Amir - When your MCA util % dropped down to 0.99 in Feb., it appeared that the therapists spent more time with the MCA because their MCB census was falling. Do you think that's the case? I know it's back up to 1.14 the second week of March, and right now at 1.027 for March projection, but just make sure you always keep an eye on that. It's an important KPI, because we don't get paid for mins over the cap but we have to pay the labor. So, we need to case manage those patients and make sure they're getting the outcomes we want without providing more care than is necessary. I know you usually keep a good eye on this, so was interested in your thoughts about Feb.

Thanks
