This 24-hour basic de-escalation training is being offered, June 7-9, 2022 in Bradenton, Florida. Everything presented in this course is directly applicable to your job as a law enforcement officer. This is the training agencies need, officers want, and communities deserve! Three critical mistakes made by officers are causing an alarming increase in lawsuits against officers and agencies nationwide. These mistakes are also costing officers their careers and spawning community unrest. Research shows that officer-induced escalation during police-citizen contacts is the primary cause of eroding support for law enforcement, regardless of rank and years of service. That’s why this non-escalation training is imperative for officer success in today’s volatile environment.

This training is led by Don McCrea of Premier Police Training. He is a passionate and highly rated instructor who is a veteran law enforcement officer.

Several years ago, research was initiated to investigate the growing negative issues surrounding the law enforcement profession. Confident Non-Escalation: This is Where De-Escalation Training Begins was born from this research. This training course has the potential to significantly reduce the incidence of lawsuits filed against officers and agencies. This training course also has the potential for saving the careers of officers and significantly improving police-community relationships.

In the end, when officers confidently apply and articulate their lawful authority throughout every step of police-citizen encounters from lawful stop to lawful conclusion, everybody wins, particularly our communities.
