....just want to avoid us processing and labeling 2nd order with names of patients that should be for first order....clients get a little angry when this happens so we need to inform lab so that this does not happen.

I have not gone down that road of discussion. Just telling them we need patient names on second order. is that ok?

I would assume that we will process all orders per facility and process patient info into data base behind the scene.....i did not know if you had a conversation with client

In the past you have waived the patient names for the first order but did not indicate how to process. I would hate to guess. Should I email steve?

Barry,

Please quote

Qty#10 Omnipaque 240 5ml

Customer asked if we repackage omniscan. Is that something we would do. Said doctor wants it for patients allergic to omnipaque.
