting on the fixed CBA games, the fixers turned their attention to NCAA men’s basketball games. During the 2023-2024 and 2024-2025 NCAA men’s basketball seasons, the fixers agreed to recruit NCAA players who would accept bribe payments in exchange for helping to influence outcomes of NCAA basketball games. In particular, the fixers agreed to recruit into the scheme players who would help ensure that their team failed to cover the spread of the first half of a game or an entire game. The fixers would then place wagers on those games through the gambling outlets, betting against the team whose player or players they had bribed to engage in this point-shaving scheme. Because of the proliferation of legalized sports betting, the fixers could use numerous gambling outlets to make their bets on these games and conceal the scheme from authorities.

12. Five of those fixers, Person A, Person B (charged elsewhere), Person C, Person D, and Person E, all known to the United States Attorney, then approached and communicated with NCAA basketball players, in person and through social media and cellular telephone calls. In these communications, the fixers offered the players bribe payments, usually ranging from $10,000 to $20,000 per game, to participate in the scheme. The fixers also attempted to recruit multiple players from a team to join the point-shaving scheme and further ensure its success. Many of these players accepted the offers and agreed to help fix specific games so that the fixers would win their wagers. The fixers targeted for their scheme NCAA basketball players for whom the bribe payments would meaningfully supplement or exceed legitimate NIL opportunities.

13. Person A, Person B, Person C, Person D, and Person E had credibility with many of the players and could approach them to engage in this scheme because of their prominence, experience, and reputation in local and national basketball communities. Person A was a resident of North Carolina who was active in the training and development of basketball players for professional scouting combines. Person B was a resident of Florida and a former McDonald's All-American and college basketball player who also played professional basketball in the National Basketball Association ("NBA") and overseas and who had himself accepted bribes from his co-schemers to underperform in CBA games. Person C was a resident of Mississippi and a high-stakes sports gambler, social media influencer, and sports handicapper who sold betting advice to others. Person D was a resident of Arkansas and a former coach and trainer for high school and Amateur Athletic Union ("AAU") basketball teams and players. Person E was a resident of New York and a former college basketball player.

14. As the fixers had agreed, Person A, Person B, Person C, Person D, and Person E then communicated with the NCAA basketball players who had agreed to participate in the point-shaving scheme and directed them to underperform or otherwise help influence the outcome of particular games or a specific portion (generally the first half) of particular games.

15. Person A, Person B, Person C, Person D, Person E, and Person F, a resident of Philadelphia and Nevada and a high-stakes sports gambler, also known to the United States Attorney, as well as other co-schemers, then placed bets with numerous gambling outlets on NCAA men's basketball games involving the bribed NCAA players. They placed these bets in a manner that was consistent with the way in which they had arranged to fix the outcome of a game, or a portion of a game, to maximize their chances of winning their wagers. The bribed NCAA players then influenced, attempted to influence, and conspired to influence the outcome of their games through intentionally poor performances, removing themselves from games, supporting their teammates who were also involved in the scheme, and through other means.

16. At times, while Person F was in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the other fixers communicated and strategized about the scheme with Person F, and Person F placed bets on the fixed games with online gambling outlets and in person at casinos. At least one of those fixed games occurred in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. In addition, individual bettors unaware of the scheme placed bets on the fixed games, often on the other side of the fixers' bets, in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, resulting in losses to the individual bettors.

17. When the fixers were successful with their wagers on fixed games, Person A and other co-schemers traveled to NCAA school campuses and made cash bribe payments to the players who had agreed to participate in the scheme. On at least one occasion, Person A traveled to the Eastern District of Pennsylvania through the Philadelphia International Airport to pay one of the bribed players.

18. In or about early December 2024, one of defendant COREY HINES' teammates on the Alabama State men's basketball team, Person G, approached defendant HINES and recruited him to participate in the point-shaving scheme. Person G told defendant HINES that he was working with Person A who was offering bribe payments of approximately $10,000 to Alabama State players who agreed to fix games through point shaving. Person G also told defendant HINES that Person G had also recruited two of their teammates, Person H and Person I, to participate in the scheme, and they had agreed to do so. Defendant HINES then also agreed to participate with his teammates in this scheme.

19. A short time later, and before the December 5, 2024, men's basketball game between Alabama State and Southern Mississippi University ("Southern Mississippi"), Person A engaged in a FaceTime call about the point-shaving scheme with defendant COREY HINES, Person G, Person H, and Person I. Person A told the Alabama State players that Southern Mississippi was favored by approximately 6 points in their upcoming game and that to receive the promised bribe, the players should ensure that Southern Mississippi won the game by more than 6 points. The players agreed to accomplish this goal, understanding that Person A and anyone working with him would be wagering on the game. With four players on the same team agreeing to engage in the scheme together, the scheme was more likely to succeed, and each participant in the scheme could have greater confidence in the scheme's success.

20. On or about December 5, 2024, several hours before the game between Alabama State and Southern Mississippi was scheduled to begin, Person A sent text messages to defendant COREY HINES, Person G, Person H, and Person I to remind them of their roles in the scheme and the bribe that awaited them if they succeeded. Person A told the players, "Lose by 6 full game no excuses on yall end I ain't got no excuses on my end I'm make sure yall situated." Person A emphasized his point, telling the Alabama State players to lose by "like 8" so that he would not “stress.” Defendant HINES and his teammates all agreed to follow Person A’s instructions and make sure that Southern Mississippi covered the spread. Person A then sent a photograph of a large stack of cash that he said he was betting on the game, reminded the players of the spread, and told them that he was going to pay them in $100 bills if the point-shaving scheme succeeded. Defendant HINES and his teammates again communicated to Person A their agreement to participate in the scheme.

21. Shortly before the men’s basketball game between Alabama State and Southern Mississippi on or about December 5, 2024, Person A attempted to place a $50,000 wager at a casino in Kentucky on Southern Mississippi to cover the full-game spread. However, the casino rejected the bet but allowed Person A to wager $860 on Southern Mississippi.

22. On or about December 5, 2024, in the men’s basketball game between Alabama State and Southern Mississippi at the Reed Green Coliseum in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, defendant COREY HINES and his teammates, Person G, Person H, and Person I underperformed in and influenced the game as they had agreed. However, at the end of the first half, Alabama State led Southern Mississippi 33 to 30, causing Person A to send text messages to defendant HINES and his teammates expressing his concern about the score of the game. The Alabama State players again communicated their commitment to the scheme, with one of them explaining that Southern Mississippi was “so bad” that the players were having trouble throwing the game.

23. During the second half of the game, defendant COREY HINES, Person G, Person H, and Person I helped ensure that Alabama State failed to cover the spread. Southern Mississippi outscored Alabama State 51 to 31 in the second half and won the game 81 to 64. Southern Mississippi thus covered the spread, and the fixers won their bets.

24. Shortly after this game, on or about December 5, 2024, Person A engaged in further text message communications with defendant COREY HINES, Person G, Person H, and Person I. Person A told the Alabama State players that he planned to fly to Mississippi to pay them for fixing the Southern Mississippi game. Defendant HINES and the other players communicated in the text exchange their agreement and interest in receiving the bribe payments. However, Person A failed to deliver the promised payments.

All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 224 and 2.
