On the 10th of July, the same day that the first of the 100,000 people were sent to the concentration camps, the German people were told that the Jews were the cause of the war. This was a lie, but it was a lie that was repeated over and over again. The German people were told that the Jews were the cause of the war, and that they were the only ones who were responsible for the war. The DASH Diet Eating Plan

The DASH diet is recommended to many people with hypertension (high blood pressure) or prehypertension by their physicians. The DASH diet eating plan has been proven to lower blood pressure in studies sponsored by the National Institutes of Health (NIH). Approaches to Stop Hypertension. The DASH diet is based on an eating plan rich in fruits and vegetables, and low-fat dairy products. The full DASH diet plan is shown below. New research continues to show additional health benefits of the plan.

In addition to being recommended by your physician, the heart healthy DASH diet is also recommended by:

- The American Institute of Health
- The American Heart Association
- The 2005 Dietary Guidelines for Americans
- US guidelines for treatment of high blood pressure
- and, the DASH diet formed the basis for the new USDA MyPyramid.

The DASH eating plan has been proven to lower blood pressure in just 14 days. Most responses came in people whose blood pressure was only moderately high, including those with prehypertension. For people with more severe hypertension, who may not be able to eliminate medication, the DASH diet can help improve response to medication, and help lower blood pressure. The DASH diet can help lower cholesterol, and with weight loss and exercise can reduce insulin resistance.

The book, The DASH Diet Action Plan, provides real life solutions to make it easy for people to follow the heart healthy DASH diet. It has 28 days of meal plans (with adjustments for various calorie needs), recipes, guidelines for weight loss, how to eat at restaurants, fast food places, etc. and still stay on track. It shows you how to organize your kitchen for the DASH diet, how to read food labels to make good choices.

Don't trust — E-Verify

The voluntary program is an effective way to keep illegal immigrants out of the workforce.

Lamar Smith
and Elton Gallegly

Over the last few years, our ultimately has faced unprecedented challenges, and millions of Americans have lost their jobs. For two years, the unemployment rate has hovered around 9%.

While 26 million Americans are unemployed or underemployed, 1 million individuals work the jobs in the United States. On top of all the challenges Americans face today, it is unacceptable that Americans and legal workers have to compete with illegal immigrants for every job.

Fortunately, there is a tool available to preserve jobs for legal workers: E-Verify. But the program is voluntary. Congress has the responsibility to expand E-Verify — including making it mandatory — so more job opportunities are made available to unemployed Americans.

Created under the Illegal Immigration Reform and Empowerment Act of 2009, E-Verify is a web-based system that allows employers to instantaneously verify the work eligibility of newly hired employees. The Social Security numbers and other identifying numbers of new hires are checked against Social Security Administration and Department of Homeland Security records to weed out fraudulent numbers and help ensure that new hires are legally authorized to work in the United States.

The program quickly captures 96.5% of work-eligible employees. Even though E-Verify is not mandatory, many employers are willingly using the program. More than 236,000 American employers currently use it, and an average of 1,800 new businesses sign up each week.

Part of the reason for E-Verify's success is that participating employers are happy with the results. Outside evaluations have found that the vast majority of employers using E-Verify believe it to be an effective and useful tool for checking the legal status of their employees. In fact, after being subjected to several investigations and extensive fact-finding, a 9 a.m. Chicago now uses E-Verify at all of its restaurants nationwide to help ensure that it stays legal workers.

E-Verify has proved to be much more reliable than the current patchwork, error-prone E-S system. Under the E-S system, the employer only has to attest that an identification document "seems" okay, or signs on its face to be "true." The problems in that the documents are provided by the employer can be obtained through a tool that undermined the E-S system.

In addition, when the National Federation for Public Employment tested its members, 70% said it would be minimal or no burden if there was one telephone number and a single Internet website where you could check a new employee's eligibility to work. Something like a merchant's card to check the validity of a credit card. "This describes E-Verify."

And E-Verify recently received an exceptionally high overall customer satisfaction score — 82 out of 100 on the American Customer Satisfaction Index scale. The government's overall satisfaction score is only 59.

With this sort of track record, it is no surprise that 80% of 28 city voters responding to a recent Ballot measure poll thought businesses should be required to use E-Verify.

Last year, the U.S. Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services implemented a pilot project tool as part of E-Verify. This allows an employer to view a picture of the employee — from a green card, an employment authorization document or a passport — to determine that the employee is in fact the person to whom that Social Security number or alien identification number was issued.

The Department of Homeland Security also recently announced the rollout of the E-Verify self-check system. This will allow employers to check their own employment status and resolve immigration problems before applying for a passport. Although E-Verify self-check is available only to a handful of states, it is expected to expand to other states within a year.

E-Verify is a successful tool for employers looking to hire a legal workforce. It also helps reduce the jobs misgiven that encourages illegal immigration. In fact, since the implementation of Arizona state legislation requiring the use of E-Verify, the state has seen a 9% decrease in its illegal immigrant population, according to the Public Policy Institute of California.

Thank you, the House Judiciary Committee, for focused on making E-Verify mandatory.

It is crucial that we promote policies that help grow our economy and increase job opportunities for Americans and legal immigrants. This includes building on the successes of the E-Verify program and making it mandatory through a stretched phase-in for all employers. Of course, mandatory E-Verify should be coupled with a "safe harbor" for employers who use the program correctly and, through no fault of theirs, receive an incorrect eligibility confirmation.

As long as opportunities for employment exist, the incentive to hire an illegal worker is high. If we are to create a safe and confident and efforts to stop the inflow of illegal workers, we must ensure that it is not a viable option.

Elton Gallegly (R-Texas) is the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and Rep. Elton Gallegly (R-El Paso) is chairman of the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.
